Elise Marosi hasn't much of a room at 85 West Forty-second Street, where she has put out a little sign saying she is a dressmaker. All there is in her room up near the roof is a piece of a sewing machine and a cot. But she had several real detectives busy yesterday looking for a genuine Nicolo Amati violin, an instrument worth a small fortune, of which she said she was the owner.

She told a romantic story of how she gained possession of the old violin, how she lost it, and how she knew that it was in a Union Square shop. Then she took Detective Fitzpatrick there yesterday afternoon and pointed out as hers an instrument which was recently a possession of Nicholas Longworth, the President's son-in-law, and before him was owned by Augustus Thomas, the playwright.

"I bought an old violin in Philadelphia eight years ago," Elise Marosi told the police, "and I found out it was a fine instrument. I could not play myself, but I started to learn. I paid $45 for the violin. I was then a servant for a family in West Forty-eighth Street. I left the family several weeks ago, and I left my violin with that family because the girl there played the violin.

"Now they have sent me back a violin which is a substitute. I didn't notice it at first, but after a little while I saw that the new instrument wasn't mine. It didn't have a hundred little marks I knew of. So I lay quiet and waited. Then I went to this shop, where I knew famous violins are sold. I asked to look over those for sale. There I saw my Amati, and I want it back."

When Detective Fitzpatrick took the woman to the shop she first picked out the Longworth violin. Then she looked it over again and was doubtful. She found a patch on the back, whereupon she was sure it wasn't her violin. Later she declared that the instrument had been disguised, but that she knew it was hers.

She told a clerk in the shop that the family with which she had left her Amati was named Stillman and lived at 170 West Forty-eighth Street. The dealer had received no commission from a family of that name or from any one at that number. There isn't any such number.

Then Elise Marosi talked with reporters and became incautious. In answer to a lot of questions as to why she, a servant, who couldn't even play a violin, should pay $45 for an old instrument she couldn't have known anything about, she answered:

"Oh, let me alone. I don't want to talk about this any more. I have been very much annoyed to-day. Wait a week or so until I get out my hair restorer and then write me up."

LIMITED MINDREADING.

Markowitz, Put to the Test in Court, Couldn't Convict His Boarder.

Max Markowitz is a professional mindreader. He has a sign saying so in front of the house at 201 Stanton Street, where he lives with his wife Rosa and Louis Einhorn, the shirt ironer, for boarder. Two weeks ago his $45 gold watch disappeared.

That night his wife told him she was sure she had seen the boarder "put something that looked yellow in his pocket the night before." And that was the best evidence he and his wife could bring against Einhorn when the shirt ironer was put on trial before Recorder Goff in General Sessions yesterday.

"But you are a mindreader," said Assistant District Attorney Garvan to Markowitz on the witness stand. "Why don't you read Einhorn's mind and see if he has your watch?"

"But your sign says that you can recover stolen property," insisted the prosecuting attorney. "Physician, heal thyself."

Markowitz bowed his head into his hand and took a long try at thought concentration. Everybody in the room, including the twelve men in the box, watched him eagerly. At last he raised his head again and said in a hopeless tone:

"It's no use—I can't tell anything about that man's mind at all. But I am sure he has the watch."

It took the jury ten minutes to bring in a verdict of acquittal.

MANN EXAMINED ON OLD DEBT.

Col. William d'Alton Mann of Town Topics was examined in supplementary proceedings behind closed doors in a jury-room of the City Court yesterday. The judgment was entered on Jan. 20, 1897, by George J. Cox, assignee of Joseph and Simon Franko, jewelers, who obtained the original judgment, for $1,288 and costs. It is alleged that Col. Mann gave his note for some jewelry and failed to meet it when it became due.

The lawyers on both sides refused yesterday to disclose anything that took place at the examination. The only thing that leaked out was that Col. Mann had declared that he owned nothing, and that his only source of income was his salary from Town Topics.

The examination was adjourned.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

At the wedding on Monday of Miss Ruth A. Badgley to Dr. William K. Shepard, a member of the Faculty of the Sheffield Scientific School, Dr. Shepard's best man will be Newell Bradley of Philadelphia and his ushers are to be Lee Wilcox of Waterbury, Conn.; Frank Atwater Ward and Harold B. Colton of New York, Edward F. Parmlee, John F. Griesbach, and Henry Snell of New Haven. Miss Daisy Stedman, as already mentioned, is to be the maid of honor and only attendant of the bride. The ceremony will take place at 4 o'clock on April 16 in the Church of the Heavenly Rest, and will be followed by a very small reception for relatives and intimate friends only at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard G. Badgley, 112 West Seventy-second Street.

William J. Tingue, Jr., will give his bachelor dinner on May 1. His marriage to Miss Lilian Morrison will take place on May 3.

⁂

The annual parade of the Ladies' Four-in-Hand Club is to take place on Wednesday, May 2. None of the details have yet been arranged, nor is it yet known how many coaches will be in line.

⁂

Mrs. William Hazard Field, Miss Mary Field, and Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Osgood Field returned to town Tuesday after a month's stay at the Chatworth Clubhouse, at Chatsworth, N. J.

⁂

The Easter dance of the Neighborhood Cotillions at Dodworth's on Thursday, April 19, is to be led by George Bodman, dancing with Miss Elizabeth Hannah.

⁂

Some days ago the news, received by cable, of the marriage of Dr. George Montgomery Tuttle of this city to Mrs. Kirkbride, was published in this paper. Mrs. Tuttle was Mrs. Mabel Holden Kirkbride, the widow of the late Dr. Thomas B. Kirkbride, and lived in Philadelphia. She sailed for Europe several weeks ago with her mother-in-law, Mrs. Thomas S. Kirkbride, and the Misses Elizabeth and Mary Kirkbride. Her engagement to Dr. Tuttle had been announced, but no date had been set for the wedding prior to her sailing. The religious ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Shutter of the Scotch Church of Florence, Italy, and a civil ceremony took place at Palazzo Vecchio.

⁂

Among the persons booked to sail yesterday for Europe were Miss Mary Dodge, a daughter of the late William Earle Dodge, who makes her home in London, and went with her sister, Miss Grace Hoadley Dodge.

⁂

The marriage of Miss Mary Park to Raymond Rodgers Neilson is set for April 21 in Trinity Church, Pittsburg, Penn. Miss Park made her début here in New York, her parents having a house on lower Fifth Avenue for several years. Mr. Neilson is the son of Mrs. Louis Neilson of House-in-the-Woods, Far Rockaway. The engagement was announced some eighteen months ago.

⁂

Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Hurry and the Misses Elizabeth and Dorothy Hurry arrived from abroad yesterday on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse. Other passengers were Dr. Charles McBurney and Mrs. McBurney and Miss Lucy Bainbridge Smith.

MISS TARBELL SEES A REVOLUTION COMING

Trust Corruptionists Responsible, She Tells Barnard Girls.

"WORSE THAN ANY PIRATE"

The Magazine Writer Thus Describes Some of the Insurance Men and Trust Magnates.

Betrayers of public trust, corruptionists, and "worse than any pirate flying the black flags on the high seas," are some of the modern insurance officials and trust magnates, was what Ida M. Tarbell told the Barnard students yesterday afternoon in a lecture on the subject of "Observations on the Ethical and Intellectual Effects of the Modern Trust."

Miss Tarbell said that a more corrupt and irresponsible class than these supposedly representative Americans, who, in reality, she said, are human vultures preying upon the public and ruthlessly betraying public confidence, would be hard to find. In places of prominence, she declared, captains of industry do the vilest acts with equanimity and without a qualm of conscience. In their everincreasing desire for self-aggrandizement, she said, laws are evaded by these "noble Americans," rebates are constantly dealt in, and franchises are dishonestly used and obtained. Public funds put in their hands as trustees were robbed by these individuals, Miss Tarbell said, in order to buy legislation directly or to pay campaign contributions to influence legislation indirectly.

Far from showing sound business sense in doing these things, Miss Tarbell said, these officers showed a puerile lack of judgment. The worm who is bound to turn was disregarded, she told her Barnard audience, and as a result the crafty players were "caught with the goods."

Miss Tarbell said she thought a serious result of modern commercialism is the fact that these participators in the art of high finance lose all sense of humor.

"Why," said Miss Tarbell, "when on a recent investigation one of the witnesses solemnly declared that insurance companies were benevolent, he couldn't see his own joke."

James Hazen Hyde was one of these," she said.

Referring to the speech of "Judge" Andrew Hamilton at Albany, Miss Tarbell said that insurance officials regarded themselves as under a "higher law." This higher law, she added, leads on to cunning and treachery.

"The men who are governed by this law," said Miss Tarbell, "are lawless in essence."

Miss Tarbell said a desire to "square themselves" in the eyes of the public, as well as a desire to do good, was the explanation of the periodic gifts of such magnates to charitable, religious, or educational institutions and societies. This giving in large sums, she said, was of more bad than good in its effects, as the recipients were gagged and bound to be prevented from coming forward and criticising the givers when criticism was necessary. Public opinion was thus checked, she said.

"If I gave a substantial sum to Barnard," said Miss Tarbell, "and held another sum over your head, it would at least be impolitic of you to condemn me."

Secret lawlessness and "high finance," Miss Tarbell said, had a very bad effect on employes, teaching the youth who wishes to rise "the abominable principle that the end justifies the means." Then, said Miss Tarbell, the corruption of the people comes. She then told of a man who was recently indicted for stealing money from a trust. The evidence, she said, was almost conclusive against him, and the case went to the jury in a short time. To the surprise of all he was declared "not guilty," the jury deciding that some trick must have been worked upon him, and "anyway the trusts steal from us."

Because many of the officials of these companies deserve a hard fate and exemplary punishment, Miss Tarbell said, is not proof that all are the same. The argument of some, she said, that all the Senators are corrupt because many of them have been proved to be so is not logical. But, she added, those who so argue are not entirely to be blamed. With corrupt practices being revealed all about them, it is little wonder, the writer said, that the mere connection of an individual with an exposed company should stigmatize him in the public mind as among the number of the corrupt. This state of public opinion is something for which the trusts have only themselves to blame, she added.

Present conditions, Miss Tarbell concluded, may continue for some time, but sooner or later, she said, there would be a revolution, gradual or sudden, maybe, that would awaken to a consciousness of their condition any soulless leaders of high finance.

Dean Laura Drake Gill of Barnard spoke a few moments on the trust problem by way of explanation before introducing Miss Tarbell. During the whole discussion the Barnard girls, in caps and gowns, followed Miss Tarbell closely.

MISS EDNA MAY IN LONDON.

"The Belle of Mayfair" Is Founded on "Romeo and Juliet."

LONDON, April 11.—Miss Edna May had a warm welcome on her reappearance in London at the Vaudeville Theatre to-night, but the honors were shared by Miss May with Curtice Pounds and the composer, Leslie Stuart.

The new play, "The Belle of Mayfair," by Basil Hood and Charles Brookfield, is avowedly based on Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet," though it is not a burlesque of that tragedy. It is a slender affair, its dialogue is weak, and its jokes are dull. The music, however, compensates for the book, is charming, and will carry the play, which was well mounted and handsomely dressed.

Miss May as Julia has rather a serious sentimental part. Both she and Curtice Pounds had great personal successes.

Hippodrome Seal Operated On.

Toby, the oldest seal of Capt. Woodward's trained troupe at the Hippodrome, underwent an operation yesterday morning for cataract. The operation was successful. Toby has passed the good old age of 17, and for the last four years has been totally blind, having cataracts on both eyes. The Hippodrome doctors, W. E. Young and Edward Lee, had long thought of trying an operation on him. So successful was it, according to them, that Toby will be able to eat fish within a few days.

Gen. French's Daughter on the Stage.

One of the Rainy Day Girls in "The Social Whirl," at the Casino Theatre, is Miss Honore French, daughter of the late Gen. French, United States Army. Miss French says she has gone on the stage because of her interest in writing songs, and that she hopes eventually to be able to sing them.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Fritzi Scheff was out of the cast of "Mlle. Modiste" at the Knickerbocker Theatre last evening, and will not resume her part till next Monday night.

Mrs. Fiske and the Manhattan Company will give four matinées at the Manhattan Theatre on the afternoons of April 23, 24, 25, and 26. The programme will include three one-act plays: "Dolce," by John Luther Long, and "A Light from St. Agnes" and "The Eyes of the Heart," both by Mrs. Fiske. These were successfully produced here last season. Mrs. Fiske will appear in the title role of "Dolce."

William Collier and his company leave for San Francisco this afternoon, whence they will sail a week later for Australia. Mr. Collier will open there in "The Dictator."

"The Stolen Story," a modern play of newspaper life, by Jesse Lynch Williams, will be produced at the Tremont Theatre, Boston, on May 6.

Converse and Peters will produce early in the Spring a play by Louis Kaufman Anspacher, entitled "The Embarrassment of Riches." Kathryn Kidder and Bruce McRae will head the cast.

A RED HOT SESSION OF EDUCATION BOARD

Commissioner Stern Denounces the Board of Examiners,

AND MAXWELL DEFENDS THEM

Returning to the Board of Education at its meeting yesterday, after an illness of several weeks, Commissioner Abraham Stern, the majority leader, plunged the session into one of the warmest factional fights in its history. Mr. Stern denounced the Board of Examiners for injustice in rejecting Katherine Callahan's application for a Principal's license, and accused the Board of Superintendents of attempting to coerce the Board of Education in the matter of the retirement of District Supt. McMullin.

City Supt. Maxwell attempted to defend the Board of Examiners and the Board of Superintendents. He was supported by his adherents. The anti-Maxwell Commissioners rallied around Commissioner Stern, and the fight was on in earnest.

It began when Mr. Stern moved that the action of the Board of Examiners in rejecting Miss Callahan's application for a Principal's license be referred to the Special Committee on Examination. After a long discussion, during which there was much excitement, the motion was carried.

Reading from manuscript Mr. Stern declared:

"Miss Callahan is at present in charge of Public School No. 115, a small school of five classrooms in Canarsie. Besides supervising the work, she is required to teach in two classes of different grades owing to the lack of teachers, there being but three, all substitutes, for the five classes. The Board of Examiners rejected her application on the ground of personality despite the fact that she had passed the severe examinations for a Principal's license. The board based its action upon the reports of the two Superintendents, McCabe and Taylor, the former of whom declared that 'under excitement she will at times show a lack of calmness,' which is an absurd statement, and the latter of whom formed no objection to her record, but declared her to be nervous."

After Mr. Stern finished speaking, Supt. Maxwell took the floor for the purpose, he said, "not of opposing Mr. Stern's motion, but to correct a false impression that would be given by Mr. Stern's remarks." He declared that Mr. Stern had made no mention of the fact that the Board of Superintendents had conducted an investigation into Miss Callahan's case, and that he had made no mention of the criticism of Miss Callahan by Principals under whom she had served.

"It is extremely distasteful to me to make any statement against a person in the system," City Supt. Maxwell said, "but I must say every school Principal reported in almost the strongest language he could use against Miss Callahan."

"The reports of the Principals are a cowardly attack upon a person who has no chance to defend herself," exclaimed Mr. Stein, who was on his feet in a moment. "One was made by a principal who had preferred charges against Miss Callahan when she was a teacher in his school, but his charges were dismissed. Upon the cowardly reports of these Principals and the statements of District Superintendents, the Board of Examiners rejected Miss Callahan's application on the ground that she was nervous. Were the conditions under which she worked not enough to make anybody crazy?"

The discussion followed a clash over the retirement of District Superintendent McMullin. Mr. McMullin applied for retirement last year, but his application was laid on the table. On motion of Commissioner Tifft, it was taken off the table, and it was voted to retire Mr. McMullin on Sept. 1, 1906.

"The application was laid on the table because of the manner in which the nomination of his successor was made," Mr. Stern declared. "Before the board had an opportunity to know that there was a vacancy the Board of Superintendents submitted the nomination of Mr. McMullin's successor. This was an attempt upon the part of the Board of Superintendents to coerce this body into the election of this successor. The application was laid upon the table to resent any action on the part of the City Superintendent to aid this coercion."

Supt. Maxwell declared that under the charter the Board of Superintendents is required to make the nominations before the term of office expires. Since the Board of Superintendents did not know when Mr. McMullin's term expired, it made the nomination immediately upon his application for retirement.

"If this is the case, the City Superintendent violated the charter, because he voted against the nomination," retorted Commissioner Stern.

The board elected District Supt. Straubenmuller an Associate Superintendent to fill the vacancy created by the death of A. F. Marble.

THE MAYOR LIKES BINGHAM.

Receives Letters Protesting Against Commissioner's Retirement.

Evidently there were persons in New York who took seriously the rumors that Mayor McClellan had received the resignation of Police Commissioner Bingham, to take effect May 1. When the Mayor reached his office yesterday, he found more than eighty letters and telegrams on his desk, each protesting against Commissioner Bingham's retirement and expressing satisfaction with the manner in which he had conducted his department.

To each of the writers the Mayor dictated replies, in which he said he had no idea that Commissioner Bingham intended to retire, and that he would be very sorry if it were true. The Mayor expressed himself as perfectly satisfied with Gen. Bingham's administration.

FRANCIS P. CHURCH DEAD.

A Keen Controversialist, Who Was Well Known as an Editorial Writer.

Francis Pharcellus Church, for many years a graceful and forcible editorial writer for The Sun, died yesterday at his home, 46 East Thirtieth Street, after an illness of several months.

Mr. Church was born in Rochester, N. Y., on Feb. 22, 1839. He was the son of the Rev. Dr. Pharcellus Church, himself an able writer and controversialist, and a grandson of Willard Church, a soldier of the Revolutionary War, who was a prisoner for eight or nine months on the prison ship Jersey.

Mr. Church was also a lineal descendant of Roger Conant, Governor of the Massachusetts Colony. As a boy he studied in Charles Anthon's Latin School in this city. He was graduated with honors from Columbia College in 1859, and studied in the office of Judge Hooper C. Van Vorst, but put aside the law to take up literary work.

He was the editor of the old Galaxy Magazine, and was associated with his brother, Col. William Conant Church, in the management of The Army and Navy Journal and The Internal Revenue Record. In recent years he had taken no part in the management of these papers, but he remained a Director in the corporation which owns them.

Mr. Church wrote on topics of every kind, but if he had a specialty it was religious controversy.

His wife, who was Elizabeth Wickham of Philadelphia, survives him. They had no children. Mr. Church was a member of the Sons of the Revolution, the National Sculptor Society, and the Century Club.

D. J. HARRINGTON DEAD.

Dennis John Harrington, a character of renown in New York seventeen years ago, died yesterday at his home, 92 Washington Street, Flushing. Born in Ireland about forty-two years ago, he came to this country when a boy and received his education in Toronto. In the furniture business on the upper west side he made a small fortune, but lost it in politics.

As a politician Harrington was the victim of many a practical joke. Judge McMahon, as leader of the Seventeenth Assembly District, knowing Harrington's popularity among the Irishmen of the district, made him an Alderman in 1898; he served until 1900.

The Queen's birthday in 1899 led to his undoing as a politician. A few days before some joker handed him a paper and told him to "introduce it." It was a resolution calling for the raising of flags on all public buildings in honor of the Queen. The Clan-na-Gael and other Irish societies passed resolutions denouncing Harrington. In the Aldermanic Chamber his friend Bridges, in his defense, had this to say:

"There is too many jokes on this floor of this board, and it's time that it came to a stop. The gentleman [Mr. Okie] wants to send me to England, does he?" He then turned to Mr. Okie, and continued: "I want for to know if he's willing to put his hand in his pocket and pay my way."

Before Bridges could frame another sentence Okie said he would pay his fare "there, but not back."

The joke caused so much feeling that Judge McMahon was afraid to renominate Harrington, so the Alderman started a campaign to take the leadership from the Judge. One night he started to speak on the top of a hogshead. In a few minutes his eloquent remarks and violent gesticulations broke in the head of the barrel, which had been loosened to drown his remarks in water below. Harrington's ardor was thoroughly dampened.

Harrington's jovial manner made him many friends.

About two weeks ago he fell and broke his hip. His death was due to this. He was the owner of the Iroquois Hotel, in Flushing.

BALTIMORE, April 11.—The Rev. Joseph T. Smith, D. D., who was recognized as one of the ablest authorities on the doctrines and government of the Presbyterian Church, and whose home was in this city, died to-night at the home of his son, the Rev. J. R. Smith, in Harrisburg, Penn. He had been Moderator of the General Assembly and Chairman of the Committee on Union with the South Presbyterian Church. He was 83 years old.

Mrs. Leslie P. Ward Dead.

Mrs. Minnie P. Ward, wife of Dr. Leslie D. Ward, Vice President of the Prudential Insurance Company, died at her home, 1,038 Broad Street, Newark, N. J., yesterday afternoon. She had been in poor health for two years and only recently returned from a trip to Florida. Her husband and one son, Leslie P. Ward, survive her. Another son, Herbert E. Ward, died a little more than a year ago. Mrs. Ward was the daughter of the late James Perry. She was one of the managers of the Newark Exchange for Women's Work, and Vice President of the Babies' Hospital.

Mrs. A. M. CROOKS, wife of John W. Crooks, Secretary of the Federal Trust Company, is dead at her home, 112 Broad Street, Newark, N. J. Her husband and one child survive her.

MILTON WELLS died at Footville, Wis., yesterday. He was Colonel of the Fifteenth West Virginia Regiment during the civil war. He was a prominent Mason, and was a pastor of the Methodist Church.

Mrs. HEDWIG C. SCHOLER, wife of Dr. Gustav Scholer of 311 West Forty-Eighth Street, died on Monday at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, after an operation performed on Saturday. Mrs. Scholer, who was a Miss Schramm, was interested in charitable work, and was a member of several benevolent societies. Funeral services were held last evening at Dr. Scholer's residence. Singers from the Arion and Turnverein Societies took part.

Mrs. SARAH J. FLANAGAN, widow of James Flanagan of the firm of Flanagan, Nay & Co., brewers, died of apoplexy on Tuesday at her apartments in the Hotel Marie Antoinette, Broadway and Sixty-sixth Street, after an illness of two months. She leaves one son, De Witt C. Flanagan, who was a member of the Fifty-seventh Congress from New Jersey, and one daughter, Mrs. J. Porter Shannon. Another son, the late Capt. William L. Flanagan, was a member of Gov. Roosevelt's staff.

LOUIS BROWN, an architect living at 140 Lexington Avenue, with offices at 63 William Street, died yesterday in the Presbyterian Hospital of pneumonia. He was born in this city forty-three years ago, and was the son of Edward E. Brown, formerly of Dalton, Mass. He was the architect of the new clubhouse for the Alpha Delta Phi Club of New York City, and was a member of the Architectural League, Society of the War of 1812, Society of the Colonial Wars, Sons of the Revolution, Players Club, and Alpha Delta Phi. Mr. Brown's student career was passed in the office of the late Richard M. Hunt and McKim, Mead & White. For the last five years he had been associated with George C. Palmer and Henry F. Hornbostel. He was unmarried.

THE SPOILERS

By Rex E. Beach

Novels are like men: strong personalities, virile emotions, energy and resource forge to the front and are quick to catch the public eye. This same magnetic force in THE SPOILERS—the work of a new writer—has immediately caught the reading world in its grip. They can't let go.

Why?

It is a story of a strong man, by a strong man, for strong and grown-up men to read. It tells a vigorous tale of a land where the conventions of society have no place. It is big with adventure, passion, love, strife—the primal emotions at white heat.

The key-note of the story is "There's never a law of God or man runs North of Fifty-three." At stake are woman's love, the wealth of the gold-ribbed hills, and the mastery of all for the man who has strength to seize and hold it.

Novels like THE SPOILERS are read at a sitting. Once the story is begun—!

WOMEN SELECT LINKS.

Eastern Championship to be Played at Nassau in June.

The first championship tournament of the recently organized Women's Eastern Golf Association will be played on the links of the Nassau Country Club near Glen Cove, L. I., from June 12 to 15. That course was selected at a meeting of the Executive Committee held in this city yesterday. The first two days will be devoted to the tri-city team match, Boston and Philadelphia meeting on the first day and the winners playing the New York women on the second day. The last two days of the tournament will be devoted to the championship, and it was decided to hold the contest entirely by medal play at 36 holes, 18 holes being played each day. Announcement was made that a golfer, who declined to have his name made public, had offered a perpetual challenge trophy to be held by the club of which the winner of the championship is a member. The Nassau Country Club also tendered the offer of a cup to be played for under any conditions that the women might see fit. It will probably be offered for a special handicap event.

Mrs. Caleb F. Fox of the Huntington Valley Country Club, near Philadelphia, announced that her club will hold an invitation tournament for women during the week following the Eastern championship. The Garden City Golf Club has offered the use of its links on the second Monday in each month to the members of the Metropolitan Women's Association.

It was voted to issue a challenge to the women of the Western Golf Association for a team match to be held during the National women's championship in Philadelphia in October.

PATROL JUDGES FOR RACES.

Distance Flag Will Be Abolished for Matinee Speedway Contests.

The distance flag for Speedway brushes will be abolished. This was decided last night at the weekly meeting of the Road Drivers' Association at the Hotel Cadillac. This point has caused much controversy among the amateur drivers. In place of the distance flag patrol judges will be located at the quarter-mile pole, and a special set of rules will be drawn up and adopted, making the duties of the starter and judge at the finish mandatory instead of optional.

An appeal will be made to Commissioner Bingham to restore the police squad on Seventh Avenue. Formerly nine officers were used for the protection of the drivers, but by degrees this number has been reduced to two, and these will be taken away next week.

Chairman Ely of the Parade and Horse Show Committee presented a report showing that the judges and other officials for the annual parade on Saturday, May 5, had been named, and the entries already received indicated a much larger turn out of horsemen this year than last. To add to the effectiveness of the parade the members of the Board of Directors and Executive Committee will ride in one-man wagons with single horses instead of teams.

POLO AT VAN CORTLANDT.

Squadron A Anxious to Meet West Point Cadets and College Teams.

Polo practice at Van Cortlandt Park will begin next week by the Squadron A players and plans are being made by the committee to hold several inter-club matches in May. The fields are being rolled this week, but for the present only the second and third fields will be used, the big tournament field being left for future use when the opening contests are arranged.

Invitations to meet the squadron team are now being extended to college players, West Point cadets, and a number of clubs, including New Haven, Albany, Rumford of Providence, Westchester, and Essex County. The squadron's open tournament will not be held until Fall, but it is expected that the National championship will be awarded to the squadron, and in that case it will be played at Van Cortlandt Park. The event will be held in June, as there is a strong disposition among polo players to hold the annual competition at that time, when the teams are usually in better trim than later in the season.

The annual meeting at which the championship and other tournament awards will be made will be held next Tuesday night at the Metropolitan Club. Several changes may be made in the method of allotting tournaments so as to reduce the unwieldy number of club events.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

HARRIS SPEISHANDLER.—Schedules in bankruptcy of Harris Speishandler, a clothing dealer, of 256 Bowery, show liabilities of $5,100, and assets, $1,210.

JUNIOR A. STRAUSSMAN.—Junior A. Straussman, a clerk, of 15 West 103d Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $1,789, and no assets.

PHARMACISTS' MANUFACTURING COMPANY.—Judge Newburger of the Supreme Court has appointed Milton Hart receiver for the Pharmacists' Manufacturing Company, at 58 Warren Street, on the application of Frank M. Prindle & Co., judgment creditors, for $762.

WILLIAM C. POWELL.—Deputy Sheriff Murray has received two executions and an attachment against William C. Powell, steam fitter, of 123 Liberty Street, and has levied on some materials used in the business. The attachment is in favor of the H. W. Johns-Manville Company.

STANDARD ELECTRICAL SUPPLY COMPANY.—Schedules in bankruptcy of the Standard Electrical Supply Company of 37 Warren Street show liabilities of $41,542, and nominal assets $36,543. There are 140 creditors, among them being the Mechanics' National Bank, $16,504; General Electric Company, $13,089; J. A. Roebling's Sons, $2,389, and Sprague Electric Company, $2,200.

HERMAN H. SAMUELS.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Herman H. Samuels, manufacturer of women's hats at 4 East Twenty-second Street, by Sommerich, Kallscher & Loewith, $117; Spiegelberg & Co., $220, and Boessneck, Broesel & Co., $191. Judge Holt of the United States District Court appointed James Ridgway receiver of the assets, fixing his bond at $2,000. The liabilities are $10,000 and assets $4,100.

RETAIL CIGAR AND TOBACCO DEALERS' ASSOCIATION.—The Retail Cigar and Tobacco Dealers' Association of New York, of 705 Third Avenue, against which a petition in bankruptcy was filed on Feb. 19, has made an offer to compromise with the creditors at 30 cents on the dollar, which many of them have accepted. At a meeting of creditors held at the office of Nathaniel A. Prentiss, referee in bankruptcy, at 120 Broadway, William E. Lockwood was elected Trustee, and his bond was fixed at $15,000. The liabilities are $54,371, and assets $21,688.

Elegance and artistic character are everywhere. Nothing has been omitted that could conduce to the comfort and content of the visitor.
Ladies' Field.

An ideal home for twentieth century London—Queen.

The great pile of buildings included in this latest addition to the architectural sites of London forms a combination of luxury and beauty which cannot be surpassed in the wide world. The New Savoy is a vast palace of a thousand splendours, of a thousand surprising and delightful innovations. Nothing that could contribute to the comfort, the smoothness, and the joy of life is wanting which the inventive genius of America and Europe could supply, or that the taste and skill of the world's schools of art in all its branches could furnish. The place is, in its way, a very triumph of genius. Its match is not to be found in London, nor in Paris, nor, indeed, in any capital of this little planet. To do it justice in a necessarily brief article is impossible. Having rambled through its glorious salons and galleries, and ante-chambers, up and down marble staircases of noble breadth, beneath panelled ceilings, adorned in relief with exquisite golden tracery, one feels that all this royal magnificence, this opulent beauty, might well inspire a volume which should be bound in white satin and gold.—Western Mail.

Jersey Service Corporation Notes.

The Public Service Corporation of New Jersey has sent circular letters to the stockholders offering them subscriptions to the issue of $6,250,000 convertible gold notes authorized at the annual meeting on Thursday. The notes, which are of $1,000 each, will be dated May 1, and will bear 5 per cent. interest. They will become convertible into stock at the option of the holder May 1, 1909.

Bill to Stop Stock Watering Reported.

ALBANY, April 11.—The Merritt bill, which compels railroad companies to apply to the State Railroad Commission for permission to issue stock, was reported out to-day. This measure was introduced in the belief that watering of stock would be prevented to some extent and also that it would put up to the commission to decide whether mergers similar to the Ryan-Belmont combination shall be effected.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

A sharp break in call money rates and engagements of $6,100,000 gold for import, two developments closely related, of course, sufficed to work a decided change in sentiment in Wall Street yesterday. The stock market, which had been inactive and uncertain in the early hours of the day, grew strong as money fell, and upon the announcement of the heavy gold engagements moved up with much rapidity to the close of the day, which found prices at practically the high point, gains of from 1 to 3 points being fairly numerous. This sharp recovery from the depression in which Wall Street has been plunged for as many days as money has ruled around 20 per cent., was not wholly due to any widespread belief that money will at once fall to permanently low rates; the greater part of the market's advance was due to hasty covering of outstanding short contracts. There was evidence of this class of buying in Union Pacific, Amalgamated Copper, and Reading, which were once again conspicuous features of the day's business, as well as in the Steel shares, the Hill shares, and elsewhere through the list. There were few signs of any extensive commission house buying, for the unsettling effects of recent money rates have been too general to provoke purchases of stocks until it is clear that such conditions will not be repeated in the immediate future.

There is little question, nevertheless, that substantial relief has been afforded to the money market as a result of yesterday's developments. In addition to the $6,100,000 gold secured in London and on the Continent there has been received in this city some $500,000 gold from Canada, and the outlook for further importations is not unfavorable, since exchange rates, in spite of their sensational rally late yesterday afternoon, are still so near the import point that gold coming to London from South Africa may be secured. The low price for demand sterling yesterday was $4.8200, a rate reached only four times in the last twelve years, but at the close sterling had recovered sharply to $4.8410. Additional relief to the money market is promised through the medium of the heavy pension payments now under way, these having resulted yesterday in a loss of $1,448,635 by the Sub-Treasury to the Clearing House banks in the transactions between these institutions. Pension payments will undoubtedly continue heavy, and thus make for greater ease in money. London was again a substantial purchaser of stocks here, but in the London market itself American issues alone were strong. The Paris and Berlin markets were inactive. Developments unconnected with the money market were unimportant, although interest attached to the monthly pig iron statistics, which show that the month of March was a record-breaker in the matter of production of iron, the output amounting to 2,165,652 gross tons, compared with 2,068,893 tons in January, the previous record month. The most encouraging feature of this situation is found in the fact that, in spite of the enormous production, consumption has been on such a scale that stocks of metal held by steel companies generally are down to lowest figures.

RUSSIAN BUDGET SHOWS WHY PEOPLE ARE POOR

REASONS FOR GREAT DEFICIT

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Correspondence.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 22.—It is said that when the imperial order was given to publish the first Russian budget the higher officials at the Ministry of Finance promptly handed in their resignations, declaring that such a step would infallibly precipitate a revolution.

This may be only one of the many legends to which the bureaucratic administration of the country has given rise. It aptly illustrates, however, the very natural terror inspired in the minds of subordinate officials by the prospect of revealing to the nation the enormous outlay of public money for governmental purposes and the ridiculous smallness of the expenditure on items of popular requirement, such as education.

The Russian budget, despite its reticences and equivocation, has no doubt contributed more than anything else to stimulate the revolutionary cause. Year by year it has increased in bulk; in 1893 the actual expenditure amounted to little over £100,000,000; in 1903 it had exactly doubled, and the estimates for 1906 provide for a total outlay of £265,712,000, of which only £4,665,000 is set apart for public education.

War expenditure, strictly speaking, does not figure in these totals, with the exception of about £43,000,000, which is included in this year's estimates.

Such a remarkable growth of public expenditure should imply some compensatory justification in the increase of national prosperity. Yet the contrary is to be noticed. Year by year the peasants, who constitute four-fifths of the population, have grown poorer and poorer.

The cause of this lamentable discrepancy between the redundancy of public expenditure and the progressive impoverishment of the nation at large must be sought in the fundamental principles of bureaucratic finance as formulated in my preceding letter, principles which, despite the reputed excellence of the machinery of financial administration, carry in themselves the seeds of future cataclysm.

Whence does the Government derive the enormous sum of £213,000,000 to be expended this year, exclusive of payments on account of the war? Almost half the amount is to be provided by the spirit monopoly (£60,150,000) and State railways, (£50,250,000;) Customs dues are expected to yield £22,580,000, direct taxation £15,996,000, (including increased taxes on commerce and industry;) indirect taxation £44,965,000. Land redemption payments are reduced from £8,085,000 to £3,710,000.

The outlay on railways, however, reduces the net profits under that head to £1,971,000, and the cost of working the spirit monopoly leaves a net profit of £41,699,000. It will thus be seen that over £65,000,000 figure in the budget as the working expenses of the State in the dual capacities of liquor producer and railway owner. Of the remaining £148,000,000, moret than half is swallowed up by the service of the State debt (£35,421,000) and the War Office, (£39,667,000.)

The Ministry of Finance, (£18,000,000, exclusive of working expenses for the spirit monopoly;) the Ministry of the Interior, (£13,886,000,) and the Ministry of Marine, (£11,014,000, a reduction of only £1,331,000;) absorb about £43,000,000; of the remaining £30,000,000 the bulk is about equally divided between the Holy Synod (£3,081,000,) the Department of Agriculture (£3,812,000,) the newly created Ministry of Commerce and Industry (£3,983,000,) Education (£4,665,000,) and Justice (£5,510,000.)

It is easy to tell from this summary how ridiculously small is the proportion of public expenditure on public needs. The education grant this year has been increased by a paltry £114,000, and the estimates of the Department of Agriculture have been actually reduced by £1,190,000, (almost as much as those of the navy, which has practically gone out of existence,) while those of the Interior have been increased by £2,400,000 for strengthening the police force. Famine relief obtains only £3,200,000, instead of the £20,000,000 wanted.

The figures above quoted suffice to account for the lamentable spread of poverty among the Russian people, and give an eloquent testimony to the correctness of the views propounded by critics of the Russian financial system, in contending that it is directed chiefly to the monopolization of revenue, and the distribution of expenditure for the Government's own purposes without proper regard for the interests of the people.

If, instead of spending nearly £14,000,000 in 1893 on the establishment of the spirit monopoly and ten times that amount on the building of railways in Siberia and Manchuria, the Government had devoted these vast sums to the education of the masses and the betterment of agriculture, Russia would not now have to face an appalling agrarian crisis and the spectre of revolution.

The expenditure on the war, which amounted on Jan. 1, 1905, to nearly £180,000,000, calls for provision of another £43,000,000 in this year's budget, making a total of over £220,000,000. The war has, however, cost Russia about half as much again by unremunerative utilization of the Siberian Railway and the loss of the Manchurian line. If, in addition to this, the loss to the country resulting from paralysis of trade by the monopolization of the Siberian Railway for military purposes be taken into account, the actual cost of the war will be enormously increased.

In addition to the £220,000,000 devoted to war purposes, Russia has had to provide for other extraordinary expenditure during the past two years of about £30,000,000, making a grand total of £250,000,000, which had to be met by means of loans and out of the free Treasury balances.

Russia had in 1904 and 1905 borrowed £67,000,000 abroad, £40,000,000 at home, and had raised £15,000,000 on interest-bearing bank notes, or altogether £122,000,000. To this amount must be added £52,000,000 derived from the free balance in the Treasury at the beginning of 1904, and from the surplus on that year's budget. Thus a sum of £76,000,000 (£250,000,000, less £174,000,000) remains unprovided for.

But this does not exhaust the Government's liabilities for the present year. It will be remembered that in the Spring of 1905 Russia obtained a sum of £15,000,000 in Berlin on short term Treasury bonds redeemable within less than a year. It is thus evident that instead of £76,000,000 she must find £91,000,000, and to this sum must be added the £10,000,000 recently obtained in Paris under similar conditions of repayment to the above-mentioned Berlin loan.

To sum up then, it is clear that the Russian Government must find the wherewithal this year to meet the enormous liability of over £100,000,000, or suffer the consequences.

The public debt of Russia now amounts to over £830,000,000, bearing interest of about £36,000,000, which almost equals her trade balance.

In September last the gold in the Imperial Bank and Treasury at home and abroad amounted to £142,000,000 and the notes in circulation to £109,900,000. At the beginning of the present year the figures were respectively £110,000,000 and £128,000,000, and on Feb. 5, 1906, £107,000,000 and £124,000,000.

The bank had thus lost £35,000,000 in gold and increased its fiduciary circulation by £15,000,000. The latter is now steadily diminishing, a fact which gives rise to hopes of a return to less abnormal conditions, but this is scarcely justified in view of the persistent depletion of the gold reserve by consignments abroad for the service of the debt and for other demands connected with State banking operations.

The suppression of the Moscow uprising has led people to return deposits, which accounts for much of the reflux of paper. There is, however, another danger ahead. It is estimated that something like £40,000,000 of notes went to Manchuria for war expenditure. The Chinese readily accepted paper rubles, which they could exchange for bar silver, but a large proportion of these notes remained in their hands. They must in the natural course find their way back, and will to a large extent have to be redeemed in gold.

The prospect of this further drain inspires the greatest misgivings. Russian financiers are beginning to question the wisdom of exposing the gold reserve to depletion. A future letter will deal at greater length with this and kindred questions.

BIG EXCHANGE TO STAY OPEN.

Governors Refuse the Petition to Close on Good Friday.

Thousands of Wall Street workers gave vent to angry exclamations yesterday when they heard that the Stock Exchange, contrary to custom, would be open on Good Friday. The Governing Committee met yesterday and decided to refuse the petition by which members of the Exchange sought to get an extra holiday. The only Good Friday in recent years which has not been a day of rest for brokers was in 1898; then the Spanish war was given as the reason; now it is "high money."

Last year the Exchange was closed not only on Good Friday, but also on Saturday, so that there was no business between Thursday and Monday. The thought of so long a period of idleness disturbed the speculators, and the call money rate went up from 3 to 7 per cent. Prices broke sharply. The state of the money market this year has been even more calculated to produce uneasiness, for money was higher this month than in any April since 1873. The fall in the money rate toward the close of the market yesterday, though, brought to some the hope that the Governors would act favorably on the petition.

Recently the demand for holidays on the Exchange has decreased, and the unlooked-for condition of the money market was enough to settle the Good Friday question this year.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call on Stock Exchange collateral loaned at 2@19 per cent., with the last loans at 2 per cent. Most of the day's business was done at 17 per cent.

Time money, 6 per cent. for thirty, sixty, and ninety days, and 1½@6 per cent. for four, five, and six months.

Mercantile paper rates, 5½@6 per cent. for sixty to ninety days' indorsed bills receivable, 5½@6 per cent. for choice four to six months' single names, and 6 per cent. for others.

Clearing House statement: Exchanges, $401,246,894; balances, $13,663,242. Treasury debit balance was $1,448,635. The local banks have lost since Friday, $1,969,000, against a loss in the same time last week of $3,644,000.

Sterling exchange moved erratically. Nominal rates were $4.81½ for sixty days and $4.84½ for demand. Early in the day actual business was done at $4.8290 for demand bills, a drop of 60 points, but a sharp recovery of 150 points occurred later to $4.8440. At the close the quotation was $4.8410. Sixty days' bills were quoted at $4.8060, and cables at $4.8380. Commercial bills were $4.79⅞@$4.80⅛.

Continental exchange was quoted: Francs, 5.21⅞ and 5.19⅜; reichsmarks, 94⅝ and 94 9-16@94⅝; guilders, 39 13-16 and 39⅞.

Exchange on New York at domestic centres: Boston—15c premium. Chicago—20c premium. New Orleans—Commercial, $1 discount; bank, $1 premium. Savannah—Buying, 50c discount; selling, 75c premium. San Francisco—Sight, par; telegraphic, 2½c. Cincinnati—Par. St. Louis—10@25c premium. Charleston—Buying, par; selling, 1-10 premium.

BULLION AND MINING.

Bar silver was quoted in London at 29⅝d per ounce and in New York at 64⅛c per ounce. Mexican dollars were 49⅝c.

On the Consolidated Exchange 200 shares of Alice sold at 2.75, 2,200 Comstock at .22@.23, 500 Chollar at .22@.21, 20 Daly at 1.45, 500 El Paso at .57, 500 Gold Dollar at .08, 300 Gould & Curry at .30, 100 Hale & Norcross at 1.15, 500 Jim Butler at 1.35, 500 Lone Star at .14, 10 Ontario at 2.75, 500 Original Bull Frog at .24, 500 Silver Pick at .26, 300 Union Consolidated at .54, 500 Work at .10½.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, April 11.—Money was in increased Stock Exchange and holiday demand to-day and supplies were fairly abundant. Discounts were firm, owing to fears of further gold exports to America, France, and Japan. The fall in New York and the weakness in Continental exchanges were regarded nervously.

Prices on the Stock Exchange were distinctly firm, notwithstanding the fact that it was pay day and that many operators were away for the holidays. Consols hardened on cheap money. Home rails improved on the prospect of fine weather and holiday earnings.

Americans opened dull, but recovered to above parity on good New York support. Union Pacific was the feature. Southern Pacific, Erie, and United States Steel were in fair demand. Prices eased during the last hour, but closed with an improvement. Grand Trunk was firm on the traffic increase.

Kaffirs were harder on the record output of the Transvaal gold mines, but closed easier.

Japanese imperial 6s of 1904 were quoted at 101⅝.

Gold bars, 78s. American eagles, 76s. 7d. Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 15.15; Lisbon, 3.75.

American eagles were bought heavily at the Bank of England to-day for American account. The brokers estimate that the purchases totaled $5,000,000.

As the Bank of England holds all the available eagles, it was able to demand and obtain a high price, 76s. 8d., or 1d. over the market price.

Bullion amounting to $2,260,000 was taken out of the Bank of England to-day and shipped to the United States on the Kaiser Wilhelm II., which sailed to-day from Southampton.

LONDON CLOSING QUOTATIONS.

THE UNION PACIFIC SURPLUS.

J. M. Levy Has Not Decided When to Sue for Its Distribution.

Jefferson M. Levy, who returned to his office yesterday after an absence of several months in London, said he had not yet decided definitely when he would bring his proposed suit against the Union Pacific to compel it to distribute a large part of its surplus.

He says that the stockholders are entitled to the company's earnings, and that they have been getting only a small part of them.

Mr. Levy returned to this country as enthusiastic as ever in regard to the outlook for American securities. He expressed the opinion that European capital would continue to seek investment in this country on a very large scale.

IDEAS FOR CURRENCY REFORM

The Special Committee on Currency Reform, appointed recently by the Chamber of Commerce, of which Frank A. Vanderlip, Vice President of the National City Bank, is Vice Chairman and the active head, has taken steps to secure from bankers throughout the country suggestions on the currency question.

The committee has prepared a circular embodying a number of questions which will be sent to bankers. The purpose of the queries is to bring before the committee the views of those who have taken interest in currency reform and whose ideas may prove of assistance to the committee in framing its report on the matter.

SUED ON EQUIPMENT NOTES.

Kleybolte & Co. Seek to Recover from the Hamilton & Dayton Road.

Rudolph Kleybolte & Co., it was made known yesterday, have filed two suits in the Superior Court at Cincinnati against the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railway to compel the payment of two notes given to Kleybolte & Co. by the railway company, amounting to about $40,000. The notes were given in part payment for equipment, against which trust obligations were issued by the road.

The holders of the bonds of the Toledo Railway & Terminal Company are still awaiting an offer from the Morgan interests which may obviate the necessity of the bondholders bringing foreclosure proceedings. It is understood that plans for the filing of foreclosure suits have been completed and will be put in effect with little delay should the present negotiations fail.

Speyers Buy Mexican National Bonds.

Speyer & Co. have purchased $3,000,000 of the prior lien 4½ per cent. bonds of the National Railroad Company of Mexico. With the sale of these bonds the National Railroad of Mexico has disposed of all that can be issued under the prior lien mortgage. The proceeds will be applied toward reimbursing the company for the cost of the Hidalgo & Northeastern Railroad, which it recently acquired.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Building the stock market on gold to arrive from the other side eight or nine days hence may seem in the eyes of the inexpert to partake somewhat of the nature of "absent treatment," but it is not entirely so, perhaps. It has long been contended that a bank importing gold has a right to count the gold among its reserves as soon as its title to the metal has been established, which means that a bank which secured title to gold in London yesterday could have immediately loaned against it in the stock market here. Importing banks formally deny that they do this, holding at the same time that they have a right to do it. In the case of a private banking house, of course, it is different. The bulk of the gold now coming was engaged by the National City Bank, which has superior facilities for conducting such operations and also for lending against the gold at once in case it wishes to do so. The greater freedom with which bank money was offered to Stock Exchange borrowers yesterday led naturally to the conclusion that the gold engaged on the other side for import was being used as a basis of fresh credit.

Officials of some of the larger Wall Street banks have sharply criticised certain trust companies for withdrawing money very heavily from the banks in the last few days and then refusing, in some cases, to lend it as freely in the market as they might have done. In this way, it is said, a good deal of money was made inaccessible to Stock Exchange borrowers. There is knowledge of at least one case in which a trust company withdrew a large amount of money from the banks and loaned only a part of it back to the Street.

It is evident that the St. Paul's extension to the Pacific Coast will be antagonistic to the Hill lines rather than to the Union Pacific. This, of course, might reasonably have been assumed from the beginning. The extent to which a certain group of capitalists is interested both in St. Paul and Union Pacific would cause things to work out in that way. Mr. Hill has said that there will be business enough for everybody, which, of course, there will be, in time, but until enough new business to go around has been developed by the railroads, that which already exists will have to be divided. It is predicted by the more experienced men of Wall Street that greater attention will be paid anon to competitive railroad building in the West. Presently, too, the wisdom of the Union Pacific management in refusing to give away its treasury assets, as the speculative bull element in the stock has demanded, will doubtless be apparent.

⁂

About midday, before money rates had begun to decline appreciably, a member of a large banking firm said: "If money should happen to ease off suddenly, as it may, you would probably see some of these high-priced stocks advance very rapidly." "Why the high-priced stocks more than others?" he was asked. "Because," he said, "such exorbitant rates for money as we have had these last few days almost invariably cause a lot of light-waisted commission houses to ease themselves by selling out the stocks which they find it inconvenient to carry. They would naturally sell the stocks that would release the most money, and that is the high-priced stuff, as I have said—things like Northern Pacific, Great Northern, Northwestern, and even Union Pacific." In the recovery that came about in the afternoon on the announcement of large gold imports the high-priced stocks did advance very sharply.

In trying to estimate the extent of the short interest in the market under such conditions as have prevailed recently, it is necessary to take into account the stocks which have been sold by small brokers, unable or unwilling to carry them, and which sooner or later must be replaced. The head of a very large Stock Exchange house makes no secret among his intimate friends of the fact that in the late Autumn of 1905, when he saw a period of very tight money ahead, he sold a large line of stocks against what he was carrying for his clients. From the state of his own books he thought it would be impossible for the bull account existing in the general market to survive the trouble in money which he clearly foresaw. Like a great many others, he was right about money and wrong in his judgment of the market. The bull account survived 100 per cent. call money almost intact, and this broker covered his line of shorts at a heart-breaking loss.

American stocks advanced over night in London, as on the preceding day, and this market, as on Tuesday, was unresponsive to the higher prices reported from the other side. It displayed some irregular strength in the initial trading, then declined, then rallied moderately, and grew very dull. It remained inactive until rumors of large gold imports were confirmed in the afternoon, whereupon there started a buying movement, which carried prices up 1 to 3 per cent. all around. Amalgamated Copper and Union Pacific were the leaders of the recovery, and naturally so, in view of the extent to which Tuesday's selling movement had converged upon them. Reading, Pennsylvania, the United States Steel shares, and the Hill stocks participated prominently in the improvement. Stocks closed generally at or near their best prices, showing such net advances as 2¾ per cent. in Amalgamated Copper, 3⅛ per cent. in Union Pacific, 2⅜ per cent. in Reading, 1⅝ per cent. in Steel common, 1⅛ per cent. in Steel preferred, 3¾ per cent. in Great Northern preferred, and 8½ per cent. in Northern Pacific.

The recovery in the last hour was perhaps too rapid to be trusted implicitly. The shorts were mainly responsible for it. They clamored for stocks and found them scarce. Along with this short covering there was a good deal of impulsive speculative buying for the long account. There is doubtless still a large short interest in the market. To eliminate it would be poor tactics on the bull crowd's part, since a short interest represents a buying power in reserve; and if it were run out of the market the technical position of stocks would be temporarily weakened, in the absence of a sufficient amount of general buying to take its place.

An observing trader says he is astonished at the manner in which people respond to any improvement in the appearance of the market. A recovery of 1 or 2 per cent. in prices restores good feeling and makes everybody cheerful again. He argues from this that people are bullish at heart. Speculative sentiment, at least in Wall Street, answers promptly to the slightest encouragement.

There has been a decided change in the market behavior of the Steel stocks. After the break which marked the culmination of the January boom, they remained sluggish and were unresponsive to occasional exhibitions of strength in the general market. They declined easily when the other market was weak, and recovered little when other stocks were strong. Finally they were declared to be a drag upon the stock market, and traders became distrustful of them. Around 40 a lot of Steel common which had been sold five points higher in fear of a coal strike, was quietly repurchased, and about three weeks ago the change referred to in the market behavior of the Steel shares began to be noticed. They have held their own with other stocks through the money stringency of the last ten days, and besides showing support when under pressure, they have rallied sharply on every occasion. A recovery of 1⅝ per cent. in the price of Steel common yesterday was greater, in proportion to the price of the stock, than a recovery of more than 3 points in Union Pacific.

It is said that there has been some very excellent buying this week of Union Pacific and Amalgamated Copper on a scale-down. A good deal of the Union Pacific that was sold above 158 has probably been repurchased at a profit. There was probably a similar turn in Amalgamated Copper.

⁂

The bull party is supposed to be carrying a great many stocks on the other side. It has been easier to finance bullish operations there than here. The advances reported from the American quarter of the London market each day this week are supposed to have reflected the buying there of stocks sold out here; in other words, a shifting of bull accounts from New York to London.

The trading yesterday was extremely mixed. Houses whose operations are likely to attract attention were buyers in one stock and sellers in another; houses supposed to have bullish affiliations sold, and others aligned with bearish sentiment bought. In the last hour the confusion was such that the identity of buyers and sellers was lost sight of almost entirely. The bulls pursued and the bears fell back, and the only significance, perhaps, to be attached to the advance which occurred between 2 o'clock and the closing was that it indicated a temporary scarcity of stocks for sale. It was not easy to cover short contracts.

IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

Record Output of Pig in March—Price of Tin Plate Up.

The production of pig iron during March, according to figures compiled by The Iron Age, exceeded all previous records. The output of pig, exclusive of charcoal iron, amounted to 2,165,632 tons, compared with the previous maximum monthly production of 2,068,893 tons in January of this year. The production of charcoal pig iron for the last month is estimated at about 35,000 tons, which brings the total iron production of the country in March up to the record figure of 2,200,000 tons. At the close of the month the active furnace capacity was 484,230 tons a week, compared with an active capacity of 479,787 tons at the beginning of March.

That this enormous production of iron has not exceeded the demand for the metal is indicated by the fact that the pig iron stocks of the United States Steel Corporation at the end of March amounted to 110,000 tons, the lowest figure in the history of the company. Returns received by The Iron Age from the furnaces in Virginia, Alabama, Tennessee, and Georgia show that the stocks at those furnaces decreased from 102,353 tons on March 1 to 101,375 tons on April 1.

Referring to the movement of prices in the pig iron market and to the demand for various forms of finished steel The Iron Age says in its issue to-day:

There has been a good deal of buying during the last week, the majority of the large transactions, however, having been made at concessions. These appear to have cleaned out what speculative iron there was and to have stiffened the backbone of many of the principal sellers. It is only just to state, however, that old prices have cropped up during the last day or two.

The cast iron pipe interests, which have enjoyed the best month in the history of the industry during March, have been large purchasers. They have taken from 60,000 tons to 75,000 tons of pig iron, the greater part in the South, although the furnaces in the East and in the Central West have come in for their share.

The Lake Superior Corporation has secured the second 50,000 tons of steel rails for the Grand Trunk Pacific, the American mills having been unable to touch the business. The Hill interest is now negotiating with Canadian mills for tonnage for the new lines in Canada. Among the domestic rail orders placed are 12,500 tons for the Atlanta & West Point, 11,000 tons for the Northern Electric, and 5,000 tons additional for the Great Northern. A transcontinental road has practically closed for 25,000 tons. A moderate-sized order for Japan has also been closed. Inquiries are at hand for deliveries for 1907, but the mills are not booking orders yet.

There has been a good deal of activity in structural material, among the contracts placed being 6,200 tons for St. Louis, 4,800 tons for Los Angeles, 3,300 tons for Chicago, 2,400 tons for New Orleans, and 6,000 tons for the power house of the Hudson company.

Among the bridge orders are 7,000 tons for the Lehigh Valley and 5,500 tons for the Cincinnati, New Orleans & Pacific. The Manhattan Bridge, for which bids are going in, calls for 42,000 net tons of material.

On account of the phenomenal rise in the price of tin the makers of tin plate have advanced their prices from the $3.50 base, Pittsburg, per box to $3.60.

March was a record-breaker so far as shipments are concerned for the United States Steel Corporation. The shipments of material to consumers aggregated 998,000 tons.

COPPER MARKET REPORTS.

Reports received in this city yesterday indicated that speculators in copper abroad, after having suffered losses owing to the scarcity of spot copper at the beginning of April, have again gone short on a large scale of copper for July delivery. Many copper speculators abroad, it is said, have held to the theory that large concealed stocks of copper existed in this country, which were counted on to bring about a serious decline in the price of the metal. The opinion is expressed by some of the larger producers that those who have gone short of copper for July will be as sorely disappointed as those whose contracts fell due at the beginning of April.

Closing quotations on the Metal Exchange yesterday for copper and other metals compare as follows with those of the previous day:

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 11.—There was no great amount of business on the local Exchange to-day, trading probably being restrained for the same causes which make for serious conditions in Wall Street. Some purchases were made in Chicago Subway as the result of inspection of the tunnels by prospective investors and brokers. The early price was firm, around 54½.

Strawboard sold at 22, Carbon common went at 91, Match at 133, and Brick at 58. Biscuit was easy at 65. West Chicago, which sold as low as 23 yesterday, rallied to 25½. There was further selling of Northwestern Elevated 4 per cents around 98½.

In the afternoon Subway was lifted by usual methods to 55½. Union Traction preferred was stronger at 18. Biscuit preferred gained a point at 117. Match sold at 134.

PUBLIC NOTICES.

CITY OF NEW YORK.

BOARD OF ESTIMATE AND APPORTIONMENT.

Public notice is hereby given that at a meeting of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, held March 2, 1906, the following petition was received:

To the Honorable Board of Estimate and Apportionment of The City of New York:

The petition of the Manhattan Refrigerating Company respectfully shows:

1. That said Manhattan Refrigerating Company is a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York, having its principal place of business at the northeast corner of West and Horatio Streets in the City of New York, and has built and is operating a large plant at that point for artificial refrigeration, conducting a cold storage warehouse and also a pipe line for the supply of customers in the market and others whose places of business front on the streets and avenues in the immediate vicinity. That it has for the period of upward of ten years constructed and operated in certain streets in The City of New York mains and pipes for the supply of mechanical refrigeration, and has supplied all acceptable customers along the said lines at reasonable rates.

2. That the said Manhattan Refrigerating Company, by assignment, duly made to it by the Greenwich Refrigerating Company, is the sole owner of a certain franchise granted by the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty of The City of New York, approved by the Mayor April 8, 1890, and respectfully petitions your Honorable Board to grant a license to lay a conduit not more than twelve inches in diameter, to contain refrigerating pipes, extending from the intersection of Fourteenth Street and Tenth Avenue to Hudson Street; thence southerly along Hudson Street to Gansevoort Street, and thence along Gansevoort Street to West Street, the said pipes to be laid under the surface of the streets, and branches in the intersecting streets west of Hudson Street.

3. That said pipes are to be used to convey brine, ammonia, or other refrigerating medium to connect with the pipes of the Manhattan Refrigerating Company at the terminal points. This company has a line of pipes used for said purpose extending along West Street and Tenth Avenue, from Horatio Street to Fourteenth Street, for the purpose of supplying to such customers as may desire the same refrigeration for properly insulated compartments for the preservation of meats and other perishable goods.

4. That the said district through which it is proposed to lay the said pipes is largely devoted to the meat and produce trade, and for the proper carrying on of which it is necessary to have refrigeration, and that this company has been requested by persons engaged in said business along said route to extend its lines and to supply such persons with refrigeration.

5. That should said permit be granted your petitioner will supply to all persons providing proper compartments or boxes and requiring the same, refrigeration at reasonable prices, and will save the City harmless from any loss or damage to any sewer, gas or water pipe, or from any cause that may arise from the exercise of the privilege so obtained by it, and will furnish such indemnity or security as the City may require to insure the faithful compliance with the conditions that it may see fit to impose upon your petitioner conditioned to the license applied for.

6. This company desires that the said franchise may continue for the period of ten years from the date of granting the same, and the company offers to pay to the City as a reasonable compensation or tax therefor annually a sum equal to 3½ per cent. on the gross amount of receipts derived from the customers supplied by pipes to be laid under the proposed franchise, and also from any and all customers on its present lines, except the standholders of the new market, on which last named business the company is already paying a percentage of its gross receipts. The company further offers that the percentage of its gross receipts to be paid for said franchise after the period of five years shall be increased to 5 per cent. during the remainder of the term.

7. The company further petitions that it may have the right or option at the expiration of the said term of ten years to a further term of ten years upon paying a like tax of 5 per cent. upon the gross receipts from all its lines, as above specified, excepting the standholders in the new market.

8. That said proposed pipe line will not interfere with any fixtures or appurtenances forming part of the water mains, sewers, conduits, subways or sub-pavement fixtures of any kind, or of any sub-structures existing by virtue of any franchise heretofore granted, all of which appears from the map herewith submitted. The company will do all work under the said franchise under the directions of the proper officers and departments of the City Government, and will comply with all requirements thereof.

Wherefore your petitioner prays that such license and franchise be granted as aforesaid.

Dated New York, March 2, 1906.

PUBLIC NOTICES.

CITY OF NEW YORK.

BOARD OF ESTIMATE AND APPORTIONMENT.

Public notice is hereby given that at a meeting of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, held March 30, 1906, the following petition was received:

To the Honorable, the Board of Estimate and Apportionment:

The petition of the Williams Terminal Railway Company respectfully shows:

1. That your petitioner is a street surface railway corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York, having filed its certificate of incorporation in the office of the Secretary of State of New York on the 29th day of July, 1905, for the purpose of constructing, maintaining, and operating a street surface railway in the Borough of Brooklyn, City of New York.

2. That your petitioner desires to obtain from the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of The City of New York its consent to and a grant of the right, privileges, and franchise to use a portion of Bowne Street, in the Borough of Brooklyn, City of New York, for street railway purposes, and for the construction, maintenance and operation of a single track street surface railway upon and along the surface of said Bowne Street, a description of such proposed railway being as follows: Beginning at a point southeast of Imlay Street, where it will connect with the track of the New York Dock Company, and running southeasterly along Bowne Street to and into the property of J. H. Williams & Co., on the easterly side of Richards Street, the entire length of said road not to exceed nine hundred feet, together with the necessary connections, switches, sidings, turn-outs, turn-tables, cross-overs, and suitable stands necessary for the accommodation and operation of the said railroad by the overhead system of electricity, or other power lawfully employed by connecting railroads, all in the Borough of Brooklyn, City and State of New York.

3. Your petitioner further shows that there is no adequate means of transportation provided between the terminal of the proposed railroad, and your petitioner believes there is a public demand for the construction and operation of this proposed railroad, and that such construction and operation will be a public convenience and benefit, the said railroad to be used for freight only.

Wherefore, your petitioner prays that the notice of the time and place when and where this application will be first considered be given, pursuant to provisions of Section 92 of the Railroad Law, and all other laws applicable thereto, and that consent or grant be given in the form of an ordinance subject to the laws and ordinances applicable thereto, and upon terms and conditions to be fixed in accordance with the provisions of the Greater New York Charter.

THE WILLIAMS TERMINAL RAILWAY COMPANY,
By JAMES H. WILLIAMS, Vice President.
Dated City of New York, Borough of Brooklyn, February 23, 1906.

James H. Williams, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is the Vice President of the Williams Terminal Railway Company, the petitioner named in the foregoing petition; that he has read the foregoing petition and knows the contents thereof; that the same is true of his own knowledge, except as to the matters therein stated to be alleged on information and belief, and as to those matters he believes it to be true.

JAMES H. WILLIAMS.

Sworn to before me this 23d day of February, 1906.
A. Y. BRITTON,
Notary Public, Westchester County.
Certificate filed in Kings County.

At a meeting of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, held March 30, 1906, the following resolutions were thereupon adopted:

Whereas, the foregoing petition from the Williams Terminal Railway Company, dated February 23, 1906, was presented to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment at a meeting held March 30, 1906:

Resolved, That in pursuance of law this Board sets Friday, the 27th day of April, 1906, at 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon, and Room 16 in the City Hall, Borough of Manhattan, as the time and place when and where such petition shall be first considered, and a public hearing be had thereon, at which citizens shall be entitled to appear and be heard; and be it further

Resolved, That the Secretary is directed to cause such petition and these resolutions to be published for at least fourteen (14) days in two daily newspapers in the City of New York, to be designated by the Mayor, and for at least ten (10) days in the "City Record" immediately prior to such date of public hearing. The expense of such publication to be borne by the petitioner.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Prices Recover Sharply on Easier Money.

United Copper Scores Greatest Gain—Chicago Subway Firmer—Standard Oil Rallies.

A sharp recovery in prices occurred in the outside security market yesterday, particularly in the shares which have recently been under the severest selling pressure. From the low point made in the morning session, United Copper rallied 3⅞ per cent. to 67⅝, and closed within a small fraction of that price. Copper securities rose from 37 to 38, and the shares of the other properties in the Copper group made recoveries of more or less consequence. Chicago Subway advanced from 54 to 55½ and closed at 55½, with dealings fairly large in volume. Inter-Met. common sold up from 52⅛ to 53, and the preferred from 89 to 89¾. Standard Oil recovered to 652.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 11.—There was no change in the character of the local trading, notwithstanding the break in New York call loan rates. Money continued very scarce in this city, some of the banks reporting that they were "closely loaned up." Such trading as there was to-day ran largely to the arbitrage stocks, United States Steel, Reading, Erie, and Southern Railway being the favorites. There was some liquidation in Cambria Steel, on the theory that an early increase in the dividend is not likely. General Asphalt was lower, and Keystone Telephone preferred was down a point.

Total sales, 22,440 shares.

Oklahoma and Indian Territory, showers and cooler Thursday afternoon or night; Friday, fair.

Arkansas, fair Thursday; showers and cooler at night or Friday.

Tennessee and Kentucky, fair Thursday; Friday, showers and cooler.

Heavy selling attributed to price interests and said to have aggregated 100,000 bales brought the New York cotton market down yesterday from a new high record of 11.38 for May to a net decline of 8 points from Tuesday's close, or 14 points off from the top, the close being 11.24, the lowest price of that option for the day. Wall Street was said to have taken 10,000 bales of the Price offerings.

Liverpool, spot sales, again reached 14,000 bales at a further advance of 7 points, to 6.24d; 36,000 bales have been sold in Liverpool in the last three days, and the advance during that time has been 10 points. Manchester is said to be able to sell goods from new crop deliveries on the basis of old crop prices. New Orleans advanced spot prices yesterday ⅛, to 11½c. Business, however, was restricted by the firmness of holders.

Of the 14,000 bales sold in Liverpool yesterday, 12,000 were American, the price being 6.24d, against 4.27d last year. Imports were 2,000 bales, 1,000 being American. Futures closed quiet and steady, 3 to 4 points up on the old crop months, and 1 to 3 on the new; May-June at 6.05, July-August at 6.05, August-September at 6, October-November at 5.76, December-January at 5.75. Manchester yarns were reported hardening and cloths in good demand.

Estimated receipts for to-day are: Houston, 2,200 to 2,500 bales, against 3,483 last week and 5,488 last year; Galveston, 3,000 to 4,000 bales, against 4,286 last week and 8,138 last year; New Orleans, 2,800 to 3,500 bales, against 4,416 last week and 6,662 last year. Receipts at the thirteen interior towns were 9,424 bales, against 9,430 last week and 19,105 bales last year. Shipments, 10,484 bales, against 12,337 last week and 20,827 last year. Port receipts were 23,887 bales, against 18,970 last week and 23,950 last year. Exports, 30,570 bales. Receipts since Sept. 1, 6,884,958 bales, against 8,139,048 last year; exports, 5,271,435 bales, against 6,583,062 last year.

HUBBARD BROTHERS—In the afternoon houses with New Orleans connections sold the near positions freely. Toward the close New Orleans became a heavy seller of May. The May and July premium was reduced to 6 points.

CARPENTER, BAGGOT & CO.—This is a bull market. Though reactions may come at any time, such declines only offer better opportunity for investment.

JOHN MUIR & CO.—In the present condition of the market we are inclined to advise extreme caution.

DICK BROTHERS—Sentiment is becoming more optimistic and the trade seems to be confident of a further advance after the holidays. Even the bears are beginning to recognize the fact that the advance in the market is due more to a readjustment to the commercial situation than an attempt to manipulate prices.

MARSHALL, SPADER & CO.—The amount brought in sight for the week promises to be nearly 100,000 bales less than for the corresponding week last year, and this again points to a reduction in the world's visible supply of American cotton during the week, which will carry the figures to perhaps under 2,900,000 bales, as compared with 2,965,000 last year. This calculation must prove a constant reminder of the fact that the statistical position of the staple will grow stronger for the remainder of the season.

J. S. BACHE & CO.—While we feel confident of higher values, unless unfavorable weather sets in, we would buy only on decided setbacks until after the holidays.

T. A. McINTYRE & CO.—The old crop is one proposition, while the new crop months are distinctly another, so that we are likely to have a speculation showing considerable irregularity and a narrowing of the differences rather than otherwise between these two crops.

Following are the opening, highest, lowest, and closing prices:

	Opening.	Highest and Lowest.	Closing.	Prev. Close.
January	10.66	10.68-10.68	10.69	10.64
April	11.25	11.20-11.20	11.14	11.19

November		10.60-10.60	10.55	10.59
December	10.65	10.67-10.56	10.57	10.61

Market closed barely steady. Estimated sales, 350,000 bales. New Orleans closed steady at a decline of 5 points on the old crop and 4 on the new; May at 11.31, July 11.41, October 10.52, and December 10.53.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

WHEAT.—The wheat market opened easy and sold off ⅛c under local selling and disappointing outside demand. This decline was followed by a sharp advance of ⅝c on the heaviest seaboard clearances (494,000) reported for weeks, and with that came wires from the West predicting a falling off in receipts. There was no public speculative support, however, and the market once more became weak. Later trading was more active and the advance in the early afternoon on the big clearances was followed by profit taking for over the end-week. Cash wheat closed firm but quiet. We quote: No. 2 red, 89½c elevator and 90c free on board afloat; No. 1 Northern Duluth, 88¼c; all nominal.

CORN.—There was a fairly active market for corn, which opened ⅛c lower in sympathy with the early weakness in wheat. Later, however, the market advanced ⅜ to ½c on covering, following reports of small country offerings and good demand in all cash markets on which stocks showed a steady decrease. Exporters took no corn. Cash corn closed firm; offerings scant. We quote: No. 2 corn, 56c nominal in elevator and 54¾c nominal free on board afloat; No. 2 white, 56c nominal, and No. 2 yellow, 55½c nominal free on board afloat.

OATS.—The decreasing stocks of corn and the firmness in the markets for the coarser grains generally resulted in small offerings of oats, which closed firm at full prices. We quote: Mixed, 26 to 32 lb, 36@36½c; natural white, 30 to 33 lb, 37½@39c; clipped white, 38 to 40 lb, 39@41½c.

GERMAN LOAN RETURNS.

Subscriptions Very Light — French Houses Do Not Enter Competition.

BERLIN, April 11.—Subscriptions for the imperial and Prussian loans are much lighter than for previous issues.

The tenders for the $65,000,000 of imperial bonds reached about $100,000,000, whereas a year ago a $75,000,000 loan was covered fifteen times.

The tenders for the $75,000,000 of Prussian consols have not yet been tabulated, but are estimated at about $100,000,000.

The light subscription is attributed partly to dear money and partly to the absence of foreign tenders. France, which usually has sent large subscriptions to German bond issues, to-day sent almost none, owing to the preparations in that country for the forthcoming big Russian loan and perhaps also on account of political animosity.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, April 11.—Contrary to expectations the annual meeting of United Railway stockholders did not bring forth any announcement of immediate financial reorganization, excepting that the Maryland Electric Company, which is controlled by friendly interests, shall finance plans for improvements and betterments. The promise is also made of an early resumption of dividends on the income bonds. Gross earnings for the year showed an increase of $575,224.89; earnings in excess of operating expenses, &c., $2,238,406.

In the bond list Georgia and Alabama Consolidated 5s dropped 1 per cent. Seaboard ten-year 5s were lower, at 102⅜. Florida & Southern 4s dropped 1 per cent. Around the close G. B. S. Brewing incomes advanced a point.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

A special meeting of the stockholders of the International Steam Pump Company has been called for May 8 for the purpose of considering the acquisition of some additional properties.

At the annual meeting of the Kansas City Southern Railway, which will be held in Kansas City on May 8, the stockholders will vote on increasing the number of Directors from thirteen to fifteen.

Mr. Albert Bannister, Assistant Secretary of the Trust Company of America, and Manager of its Wall Street branch, has been elected a Director and Vice President of the Mutual Alliance Trust Company.

The New York Stock Exchange has received formal notice from the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company of the increase in the capital stock of that corporation from $89,286,300 to $96,066,300.

Speyer & Co. have purchased from the National Railroad Company of Mexico $3,000,000 of its prior lien 4½ per cent. gold bonds, completing the amount which can be issued under the prior lien mortgage. The proceeds of this sale will be applied toward reimbursing the National Railroad of Mexico for the cost of the Hidalgo & Northeastern Railroad, which it has acquired.

Albert L. Banister, Assistant Secretary of the Trust Company of America and manager of its Wall Street branch, was elected a Director and Vice President of the Mutual Alliance Trust Company yesterday. He has been an officer of the Trust Company of America since its organization in 1899. He was previously connected with the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company.

The stockholders of the National Shoe & Leather Bank will meet on April 28 to ratify the merger agreement with the Metropolitan Bank and to vote on the proposition to increase the capitalization of the Shoe & Leather Bank from $1,000,00 to $2,000,000. A meeting of the stockholders of the Metropolitan Bank will be held the same day.

S. W. Eccles, a member of the Executive Committee of the American Smelting & Refining Company, has been elected President of the Nevada Northern Railway; M. L. Requa is the new Vice President and General Manager. Mr. Eccles has been in charge of the transportation interests of the Guggenheims, who control the Nevada Northern through their Nevada Consolidated Copper Company.

N. W. Halsey & Co., bankers, have published for free distribution the second edition of their "Compilation of the Statutes of the Various States Relating to the Investment of Savings Banks in Bonds." The booklet is intended to be a valuable guide to the investor in his search for investments which are made legal for savings and trust funds.

The Auction Room.

In accordance with the instructions from the executors of the Gilsey estate, Auctioneer Bryan L. Kennelly announced at noon yesterday in the Real Estate Salesroom that the sale of the properties at the northwest corner of Broadway and Twenty-eighth Street, including Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre, had been adjourned until April 25.

Mr. Kennelly conducted successful sales of several smaller properties by order of owners and executors. Chief among these offerings was that of 77 and 79 West Forty-fifth Street, 40 by 100.5, adjoining the northeast corner of Sixth Avenue. Bidding for these properties started at $90,000 and rose to $114,250.

The Lee estate property at Staatsburg, Dutchess County, a tract of 101 acres, with 1,200 feet frontage on the Hudson River, attracted considerable attention, but the best outside bid was not up to the owners' expectations, and it was bought in by a representative of the estate at $53,000.

Detailed results of the day's auction business follow:

By Bryan L. Kennelly.

HAVE YOU EVER HEARD OF THE

and of how many happy and independent HOME OWNERS it has made throughout the UNITED KINGDOM?

We are operating the same safe and conservative system here in OUR COUNTRY, and it has proven very successful, because the money you have paid heretofore in rent each month through our system is a payment towards a HOME, and you pay no more than you now pay in rent, and in a few years you will have YOUR HOME all paid for.

You have to pay only $5.00 down on each thousand you wish to invest in a home; $2.50 per month on each thousand (for three months), receiving credit for $2.00 of the $2.50. After the home has been purchased for you, you then pay us $7.00 per month per thousand, receiving credit for $5.00 of the $7.00 each month on the principal.

MAYWOOD HEIGHTS

AT MAYWOOD NEW JERSEY

THE HOME OF THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN

¶ Would you prefer to purchase a home site in the centre of a beautiful borough peopled by aristocrats to buying a crude "lot" in a houseless territory being "boomed" by land speculators?

¶ MAYWOOD is composed of splendid country estates, a magnificent park. Its residents are the sort of "nice people" you like best to meet; exclusive, yet democratic; the sort among which you wish your children to grow up. Motoring, golfing, boating, tennis, riding and driving—the life of the country club is the keynote of Maywood.

¶ MAYWOOD is but six miles from New York; it is one of the highest points in New Jersey, famed for its healthful, bracing atmosphere, beautiful views, perfect macadam roads, perfect drives and ideal borough government. Its schools are unsurpassed, its water absolutely pure, its gas and electric light service of the best. Churches of several denominations. No mosquitoes—no malaria.

¶ MAYWOOD is to-day but thirty minutes from New York City, 40 trains a day, the commutation but a trifle. It is as quickly reachable as Harlem, and upon the completion of the North River tunnels will be but fifteen minutes from the business and shopping centres of Manhattan. Three trolley lines afford a 40-minute service to Manhattan—a delightful ride.

¶ MAYWOOD Property is the best investment you can find. Should you buy for speculation you will double your money in an absurdly short time. If you are a home seeker, you will find Maywood the Home Land of your dreams. Our lots will double again and again in value upon the opening of the North River Tunnels.

¶ Our lots on Maywood Heights are in the very centre of the borough, immediately adjoining the School and Borough Hall. Each lot fronts on a wide, macadamized street, with stone and cement sidewalks. They are offered at prices from $175 to $500; prices no higher than those asked by other companies for lots in a barren wilderness, where the entire development depends on the sale of the property.

It is a liberal education in the beauties of the homes, sports and beautiful out-door pastimes of our modern suburban aristocracy.

Address The Schmidt Realty & Construction Co., Department B.
38 Park Row, New York City.
Transportation to Maywood and return will be furnished free on request.

GORKY ENTHUSIAST LEAPS OFF BRIDGE

Sweatshop Worker Grieved Over the Death of His Brother.

IS SAVED AND WILL LIVE

Isaacson's Rescuers Lost No Time Jumping Off a Williamsburg Ferryboat and Getting Him.

Nathan Isaacson, 45 years old, of 66 Rivington Street, grieving over the recent death of his brother and the serious illness of his mother in Russia, left his room yesterday morning and walked beyond the middle of the Williamsburg Bridge, looking for a clear space in the understructure through which he might drop to death in the East River below. He at last found a place where he could drop and plunged off. He was rescued and will probably live.

Isaacson has been a sweatshop worker for years, but as long as he had the companionship of his brother at the sewing machine and in his dingy bedroom he was not given to thoughts of suicide. Like many of his kind in the east side he gave his leisure moments—few as they were—to worrying over the grievances of others. He was fond of Ella Wheeler Wilcox as a poet, of many writers with Socialistic and revolutionary tendencies, and these aggregated his pleasures.

His brother died the other day, and Isaacson mourned him and went unshorn, following the custom of the orthodox Jews. All Tuesday night Isaacson paced the floor of his room. Yesterday morning at work time he started toward the sweatshop, but he gave no response to the morning greetings of other sweatshop workers. Neither did he go to the big room where a mountain of unsewed boys' waists was stacked for him. He turned toward the river and strode to the highest point of the bridge. He found the place he thought would do near the Brooklyn side. He clambered from the promenade and dropped. His body swayed. He had not jumped carefully enough. From one to another iron girder and cable he crashed and then shot downward through the air, whirling over three times.

The ferryboat New York, bound from Forty-second Street to Broadway, Williamsburg, was within ten feet of the spot where Isaacson struck the water. The whirl of spray that went up as he fell had hardly settled when Edward Radigan, a deckhand, and Joseph Becker of 634 Gates Avenue, Brooklyn, who wanted to lend a hand, jumped off the boat.

Isaacson was in a crouching position as he struck the water. He made a dive of the sort the small boys call "a watermelon"—a safe dive, not carrying the body too deep. This probably saved his life.

The two men who went to his rescue soon reached him and held him up until the ferryboat drifted to them. Then Isaacson was dragged aboard.

In the Williamsburg Hospital it was said last night that there was a good chance of Isaacson's recovery. Isaacson was conscious yesterday afternoon and told why he made the jump. He said that the loss of his brother and ill-health made him believe that it would be better for him if he died. He said that stomach trouble and worry over the condition of his mother in Bessarabia, Russia, added to his woes. He could not talk at length, for his face and tongue were badly swollen. None of his bones seemed to be broken.

In Isaacson's lodgings are many of the works of Maxim Gorky, the Russian writer now in this country. Isaacson was a Gorky enthusiast and had hoped to meet him. He was also a close reader of Count Tolstoy, as his well-thumbed books showed, and a student of other Socialistic and revolutionary writers.

MURPHY WON'T GO.

Refuses to Attend Jefferson Dinner—Still Bitter Against the Mayor.

There is consternation in the Democratic Club, and especially among the members of the Dinner Committee, over a declaration from Charles F. Murphy that he will not attend the Jefferson dinner next Monday night at the Waldorf-Astoria, because Mayor McClellan has been assigned to speak on "Democracy."

In his refusal to attend, the Tammany leader makes no secret of the fact that the feeling between the Mayor and himself is more bitter than ever, and that he does not believe the Mayor is entitled to speak for the Democracy on any subject. Because of this he will stay away from the feast, and all of his close friends and faithful followers are expected to do the same. Most of them have already subscribed for their tickets, and in many cases have paid for tickets for guests as well. A round-up of the district leaders yesterday revealed the fact that many of them were in a quandary as to what to do, but it is certain that all of the tried-and-true Murphy men, and many others, will not occupy the seats assigned to them.

W. Bourke Cockran, who was to have made one of the chief speeches, may refuse even to attend. It was learned yesterday that in making up the subjects for the speeches the Dinner Committee communicated by letter with each of the speakers and asked on what he wished to talk. Mayor McClellan selected "Democracy," and the next mail brought from Congressman Cockran his selection of "Democracy and Socialism." As the Mayor's letter was in first, his selection was allowed to stand, and Congressman Cockran was asked to select another subject. This he declined to do, and it is understood he will remain away.

Mr. Murphy declined to discuss the matter yesterday, but confirmed the report that he had declined to attend the dinner.

"I intended to go; now I don't intend to go," was all he would say, except that he had invited six personal friends to attend with him, but that he had written to each, saying he would not go himself and withdrawing his invitation to them.

The Tammany leader declined to say what others would do, but the members of the Dinner Committee expect wholesale "indispositions" for Monday evening. President Frank A. O'Donnel of the Tax Board, one of Murphy's old-time friends, has already been taken "ill," so he cannot attend. He said so yesterday. Borough President John F. Ahearn said he had his ticket, but did not know yet what he would do. "Little Tim" Sullivan, who is backing the Mayor with the Sullivan clan, will go. The Sullivanites are happy at the friendliness of the administration and want to show it.

"Yes, we're going to the dinner," said "Little Tim." "You know, I go to all dinners. I even went to the Elsberg Republican dinner last week."

PUT JEWELS IN ORANGES.

Customs Officials Seize Three Diamond Rings They Find in the Fruit.

One of the cleverest and most daring attempts to smuggle valuables into this country was detected yesterday on the arrival of the steamship Germania from Italian ports. Among the passengers on the Germania were Pietro Corato, a prosperous saloon keeper, of New Haven, and his prospective son-in-law, Mariana Puso. Sorato left New York last September and sailed for Naples. The last thing he promised his daughter was a number of jewels and some other finery for her trousseau.

When the Germania reached her Brooklyn dock yesterday, the first to leave the boat were Corato and Puso. Customs Inspector Peter Simons examined the baggage belonging to the pair and found several pieces of feminine finery which had not been declared.

After the contents of the trunk had been removed, Simons discovered a discrepancy between the bottom of the trunk and the floor of the dock, and a closer examination showed a false bottom in the trunk, forming a secret receptacle about seven inches deep.

A crowd quickly gathered, among them being Corato's cousin, Cardro Ignınito of 19 President Street, Brooklyn. In order that the men might be searched with more thoroughness, they were taken aboard the Germania. As they were going up the gangplank the actions of the cousin attracted the attention of the two searchers, and, their suspicions aroused, they determined to search the trio.

Igninito held back, but the customs men hustled him on board, explaining that though he was not a passenger he must give an account of himself.

A thorough search of Puso revealed nothing dutiable. On Corato were found five rings and two gold chains. Igninito was then searched, and three decayed oranges were found in his overcoat pocket. These were thrown aside by the customs men, who failed to find anything else. They were about to leave the stateroom, when Igninito reached for the oranges.

This aroused the suspicions of the customs officers. They examined the fruit. The oranges were of the seedless variety, and the large bulb at the bottom had been carefully cut out and replaced after a small box containing a diamond ring had been inserted through the opening. These were seized by the inspectors, and Corato was arrested. Had not the oranges rotted on the voyage over the operation would not have been detected.

In the Federal Building Corato was arraigned before United States Commissioner Benedict on a charge of smuggling. It was decided after a conference that there was no legal case against the cousin, there being no proof that he knew what the oranges contained. Corato was held in $1,000 bail for trial. The rings are valued at $900.

KILLED IN DEAD MAN'S GULCH.

Man Struck by Long Island Train Where Many Lives Have Been Lost.

Charles Kettle, twenty-two years old, employed in Haberman's agateware factory at Berlin, L. I., was killed by a Long Island Railroad train early yesterday morning at a place in Laurel Hill known as Dead Man's Gulch. The gulch is a section of the railroad over a mile in length which is used by thousands of workmen in the factories along Newtown Creek as a short cut. More than a hundred persons have lost their lives walking on the tracks in the gulch within a few years.

Kettle was walking on the east-bound track. He heard a train approaching on his track and stepped directly in front of a train going in the other direction.

TRUSTEES WOULD REPAY 1904 CAMPAIGN GIFT

Several of the New York Life's Finance Committee Willing.

BUT THEY'D FIGHT SUITS

Untermyer Charges That the Mutual Is Rounding Up Proxies—Suits Against Fields Ready.

The Trustees of the New York Life Insurance Company held their regular monthly meeting yesterday and discussed the individual responsibility of the members of the Finance Committee for the payments made to the Republican National Committee. The position of several members of this committee was that rather than have the company sue the estate of John A. McCall for the $48,702 paid out in 1904 they would themselves put up the money. But these Finance Committee men said that if the company undertook legal action against them for the money they would fight the suits rather than admit responsibility.

In connection with this it was said that the members of the Finance Committee, when they were asked to approve the payment of the $48,702 to J. P. Morgan & Co., compensating George W. Perkins, who had advanced it, did not know for what the money was really due, but simply authorized it on the say so of President McCall. Mr. Perkins himself was Chairman of the Finance Committee at that time. Whether a similar explanation would be entered regarding the 1900 contribution did not appear yesterday.

Untermyer Asks Changes.

Samuel Untermyer, counsel for the International Committee of Policy Holders of the New York and Mutual Life, has written to Chairman Armstrong of the Legislative Investigating Committee, charging that the Mutual Life is already rounding up its policy holders through its agents as a preliminary to using the agents in the proxy campaign next Fall.

Mr. Untermyer's letter embodies two specific requests, first, that the Legislature shall amend the pending insurance bills so as to prevent the companies from using their agency force or their regular office staff in the Fall campaigns, and, second, that the bill providing for the publication of the lists of policy holders shall be modified so that a policy holders' committee may, with the approval of the Superintendent of Insurance, get a list of policy holders when filed without having to go through the long process of copying the lists in the office of any company or at that of the State Superintendent.

The present activities of the Mutual Life agency force has as its ostensible object, it is understood, the compilation of corrected lists of policy holders with a view of publication on June 15. Mr. Untermyer suggests to Senator Armstrong that the policy holders' list in the Mutual would, under ordinary circumstances, make a volume about the size of the City Directory, to copy which would require at least the entire time between June 15 and Nov. 15, when the elections are to be held, even if the policy holders' committee had the only chance at it. So it is desired that other lists may be printed, to be obtained for a suitable fee under the conditions named.

What may be accomplished through the agents, however, has had a practical illustration in the case of the New York Life, in which 60,000 proxies running to the late John A. McCall were collected in the few weeks between the time of his resignation from the Presidency of the company and the time when the Fowler Investigating Committee, discovering the secret move to put Mr. McCall back into his old place, drew up the report on the Hamilton expenditures that is said to have broken McCall's heart. Between the time of the publication of this report and the hearings on the Armstrong Committee's bills, the New York Life agents collected 40,000 or 50,000 more proxies under the spur of various proxy schemes devised by the management, and the Mutual Life agents were similarly active until the bill postponing the elections became an assured fact.

The same conditions will not maintain next Fall in some respects, as the policy holders will be asked to vote for tickets named months in advance of the annual meetings. Nevertheless the Policy Holders' Committee fears that the agents, having unusual facilities for a house-to-house canvass, may gather thousands of proxies running to a committee of the existing Trustees, to be voted by the managers of the companies. These proxies, they argue, will not represent the deliberate judgment of the givers on the candidates. The matter is one to which members of the Armstrong Committee have already given some attention.

The Mutual Sues Fields.

Summonses were served yesterday on Henry P. Velte of 32 Liberty Street, counsel for Andrew C. Fields, in two actions which the Mutual Life is about to begin against the former manager of its supply department. The complaints have not been drawn yet, but one action will be at law seeking the recovery of such amounts of money as the Mutual's investigators may decide were improperly spent in the supply department under the old régime. The other will be in equity and for an accounting for various expenditures by Fields, which were charged up to legal expenses or other heads not within the jurisdiction of the supply department.

Mr. Velte said yesterday that Fields would issue no statement until the complaints were served in these actions, but at that time he would issue a statement on Fields's behalf.

"As he is confined to his home under the care of his physician," Mr. Velte added, "I will appreciate it if those desiring information from him will call and see me."

George Zabriskie, as counsel for Charles W. Morse, one of the minority stockholders of the Equitable Life, who joined with Franklin B. Lord in seeking to have the mutualization plan of the old Board of Directors restrained last Spring, has served notice on President Morton of the society protesting against having any of the bills of the lawyers for the Alexander faction paid by the society. Three of these bills—that of William B. Hornblower for $45,000, that of ex-Judge William N. Cohen for $55,000, and that of Adrian H. Joline for $25,000—have been referred to Henry W. Taft for arbitration by agreement of the lawyers and the Equitable. These lawyers appeared in support of the mutualization plan which Mr. Lord and his fellow minority stockholders sought to have enjoined, and it is on this account that the protest is made. There is a strong intimation in Mr. Zabriskie's letter to Mr. Morton that if the bills are paid the minority stockholders will seek to hold somebody accountable.

While there are lots of other good fish in the sea of Spring mixture suits, you can't catch one elsewhere in any pattern we offer.

Every fancy pattern we buy belongs to us exclusively, and as we cut only a limited number of any one sort, and distribute them among our stores, your chances are mighty slim of ever finding a mate to your Spring suit.

Single-breasted suits, $18 to $35.

Double-breasted suits, $22 to $33.

$15 to $40

MUCH Ready-to-wear Clothing to-day dubbed stylish is merely stiltedly correct. Everywhere the tape-line, the square, the shears, and the corrugated brow of the designer are in evidence. Angularity isn't style; preciseness isn't style; rather, it is in the absence of all stiffness—precision without preciseness, exacting tailoring without rivetted exactness—in a free and nonchalant consonance of line—that style inheres. Ours.

Seven styles of sack suits now ready, single and double breasted, square front, rounded front, etc., in a superb display of greys—answer every likely question as to the proper thing for morning and early afternoon wear.

NOBODY KNOWS WHERE VALET JONES HAS GONE

He's Dodging Relatives of Girl He Was to Have Married.

MEDICAL BATTLE TO BEGIN

Patrick Hearing Goes Over to April 23, When Lethal Properties of Chloroform Are to be Settled.

The fact that neither the counsel for Albert T. Patrick nor District Attorney Jerome knows the present whereabouts of Charles F. Jones, once valet of the murdered William M. Rice, was brought out at yesterday's hearing before Recorder Goff in General Sessions, on the motion for a new trial made on behalf of the convicted murderer of Rice. Mr. Olcott turned to Mr. Jerome to ask if it would be possible for him or for Assistant District Attorney Garvan to help the defense in obtaining a photograph of Jones, the man himself not being available.

"No, I cannot," replied Mr. Jerome. "I want such a photograph very badly myself. If I could get it I would have it duplicated, and maybe we might get the man himself here."

It was also learned, through the testimony of Mrs. Anna Allen Wright, of Cedar Bayou, Texas, that Jones disappeared from that neighborhood in February last year, after having broken a promise of marriage to Mrs. Wright's daughter, and that he dare not return to his home for fear of the male relatives of the Wright family.

Mrs. Wright asserted in reply to a question by Mr. Jerome that her "menfolks" had not tried to find Jones since he disappeared, but when asked if those men were not Texans a queer smile played on her face, and she nodded her head in significant affirmation.

Mrs. Wright was sure that she had seen Mayor Rice and Jones stand face to face at Morgan's Point one day in the Summer of 1904, but she did not know what they were saying or how they met or parted.

John B. Giesberg was another witness produced by the defense to corroborate Miss Gaillard's story about the street-car talk between Mayor Rice and Jones.

Corporal Alexander H. Stanberry brought three of the diaries demanded by Mr. Jerome the day before. But when the books were examined many leaves were found to have been torn out of the 1901 diary, to which special importance attached. Stanberry spent an hour on the stand. He said he had torn out the leaves about five days ago because some information relating to his own family appeared on them. Asked what caused him to do so he replied defiantly:

"Your reputation, Mr. Jerome. You're known to drag a man's family into the case if you can."

On another occasion he said he had used the torn leaves to light his pipe or his cigar, adding, with a leer at the District Attorney:

"You see I don't smoke cigarettes."

The hearing was adjourned until April 23, when the battle between the medical experts is to begin. The long postponement was obtained by Mr. Jerome after he had informed the court that "there had been much delay in making the necessary experiments because it was very difficult to obtain dead bodies for the purpose."

The fight between the scientific men will centre about the dispute as to whether the injection of an embalming fluid into a dead body can produce the congestion of blood in the lungs observed in the body of Rice by the medical experts who [illegible]

IT LOOKS MORE NOW LIKE A COAL STRIKE

Operators Refuse to Accept Any Change in Arbitration Terms.

THE MINERS RETURN HOME

Mitchell Gives In on Union Recognition, but Insists on Reopening Controversy.

With mining in the anthracite districts already suspended, yesterday's session of the miners and operators in the Jersey Central Building brought a formal strike nearer than it has been yet in all the protracted negotiations. The miners refused to accept the last proposal of the operators, and have renewed all their original demands in a modified form. The operators declined to accept any change in the terms they offered on Tuesday, and the conference was adjourned sine die. Most of the miners' delegates went home.

The conference may be called together at any time by agreement of Mr. Baer and Mr. Mitchell. Meanwhile the mines remain idle.

The operators are drawing up a letter to the miners, in which they will set forth in full the reasons of the refusal they gave yesterday. They will send it to Mr. Mitchell some time next week. When he receives it he will summon the Miners' Scale Committee, and it is possible that the committee may see fit to reopen the negotiations, but it is more likely that they will refuse to reconsider their position. A convention of the anthracite miners will then be called, and on its deliberations the declaration of a formal strike will depend.

The points on which the operators and miners have split are the extent of the questions which the arbitrators shall consider and the length of time for which their award shall hold. Mr. Mitchell assented to the Anthracite Strike Commission as arbitrators instead of the Conciliation Board which he himself had proposed, and amended his demands so as to rule out recognition of the union and to take away some of the features of the "check-off" system that were most objected to. But he persisted in asking for a 10 per cent. increase of wages, the eight-hour day, an alteration in the constitution of the Conciliation Board, and a series of other changes that would involve the review of the entire situation of the industry. Moreover, by ignoring the second proposal made by the operators, he excluded from discussion a reduction in the rate of wages.

Operators Don't Recede.

The operators hold fast to the contention that in the first place the Arbitration Board should be asked to consider if there has been such change in the conditions of the mines that any alteration in the award of 1903 is necessary. In the second place they consider it should be confined in its inquiries to the question of an increase or reduction of wages and the composition of the Conciliation Board. They also demand that the decision of the Strike Commission should be binding for three years, while the miners wish it to be good for only one year.

The two sub-committees met yesterday at 1:30 o'clock, the only absentee being George W. Hartlein, Secretary of District No. 9, who is suffering from rheumatism. The proceedings were opened by the reading by Mr. Mitchell of the reply of the miners to the proposal of the operators that the members of the old Anthracite Strike Commission should be invited to conduct a new arbitration on the increase or reduction of wages and the methods of conciliation.

The Miners' Reply.

The miners' reply was as follows:

The committee representing the Anthracite mine workers have given your statement and proposal of April 9 most careful and serious consideration, and we desire to express our keen regret that our proposition to arbitrate the differences between us did not meet with your approval. When we proposed that the Board of Conciliation—with Judge Gray, or any one he might designate, as Chairman and umpire—should be empowered to pass judgment upon our respective claims, we believed that we had met your highest expectations and felt that we had discharged our responsibilities in the fullest measure. However, it seems that you are unwilling to submit to this tribunal the question of our joint relations, notwithstanding your oft-repeated words of confidence in its efficiency.

In your conditional proposal to submit to the Anthracite Coal Strike Commission, or to such of its members as might be willing to serve, the question of wages and the adjustment of complaints, you eliminate from our demands many of their most essential features. Indeed, a careful perusal of your proposition discloses the fact that an arbitration of even these two questions cannot take place unless it is first demonstrated that there have been such changes in conditions in the anthracite coal industry as to require a modification of the award of the Anthracite Coal Strike Commission.

This suggestion offers no inducement and little encouragement to us, nor would it result in a solution of our difficulties. It is not sufficient answer to say that because a question was arbitrated three years ago the same question would not be a proper subject for investigation at this time. Therefore we cannot agree to eliminate from our original proposition some of the features which seem objectionable to you.

However, in order to remove from ourselves and from those we represent even the suspicion of obduracy we have amended our proposition:

First—By striking from the heading of our first demand the words "United Mine Workers of America," and inserting in lieu thereof the words "anthracite mine workers," making the section read as follows:

"It is hereby agreed between the representatives of the anthracite mine workers and the various anthracite operating companies that the following wages, rates, hours of labor, and conditions of employment shall become effective April 1, 1906, and continue in effect until April 1, 1907."

"In order to provide funds for the expenditures incurred by the miners' organization in carrying out this agreement it is hereby agreed by the mine workers of the anthracite region and the operators, parties to this contract, that

GREENE AND GAYNOR GUILTY.

To be Sentenced To-day—Judge Intimates He Will Be Merciful.

SAVANNAH, Ga., April 12.—Benjamin D. Greene and John F. Gaynor were found guilty in the Federal court to-day of conspiracy against the Government. To-morrow Judge Emory Speer will pass sentence upon them.

The defendants were found guilty, with no recommendation, upon each of the indictments. The verdict was returned a few minutes before 2 o'clock, after the jury had been out three hours and a half.

The maximum sentence that the court may impose under the law is an aggregate term of seventeen years in the penitentiary and a fine of $575,000, the amount of the alleged embezzlement. The minimum sentence permissible is two years and a fine of $1,000.

Before adjournment until to-morrow at 10 o'clock, when sentence will be pronounced, Judge Speer said:

"I have no disposition toward these unfortunate men except to be just as merciful as my duty under the law will permit."

The defense and counsel will not discuss the next steps to be taken in the case, nor will District Attorney Erwin say what will be done regarding the indictments against Oberlin M. Carter, Michael A. Connelly, William T. and Edward F. Gaynor, who were jointly indicted with the defendants convicted to-day.

Mr. Erwin this afternoon received a telegram from Attorney General Moody expressing the congratulations of the President and the Attorney General upon the outcome of the case, upon which Mr. Erwin has been engaged for so long.

Greene and Gaynor, who were accused of embezzlement and conspiracy to defraud the United States Government in connection with Savannah Harbor improvement contracts, were indicted in 1899. When Capt. Oberlin M. Carter was sentenced to imprisonment for five years on the same charge Greene and Gaynor, who resided in New York, were arrested here, but resisted extradition to Georgia, and when the decision went against them they forfeited the bail of $40,000, in which both had been held, and fled to Montreal.

Steps to extradite them appeared to be meeting with success, and the fugitives escaped from the jurisdiction of the court by going to Quebec. Detectives kidnapped them, and took them back. Conflicting action by the courts of Montreal and Quebec led to an appeal being made by the United States Government to Great Britain, and after further lengthy and complicated proceedings the accused men at the end of last year were handed over to the United States authorities.

FIRE AT JUDGE GRAY'S.

Only in the Chimney, but It Stopped the Judge's Dinner Party.

Judge John Clinton Gray of the Court of Appeals was entertaining a party of friends at dinner at his home, 5 East Fifty-sixth Street, last night, when one of them thought he smelled smoke.

"Looks like the house is afire," said the guest.

"Seems that way," replied the Judge, opening a door leading to the hall. "Why, the entire house is full of smoke!"

Then one of the servants rushed in excitedly and asked his Honor if she might interrupt the dinner long enough to tell the Judge that the house was afire.

"Thank you," replied the Judge. "I guess we had better adjourn to the street."

Some say the Judge adjourned more quickly than he usually adjourns and that he and his guests ran out, but others declare that he and his guests calmly lighted cigars, and, picking up their overcoats and hats, strolled out. At any rate, the Judge and his guests reached the sidewalk and stood on the opposite side of the street. The servants remained in the house to search for the fire. They found it in a smoky chimney, and, going on the roof, poured buckets of water down the chimney.

Meanwhile some one turned in an alarm of fire from the box on the Hotel St. Regis corner. When the firemen arrived they were told that Judge Gray's servants had drenched the smoky chimney and that there was no fire. Then the Judge and his guests went back to the house and began eating the second course.

The rattle of the fire engines and the tooting of the whistles stirred up those in the neighboring dwellings and hotels. They swarmed into the street with wraps over their heads, and did not go back to their abodes until assured that it was only a chimney fire in Judge Gray's house.

SELLS HOPE HALL.

Mrs. Booth Parts with Her Much-Objected-To Convict Home.

Hope Hall, the temporary home for ex-convicts which has been maintained for seven or eight years at Flushing by Mrs. Maud Ballington Booth of the Volunteers of America, has been sold. The purchaser is George K. Carpenter, a Manhattan real estate operator, who is understood to be acting for some one else. The price is said to have been $35,000. Mrs. Booth, it is said, paid about $10,000 for it.

The abandonment of Hope Hall will be very pleasing to Flushing, which, ever since the institution was started, has been protesting and objecting to it.

Mrs. Booth in a letter to Leon Case, Secretary of the Board of Trade of Flushing, said yesterday that she wished to be placed in a right light before the people of Flushing, and wanted it understood that she had neither been bought nor turned out of town. The sale of Hope Hall, she said, was not a victory for her enemies. No member of the committee of twenty-five which has been endeavoring to rid Flushing of the institution nor any of their associates had anything to do with the sale.

Mrs. Booth said she had two reasons to sell it. One was that with the greater amount of money realized she could provide a better home on the lines of Hope Hall. The second was that she realized that the agitation against the hall would result in keeping some men from accepting its shelter.

NATION'S OFFICERS GAVE MUCH AID TO JIMINEZ

A WOMAN AIDED IT, TOO

And, Says Cunningham, Who Loses His Suit for a Fee, Our Army Gave 482,000 Rounds of Ammunition.

Justice Fitzgerald of the Supreme Court dismissed yesterday the complaint in the suit of Joseph L. Cunningham, a man well known in official circles in Washington, to recover $25,000 from Gen. Jiminez, ex-President of Santo Domingo. Cunningham asked the $25,000 for services in connection with the fitting out in 1897 of the Fanita expedition, whose object turned out to be an attempt to aid in overthrowing President Heureaux.

The ostensible purpose of the expedition was to aid the Cuban insurrectionists. The plaintiff declares that he himself was fooled, and that he became suspicious only when he was introduced to several Santo Domingans at Mobile as the Fanita was about to sail.

Jiminez was associated with Gen. Morales and Gen. Garcia in the undertaking. The failure of the attempt, the death of Morales and a dozen of his followers, and the escape of Jiminez to Cuba, form one of the exciting episodes in the revolutionary history of the Black Republic.

The services for whose remuneration Cunningham, who is a big, stalwart, elderly man, with flowing side whiskers, sued, were of a rather delicate nature, including interviews with high officials in Washington, whose aid Jiminez sought. The plaintiff valued these services at $65,000. Jiminez referred to them as services rendered to "Uncle Sam," and thought Cunningham's price too high. He cut it to $25,000 and accepted Jiminez's note.

The Woman in the Case.

The agreement was sealed in an envelope, and is in possession of the Colonial Trust Company, which was put under an obligation not to give it up unless a payment of $2,000 was made to Mrs. Mary H. Fisher, concerning whom nothing has come out.

It was hinted in the trial of the case that the United States Government was backing the Fanita expedition to get Samana Bay, in Santo Domingo, as a coaling station, a favorite scheme of Gen. Grant's when he was President. Cunningham himself practically admitted that at times he was a secret agent of the Government, though not on the payrolls.

When the plaintiff took the stand yesterday he identified a bill of lading which he said was addressed to Jiminez, under the name of Rodriguez, at Mobile, by the Quartermaster of the United States. It was for 482,000 rounds of ammunition. The witness then identified the following letter, written on the letterhead of the House of Representatives:

> My Dear Morales: Don't forget to get the plans for navigating in the East Indies; and, if possible, indirectly find out how many miles are from Mobile to Cape Haitien, but this question must be from a person that has no connection with us, to avoid suspicion.
> If you cannot get the money from the doctor, and if Oscar does not want to give away the $1,200, we will have to get it from Mr. Cunningham or somebody else, as that amount of money is indispensable for expenses. Yours truly, JUAN J. JIMINEZ.

The negotiations in connection with the fitting out of the Fanita with arms and ammunition embraced all the stock features of modern melodrama, including a cipher code understood by Cunningham, Jiminez, and the War Department. The witness said that in one of these dispatches Jiminez urged Morales to confer with Miles.

"Who is Miles?" asked Lawyer E. P. Phillips, counsel for Cunningham.

"Gen. Miles, late commander of the United States Army," was the reply.

The witness said he supposed the Fanita was going to Cuba, and that he told Capt. Hall to obey orders.

"I suppose he went to Monte Cristi instead of Cuba, because he was told to," he continued. "Gen. Grant had plans made to seize Santo Domingo when he was President. These plans contemplated starting from Monte Cristi, and I suppose Jiminez decided to carry them out."

Cunningham was then cross-examined by Lawyer Perry Allen.

He was asked if he had not conferred with the United States Government as soon as he heard by cablegram of the failure of the expedition and the arrest of Jiminez. The witness replied that he had told an official of the Government that he wanted everything possible done for Jiminez. Cunningham admitted that he was interested in the expedition to the extent of $300,000 or $400,000, and that he had advanced money out of his income, which was then $10,000 or $12,000 a month.

"Did you know Capt. Hall?" asked Mr. Allen.

"Not very well then," was the reply, "but I knew him too well before I got away from him."

"Why did you risk so much money without security?"

"I Was a Big Stiff."

"Because I was a big stiff," replied Cunningham grimly.

"You say your services were worth $65,000, and you disbursed $2,500. Over how long a period was this?"

"From January to June."

"That would be at the rate of $130,000 a year," said the lawyer. "What were these services?"

"Getting the material for the expedition and introducing Jiminez to people in Washington," the witness replied.

"Did not Mrs. May H. Fisher advance some of the money?"

"She lent some," replied Cunningham.

Mr. Allen said that the sealed document in the possession of the Colonial Trust Company showed that Mrs. Fisher had a claim against it. The witness admitted her claim of $2,000 against the package, but declared that he didn't know how much she had advanced in all.

Several questions regarding the woman's claim were objected to, and the objections were sustained. The lawyer declared he simply wanted to know if she was a party to the suit.

The witness said that "various stores" for the expedition referred to in a paper marked "Frank H. Phipps, Ordnance Department," were obtained by Jiminez. The CARNEGIE GIFT DENOUNCED.

Mayor of Cincinnati Sorry the City Accepted a Library.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, April 12.—There has been talk over the fact that Mayor Dempsey did not mention the name of Andrew Carnegie in his speech formally accepting the new Walnut Hills Branch Library. The other speakers lauded Carnegie, but the Mayor did not refer to him. There was some question as to whether it was an oversight. The Mayor stated to-day it was not. He said:

"I purposely refrained from any reference to Carnegie, because I wanted to be perfectly honest in the matter. I have no deep admiration for a man who has made his millions out of the sweat and blood of the toiling classes, but who attempts to atone for the oppression by giving away buildings, and thus advertising himself as a philanthropist. The place his beneficence should have begun was in his workshop.

"In fact, I am inclined to regret that the great City of Cincinnati did not build and pay for the branch libraries, instead of receiving them as charity from a man who could have no real sympathy with a city of which he knew nothing, and in which he had no interests."

SPARTAN SHRINE UNBURIED.

Sanctuary of Artemis, Where Youths Were Scourged on Becoming Men.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

ATHENS, April 12.—A telegram from Sparta announces the discovery of the famous sanctuary of Artemis Orthia, before whose altar the Spartan youths were scourged when they were initiated into the privileges of manhood.

The site is on the bank of the Eurotas. Votive offerings of ivory and terra cotta and quantities of small leaden figures and pottery were also found, which confirms the belief that this was one of the most ancient Spartan shrines.

The yearly ceremony in Sparta of flogging youths till they bled before the altar of Artemis Orthia (the upright) was a relic of the custom, introduced into Sparta from the Crimea along with the worship of the goddess, of sacrificing human beings to her. These sacrifices were commuted by Lycurgus for the ceremony of flogging youths, but not till the custom of human sacrifices had spread to several parts of Greece, Asia Minor, and Italy.

The name "Orthia" was probably the result of the unbending posture of the ancient wooden imagie which the Spartans worshipped. They believed it to be the image which Iphigenia and Orestes brought away from Tauris, (the Crimea.)

Before battle the Spartans sought the favor of Artemis by the gift of a she goat.

ATHENS, April 12.—It is now ascertained that King Edward and Queen Alexandra will be present at the opening of the Olympian games.

The number of foreign competitors is now 689, including seventy Scadinavians, fifty British, and forty-two Americans.

Sixteen Cretan and fourteen Danish women have been entered for the gymnastic competitions.

NAPLES, April 12.—Robert Schauffler of Princeton University and residing at Irvington-on-Hudson, and Homer Byington, the American Vice Consul here, are about to go to Athens to attend the Olympic games.

AND THE WATER FLOWED ON

While Our Circumlocution Offices Made Reports on a Broken Main.

What Deputy Water Commissioner Cozier of Brooklyn regards as an astonishing illustration of the red tape methods in some of the city departments came to light yesterday. On March 28 a water main connected with a house at 240 Osborn Street, Brooklyn, broke and water began flowing into the cellar of the building.

The break in the main was reported to the policeman on post, who reported it to his Sergeant in the station, who reported it to his Captain, who sent a formal report to the Deputy Commissioner, who reported it to Commissioner Bingham, who being uncertain about the duty of his department in the matter referred it to the Corporation Counsel for an opinion.

The Corporation Counsel turned it over to an Assistant Corporation Counsel, who, after mature deliberation, referred it to the Water Commissioner, who sent the report over to Deputy Commissioner Cozier.

And in less than twenty minutes thereafter the Deputy Commissioner had men from his department at the house repairing the break. All this red tape unwinding had taken fifteen days, the escaping water in the meantime doing great damage.

"If the break had been reported to us immediately, as it should have been," said Mr. Cozier, "it would have been repaired in half an hour."

TAGGART FINDS HARMONY.

Chairman Says He Thinks Democrats Will Control the Next House.

Thomas Taggart of Indianapolis, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, came to New York yesterday on private business. While here he is profiting by the occasion to discuss a good deal of politics with his friends and associates in the late National campaign.

"I must decline to comment on Mr. Nicoll's recent discussion of the late campaign until I have seen Mr. Nicoll," said Mr. Taggart last night when questioned about the denunciation of Hearst at the Democratic Club a couple of weeks ago by De Lancey Nicoll, Vice Chairman of the National Committee.

"How about the radical sentiment in the party? Is it sweeping things before it?" was asked.

"I don't think so," replied Mr. Taggart. "I think the party is getting on a sound and harmonious basis. As for the Congressional elections this year, I honestly believe that we shall gain a very large number of seats and control the next House."

Chairman Taggart said he expected to see Vice Chairman Nicoll to-day for a long, heart-to-heart talk on the general situation.

FOUR INSURANCE BILLS PASS IN BOTH HOUSES

Go Through Unanimously and No Changes Are Permitted.

BOLD LOBBYIST IS PUT OUT

Not Heeding a Warning He Is Shown to the Door—"Big Bill" Passes Assembly.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 12.—By unanimous action the Senate and Assembly to-day passed three more of the special insurance bills which were framed by the investigating committee, and also the new bill introduced last week providing that a policy holder in a stock insurance corporation may become a Director therein whether or not he is a stockholder. That bill is intended to affect the Equitable Life Assurance Society.

In addition to these four, the Assembly, after defeating several proposed amendments, passed the "big bill," generally amending the insurance law, and sent it to the Senate for concurrence. The bills passed include the one relating to political contributions by corporations; the one which was amended by adding the word "knowingly" and related to reports made by insurance officers or employes, and the bill relating to lobbying.

Senator Grady, when the lobbying bill came up, said that he still thought that the high-priced lawyer in New York who did more to shape legislation under the guise of legal advice than did the little fellow who came up to make a speech before a committee in Albany, should be included in the bill, but as there seemed no way of bringing this about he would support the bill as it stood.

There still remain two bills to be passed. One relates to the amendment of the Penal Code relative to perjury, over which there has been seeveral hot battles, and the "big bill" amending the insurance law generally. The first was made a special order for Monday night. The latter was made a special order for next Wednesday, and it was agreed that the Senate should begin its session on that day an hour earlier.

Senator Brackett has six amendments to the "big bill," and Grady will fight several of its provisions. If it is amended it must go back to the printer, lie on the desk for three days, and so cannot come up for final passage until week after next.

Charges of lobbying were made to-day in the Assembly by Averill of Monroe during the insurance debate. The charge was made against a Buffalo attorney, though he was not specified by name, immediately following a severe criticism of Senator Armstrong for unseemly activity by Cox of Erie, who was making the chief fight for the assessment insurance companies.

Armstrong went about from desk to desk talking with members, when Cox called attention to his activity. Immediately Averill, who comes from Armstrong's old Assembly district, rebuked Cox and said:

"It is uncalled for and unkind for the gentleman from Erie to cast criticism upon Senator Armstrong. The Senator, when he came here this afternoon, was undoubtedly exercising his prerogatives as a member of the Legislature. I might well extend the same, or a more sweeping and specific criticism, against a lobbyist who has been active in one corner of this Chamber. I see now, Mr. Speaker, that he has been put out. It seems that the Sergeant at Arms has caused him to leave this Chamber. He no doubt represented interests that are here trying to break down the legislation and the work that this committee has produced. We should stand to back up the committee."

The attorney who lobbied against the bill because of its section relative to assessment companies got into a conference of Assemblymen while the debate was at its height. He disconcerted some of the members by his boldness. The Sergeant-at-Arms warned him, but he persisted and began to send for or hold up members one at a time. The police department of the House then went after him and showed him the door without ceremony.

The bills that went through to-day passed unanimously.

Palmer of Schoharie offered an amendment which provided that $50,000 should be the limit of salary that might be paid an official of an insurance company. It was defeated.

Cox made his fight in the cause of assessment companies and offered several amendments which would give them certain rights they will not enjoy under the bills drawn by Hughes and his colleagues. All were voted down.

ROOSEVELT TOUR IN 1907.

President Intimates He May Swing the Western Circle Next Year.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—It was stated at the White House to-day that President Roosevelt has taken up the question of a trip through the West during the Spring or Summer of 1907, although he has not reached any positive conclusion. The intimation is that he is very likely to make such a trip. He has received invitations from a number of institutions and cities in the West to visit them, and will accept if possible.

The President has tentatively agreed to attend the commencement exercises of the Missouri Agricultural College at Columbia, Mo., on June 5, 1907, and to-day he was invited to be present at the ceremonies incident to the semi-centennial celebration of the founding of the Michigan Agricultural College at Lansing just before or after the Missouri celebration. The President could not say definitely whether he would accept the invitation or not.

Queens Realty Boom Jumps Value of Land Left to the Church.

Through the sale of a gift tract of land, the treasury of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Long Island has gained the sum of $300,000. About thirty years ago a man named Maurice deeded to the diocese an eighty-acre tract of land on Maurice Avenue, Maspeth, as a site for some diocesan buildings. Because of the factories which sprang up in the neighborhood, the diocesan authorities decided not to build, but held the land.

The recent boom in Queens realty made the land worth many times its value when it was conveyed by Mr. Maurice. The Maurice family released the church from the conditions of the gift, and the land has been sold to a real estate company. The fund realized by the sale will be used for the charitable and missionary work of the diocese.

MOUNT TACOMA ACTIVE.

Report That It Is Sending Forth Smoke and Ashes.

Special to The New York Times.

PORTLAND, Ore., April 12.—A dispatch from North Yakima, Washington, says that word was received to-day from John Campbell, who is holding claims for Yakima men at the eastern base of Mount Tacoma, that the mountain on Wednesday buried out ashes.

The mountain has been shrouded in clouds for some time, and on Tuesday morning rumbling was heard by Campbell. Tuesday night smoke was observed. It was not until Wednesday morning that Campbell paid any attention to the noise, when a wind brought ashes from the mountain peak to the place where he was working.

WITTE OUSTS CHIEF FOES.

Durnovo and Akimoff Resign as Result of Russian Elections.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 12.—I hear that M. Durnovo, Minister of the Interior, and M. Akimoff, Minister of Justice, have resigned. Premier Witte is said to have decided to throw them overboard directly he saw how the elections were going.

Count Witte went to Tsarskoe-Selo on Tuesday and MM. Durnovo and Akimoff went there to-day. According to one story Count Witte asked the Emperor to choose between them. According to another version, Durnovo and Akimoff were deliberately sacrificed in order to pacify the Constitutional Democrats and assure the new loan.

TWO FIRES AT THOMASVILLE.

Piney Woods Hotel and Three Blocks of Stores Destroyed.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., April 12.—The worst fire in the history of the city visited Thomasville to-night, when the famous resort hotel, the Piney Woods, was burned to the ground.

Incendiaries or flying sparks fired the south portion of the town, known as Sandy Bottom, just as the Piney Woods fire was under control. Three blocks of small stores were swept away.

CONRIED WILL BAR ST. LOUIS.

Said to Have Lost $10,000 in Three Days of Grand Opera There.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, April 12.—St. Louis has been wiped off the map, so far as Heinrich Conried and the Metropolitan Opera Company are concerned, declared Ernest Goerlitz, Conried's personal representative, as he was departing from this city early this morning for Kansas City. In the three days' engagement here he says they lost $10,000.

"St. Louis is not capable of appreciating grand opera," he declared. "'The Burglar's Daughter' or a vaudeville show ought to go in this town, but not grand opera."

Walter L. Sheldon, President of the Ethical Culture Society, to-day replied to Mr. Goerlitz, declaring that the trouble lay not with St. Louis, but with Conried.

"St. Louis appreciates grand opera all right," he said, "but it was an insult to the city for Mr. Conried to come here during Holy Week."

PROFIT IN EARLY TROUT.

Fish Shipped Here Alive from Long Island Hatcheries.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTPORT, L. I., April 12.—The owners of fish hatcheries in this section are now reaping a harvest through the sale of trout in the New York markets, where, in view of the season not opening up State before the 15th, Long Island now enjoys a virtual monopoly of the trade. The season opened here on March 31.

Owing to the construction of the game laws, it is necessary to transport the trout alive, and they are kept in this condition until ready for the consumer. At this season, before the shipments from the upper part of the State have begun, the Long Island trout find a ready market at $1 a pound at the uptown restaurants and clubs of New York City. After April 15, when heavy consignments of trout are received and the price is reduced in consequence, the Long Island shipments cease.

UNION LEAGUE TO BUILD?

Rumors to That Effect After Monthly Meeting—Bigger Membership.

The regular monthly meeting of the Union League Club, held last night at the clubhouse in Fifth Avenue, was attended by more than 300 members. While nothing was given out officially, it was said that action had been taken to enlarge the membership. As soon as the meeting was over there was a rush to the book in which the names of candidates are entered. Fully fifty men formed in line to enter names.

The club may soon build a new house and money will be needed for this purpose. It was said that 100 new members are to be admitted, each paying $500 when elected to the club. This would create a $50,000 fund.

DOWIE SHIFTS AGAIN.

Now Demands Restoration to Full Power in Zion.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 12.—John Alexander Dowie, deposed head of Zion, took another tack to-day, and rejected Voliva's offer of a $7,500 annuity that carried with it a perpetual vacation to be spent in Mexico. Despite his counsel's assurance last night that Dowie was prepared to compromise with his enemies, Dowie to-day would listen to nothing less than a complete restoration to temporal and ecclesiastical power and public withdrawal of charges against his private life.

It looked to-night as though there was nothing left but long and expensive litigation to determine how far Dowie's rights to the property in Zion City extended. His attorneys are now preparing a bill to be filed in chancery.

MUSKEGON, Mich., April 12.—At John Alexander Dowie's splendid Summer home Ben MacDhui, an auctioneer to-day sold for $2,500 expensive furniture and fittings estimated to be worth $20,000. Ben MacDhui was included in the property which the Voliva faction recently took over through power of attorney.

ASH FALL IN NAPLES GREATER THAN EVER

But Vesuvius Is Becoming Calmer and Panic Is Decreasing.

THE KING VISITS OTTAJANO

Denounces a Priest Who Deserted His Post—A Princess Has to Walk Twelve Miles.

NAPLES, April 12.—While the news from Mount Vesuvius to-day is reassuring, the conditions in Naples are such as to make it difficult to realize that things are actually better. The wind is blowing from the volcano toward Naples, carrying the ashes in this direction. This evening the fall of ashes and cinders here became worse than at any time since the eruption began.

The scenic effects vary from hour to hour. This evening in the north the sky was chocolate-colored and lowering. Fort San Martino, towering above the town, could only just be seen, while Castel dell' Ovo was boldly marked, seeming like silver against the brown sky. To the south, beyond the smoke zone, lay, smiling and sunny, Posilipo and its peninsula, while far away glistened the sea, a deep blue, on which the islands seemed to float in the glow of the setting sun.

From the observatory on Mount Vesuvius, where Director Matteucci is continuing his work, the scene is one of great impressiveness. To reach the observatory one must walk for miles over hardened but hot lava covered with sand, until he comes to a point whence nothing can be seen but vast, gray reaches, sometimes flat and sometimes gathered into huge mounds. Above, the heavens are gray like the earth beneath, and seem just as hard and immovable. In all this lonely waste there is no sign of life or vegetation, and no sound is heard except the low mutterings of the volcano.

Main Crater Growing Larger.

The main crater of the volcano is becoming larger.

Every day that passes gives new evidence of the magnitude of the catastrophe. To-day's visit of King Victor Emmanuel to Ottajano revealed new tragedies. At one point his Majesty was obliged to abandon his motor car and go forward on horseback amid constant danger. His horse floundered through four feet of ashes and stumbled into holes, while horse and rider were blinded by the fall of large cinders and were threatened by falling basaltic masses.

In the presence of the King 129 more bodies were extricated from the ruins, while ashes and red sand continued falling. The dead at Ottajano are said to number 550.

The King was deathly pale. To a parish priest who came to him he said, "How did you escape?"

"I put myself in safety," replied the priest.

"What do you mean?" asked the King.

"Realizing the danger," was the priest's reply, "I had left for Nola."

The King flushed with anger. "What!" he cried, "you, a minister of God, were not here to share the danger of your people and administer the last sacraments! You did very wrong."

The King left Naples early this morning for San Giuseppe, Ottajano, and Terzigno, in order to ascertain personally the actual situation at these towns. He inspected all the "camp hospitals" in which the troops are caring for suffering refugees, speaking to the injured, comforting them, and asking them what he could do to relieve their distress. On receiving a reply indicating a sufferer's desire that something be immediately done on his or her behalf the King gave orders to have the desire fulfilled.

As the King bent over a man whose right leg had been amputated the sufferer, replying to his Majesty's question regarding his immediate necessities, said:

"Send me my son, who is serving as a soldier."

The King clasped the man's hand and exclaimed:

"My poor fellow! I can do much, but to grant your request would mean breaking the laws, which I must be the first to respect. I would give anything I have were it possible by so doing to send your son to you, but I cannot do so."

There were tears in the King's eyes as he turned away from the sorrowing father's bedside.

Queen Has to Turn Back.

Queen Helena was with the King when he started for Ottajano, but she was obliged to turn back, as the task was not one suitable for a woman. She spent most of the day in visiting the injured people in Naples hospitals and inspecting the shelters provided for refugees.

A woman in the crowd before the palace was heard to say to a friend to-day:

"My daughter, who lives at Torre del Greco, is a refugee. She has been received in the Royal Palace, lives like a Princess, and has been spoken to by the Queen! May the saints protect her Majesty!"

The presence of the King in Naples has acted as a tonic on the Neapolitans, who have a superstitious veneration for his Majesty. Men were heard to exclaim to-day:

"He comes, but the Pope stays at home. Long live the King!"

This feeling, however, does not interfere with the Neapolitans' veneration for their saints.

The Princess of Schleswig-Holstein set out in her automobile this morning to visit the hospitals in the desolated towns, but after a time the motor car became disabled, and the Princess was forced to return on foot a distance of twelve miles, walking all the way through three feet of ashes. The Princess's endurance surprised the Neapolitans, some of whom declared that she must have been aided by the saints, for never before had a woman accomplished such a task.

The popular costume of those who can afford it here consists of automobile coats, caps, and goggles, which enable the wearer to maintain a semblance of cleanliness, but the people generally have to be contented with paper masks and raised umbrellas. The drivers of trolley cars are wearing masks of some transparent material under the visors of their caps.

More shops were opened to-day, and the city is slowly resuming its normal life.

Large contingents of troops have arrived here, affording a military force sufficient successfully to meet all eventualities. The garrison has been doubled, and sailors ordered ashore from the squadron in the bay will help to restore and maintain public order.

Houses Still Collapsing.

From all quarters come reports that the situation has ameliorated, but ashes from Mount Vesuvius are falling everywhere, houses are collapsing and burying their occupants, and roads near the volcano are no sooner opened than they are closed again by falling cinders.

The latest reports show that 248 houses have been damaged at Portici, 195 at San Giovanni and Teduccio, 432 at Resina, and 1,000 at Torre del Greco. It is impossible to determine the number of buildings demolished at Torre dell' Annunziata. It is estimated that about 5,000 houses in all have been destroyed or rendered uninhabitable.

In the villages on the Ottajano side of the mountain all the houses are damaged. At Nola desolation reigns, the place having been almost entirely abandoned.

There was an incipient riot at Torre dell' Annunziata to-day, due to the fact that the authorities ordered the closing of a church which was considered unsafe. The troops promptly restored order.

At Bosco Trecase thieves this morning entered some of the houses of the better class of inhabitants in the outskirts of the town and stripped them of everything valuable.

It is noticed that the birds have completely deserted the Vesuvius district. Thousands of them died from suffocation.

Some extraordinary escapes from death have been recorded. A man and his four children were rescued after having been lost in the ash-covered wilderness for fifty-six hours. They were terribly exhausted and seemed more like skeletons than human beings.

Firemen Sent from Sicily.

Firemen have been sent from Palermo and other places to the villages in this vicinity which have suffered the most from the fall of ashes in order to assist in removing the ashes from the roofs and relieve the exhausted soldiers. Camp kitchens have been established at a number of places and free meals are being distributed wherever it is possible.

A committee has been formed to collect funds and organize assistance for the relief of the sufferers. It is presided over by the Duke of Aosta. The Government heads the subscription list with $100,000. The amount collected up to the present is $300,000.

The American steam yacht Nahma, with Mrs. Robert Goelet and a party of friends on board, has arrived at Palermo. They witnessed the eruption of Mount Vesuvius from Amalfi, on the Bay of Salerno, not far from Naples, and give a vivid description of the scene.

In spite of the fact that many Government officials have arrived here to reinforce the local officers, the congestion of the telegraph bureaus is indescribable. A telegram sent from Paris at 6 P. M. yesterday was not delivered until 9 o'clock this morning.

A SEA OF DULL BROWN LAVA.

R. U. Johnson Tells of the Ruin Around the Mountain.

NAPLES, April 12.—The following description of the conditions in the country surrounding Mount Vesuvius was written for The Associated Press by Robert Underwood Johnson, associate editor of The Century Magazine:

"I had the unexpected opportunity to realize the magnitude of the disaster by personal observation in a trip entirely around Vesuvius.

"Since the Chicago fire I have seen nothing so terribly impressive. Twenty years will not repair the damage, which includes the destruction of four whole villages. With a change of wind or slightly greater propulsion of the seismic force the same fate might extend to other segments of the circle of which Vesuvius is the centre.

"Arriving from Rome two hours late by train I joined a party of two Italian gentlemen and two English ladies, including Miss Underwood, the Rome correspondent of The London Standard. We caught a train for Torre dell' Annunziata, three miles this side of Pompeii and two miles from the southern end of the wedge of lava which destroyed Bosco Trecase. We had a magnificent view of the eruption eight miles away. At Torre del Greco we ran under a terrifying pall, apparently a hundred feet above, the solidity of which was soon revealed by the moonlight.

"We reached Torre dell' Annunziata at 3 o'clock in the morning. There was little suggestion of a disaster as we trudged through the sleeping town to the lava, two miles away. The brilliant moon gave us a superb view of the volcano, and a gray-brown mass rising, expanding, and curling in with a profile like a monstrous Cyclopean face. But nothing in mythology gives a suggestion of the fascination of this awful force, presenting sublime beauty above, but in its descent filled with the mysterious malignance of God's under world.

"We reached the lava at a picturesque, cypress-planted cemetery on the northern boundary of Torre dell' Annunziata. It was as if the dead had effectually cried out to arrest the crushing river of flame, which pitilessly engulfed the statue of St. Anne, with which the people of Bosco Reale tried to stay it.

"We climbed on the lava. It was cool above, but still alive with fire below. We could see dimly the extent of the destruction beyond the barrier of brown which had closed the streets, torn down the houses, invaded the vineyards, and broken Cook's railway.

"A better idea of the surroundings was obtained at dawn from the railway. We saw north what was left of Bosco Trecase—a great, square, stone church and a few houses in a sea of dull brown lava. North and east rose a thousand patches of blue smoke, like swamp miasma. All was dull and desolate slag, with nowhere the familiar serpentine forms of the old lava streams. In terrible contrast with the volcanic evidences were strong cypresses and blooming camellias in the neighboring cemetery.

"We ate a hasty luncheon before sunrise, when the great beauty of the scene was revealed. The column now seemed higher and more massive, rising to three times the height of Vesuvius. The south edges, floating toward the sea, showed exquisite curved surfaces, due to the upper moving current. It was like the decoration of the side of a Greek sarcophagus. As a yellow dust hangs over Naples and hides the volcano, I count myself fortunate to have seen all day from leeward this spectacle of changing, undiminishing beauty.

"My companions left for Naples after driving to Pompeii. I had not thought of further experiences except to compare the ancient destruction with the present. After three hours' sleep I went to the excavations, expecting to return to Naples by the afternoon train, but I met E. A. Bowen of New York, who gave such an alarming account of his experience on the train coming through on Monday in the darkness at Torre del Greco, when the passengers in the crowded cars were besieged by screaming, excited refugees amid a rain of cinders, that I concluded to return by the north, first visiting the eastern wedge of destruction, which was central at San Giuseppe.

"With Mr. Bowen I left Pompeii in a car, expecting to strike the edge of the lava. What was my surprise to find no new lava at San Giuseppe. Four towns were here destroyed in different ways—namely, by rain, cinders, and ashes, which could not be skirted, for they lay everywhere in a mass which had broken nearly every roof.

"The wedge east of the volcano thus destroyed extends ten miles at least, with a width of twenty or thirty miles. Fancy a rich and thickly populated country of vineyards lying under three to six inches of ashes and cinders of the color of chocolate, while to the west the volcano, in full activity, is distributing to the outer edges of the circle the same fate, and you will get an idea of the desolation of the scene, a tragedy colossal and heartrending. It takes time for such a calamity to be realized.

"The King, the Duke of Aosta, and Premier Sonnino have been on the ground. For the present the roads are almost impassable even for automobiles.

"Two miles below San Giuseppe we struck cinders which the soldiers were shoveling, making a narrow road for the refugees. Our wagon driver begged off from completing his contract to take us to San Giuseppe. We had not the heart to insist, so the rest of the journey to the railway at Palma, eight miles, was made laboriously on foot for three hours through sliding cinders. In many places temporary shelters had been built by the roadside, like children's play houses. Here women were huddled with their bedding, awaiting the coming of supplies which the army had begun to distribute. The men were largely occupied with shoveling cinders from the stronger roofs and floors into heaps three to six feet deep alongside the roadside.

"Many two-wheeled carts loaded with salvage, drawn by donkeys or pushed by peasants, were making their way along, the women with bundles on their heads or carrying poultry. In the square of San Giuseppe was an encampment of soldiers, with low tents. Near a destroyed church, in coarse linen shrouds, were the bodies of 83 of the 105 persons who there lost their lives. The peasants were sad, but uncomplaining; in fact, for so excitable a people, they were wonderfully calm. As evidence of the thrift and self-respect of these peasants, during the afternoon we were not once asked for alms.

"At Palma, where we succeeded in catching a train for Naples, we heard great cheering, looked back and saw that the General commanding the district had arrived, and the people were running to greet this representative of the Government's active assistance to the stricken region.

"This is a sad year for Southern Italy, the second terrible disaster within a few months. To judge from what I learned from the peasants, there is likely to be a substantial increase in emigration to the United States by reason of this calamity, of which the end is not yet."

ASKING FOR AMERICAN AID.

Mayors of Chicago and Boston Act—Red Cross Announcement.

CHICAGO, April 12.—Mayor Dunne today issued a proclamation, asking the people of Chicago to contribute for the relief of those who have suffered by the eruption of Mount Vesuvius.

BOSTON, April 11.—Count Gaetani, the Italian Consul in this city, has been asked by Mayor Fitzgerald to confer with him relative to a proposed movement to aid the stricken people in the vicinity of Mount Vesuvius.

It is expected that a meeting of prominent citizens will later be called for the purpose of raising contributions.

Officers of the New York State Branch of the Red Cross received information from the Executive Committee of the National organization yesterday to the effect that it would receive and forward contributions for the victims of the eruption of Mount Vesuvius. The State branch at once began the work of obtaining subscriptions.

It is announced that funds for the relief of the Italians should be sent to Jacob H. Schiff, Treasurer of the New York State Branch of the Red Cross, 500 Fifth Avenue, and marked "For Italian relief." Contributions for the Japanese famine fund will continue to be received at the same office. These contributions should be marked, "Japanese famine fund."

COLLIER OFF FOR AUSTRALIA.

Actor Starts on His Tour, After Settling His Wife's Suit.

William Collier, the actor, left this city yesterday with his company on his way to San Francisco, whence he will sail for Australia, where he will make an extended tour. Before he departed he settled the suit his wife had brought against him.

Mr. Collier appeared before Justice Kelly, in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, to testify in his wife's action to compel him to sell certain property owned by him in St. James, L. I.

Last year Mr. and Mrs. Collier separated, and he agreed to pay her $100 a week and to sell his property, giving her half of the proceeds. The allowance has been paid regularly, but the property has not been sold, because no person has offered to pay $20,000, the value fixed by Mr. Collier.

"Will you sell this property as soon as you get an offer of $20,000 or more?" asked Justice Kelly.

"I surely will," responded Collier.

After some debate Justice Kelly directed that Mr. Collier leave a deed for the property with his lawyer, and that the value of the property be determined at a hearing in court.

BRACKETT DODGES A VOTE.

He Slips Away When Senate Passes the Osteopathy Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 12.—The Senate to-day passed, by a vote of 32 to 12, the Osteopathy bill introduced by Senator Hinman. At the hearing several weeks ago many prominent physicians of New York, among them Dr. Jacobi, appeared against it, but the Judiciary Committee, of which Senator Brackett is Chairman, voted it out of committee. Brackett, however, dodged the final vote on the bill. In spite of a call of the Senate, Brackett excused himself, on the plea that some one was waiting in the corridor to talk to him. He came back just after the vote had been announced.

The bill provides that the osteopaths may not administer drugs or operate as surgeons, and they must pass a Regents' examination and shall have been instructed for three years in a licensed school of osteopathy.

Sleepwalker Drowned in Pond.

HARRISVILLE, R. I., April 12.—Mrs. Hormidas St. Amond fell into a small pond near her home to-day, while walking in her sleep, and was drowned. The body was found to-day. Mrs. St. Amond was 30 years old.

MAXIM GORKY VISITS THE TOMB OF GRANT

Rides in an Auto and Eats a St. Regis Luncheon.

MARVELS AT ALL HE SEES

Wonders at the Absence of Soldiers and at Happy Faces in the Streets—Authors to Meet Him.

Maxim Gorky got his first daylight view yesterday of the New York that lies beyond the range of vision from his hotel window. In an automobile he rode up Fifth Avenue and through Central Park and Riverside Drive. He visited Grant's tomb and took luncheon at the St. Regis Hotel. As the different sights were pointed out to him he manifested as much delight and wonder as a boy turning over the leaves of a new picture book for the first time.

Gorky's wife accompanied her husband and shared in his delight. Their host was Joseph Mandelkern, a real estate dealer, who, while traveling in Russia last Autumn, was entertained at the home of the Russian author. M. Burenin, Gorky's friend and private secretary, went along with them.

The sun was low over the Palisades when the automobile rolled up to the mausoleum where Gen. Grant's body lies entombed. The lone policeman on guard near the entrance to the tomb hurried forward with polite eagerness, and, opening the door of the motor car, assisted the members of the party to alight.

"Wonderful!" exclaimed Gorky in Russian. "Wonderful!" And he grasped the hand of the policeman which he wrung while his blue eyes sparkled.

In his grave, emphatic way he began to say polite things in Russian to the astonished policeman, who did not understand a word.

"This is a wonderful country, surely the Promised Land," he resumed, turning to Mr. Mandelkern. "I hope I shall live to see the day when things are this way in Russia. In my country there would not have been one policeman, but a company of soldiers to scowl at you and order you about and a battery of guns in front of a hero's grave."

Gorky knows all about Gen. Grant and the struggle for the Union, and has surprised his friends by his knowledge of American history. He entered the mausoleum, and with uncovered head stood for a long while with his glance fixed on the sarcophagi that hold the bodies of Gen. Grant and his wife. The others in the party formed a group behind him and left him undisturbed.

When they left the dead and returned to the living, Gorky remained on the steps of the tomb and looked out over the river. As he saw the broad sweep of the Hudson, the villa-dotted Palisades on the other side, and further south the smoking chimneys of factories on the Jersey shore, the puffing tugs on the river, and the procession of foot passengers and carriages on Riverside Drive, he exclaimed:

"What a marvelous country!"

Gorky told his host that he liked to look at the faces of the people he met in the streets.

"They look so happy, so conscious of their rights," he said. "I hope we shall see faces like that in Russia before long, but we don't see them now. They look like a procession of mourners—the people you meet on the streets of St. Petersburg and Moscow in these days of sorrow and suffering."

As the automobile was driven rapidly down Riverside Drive Mr. Mandelkern pointed out to his guests the residences of Charles M. Schwab and other wealthy Americans. He told the Russian writer that in the aggregate there was as much money represented in the possessions of the wealthy men of this city as in the entire wealth of Russia.

"I hope no part of it will be subscribed to the national loan the Russian Government is trying so hard to raise," said the author. "In the first place, because I would not like to see any American lose his money, and in the second, because I think it would be unworthy of any true American to furnish money for the purchase of guns and bullets with which to murder peaceful, liberty-loving Russians who are trying to gain their freedom."

All through the trip Gorky commented on the scarcity of policemen and the absence of soldiers.

"In a Russian city almost every other man one meets is either a soldier or a policeman," he said. "I haven't seen a single soldier all day, and only two policemen. Marvelous!"

In Central Park Gorky saw squirrels feeding from the hands of children and sparrows fighting for crumbs about their feet. Gorky is a lover of nature and of animal life, and his eyes sparkled with delight as he saw the little houses built in the trees for birds and squirrels.

"Even the squirrels and the little gray birds seem to realize that they have the right to—what is it you say in your Constitution?"

"To life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness," said Mr. Mandelkern.

At the St. Regis Mr. Mandelkern gave his luncheon in a private dining room, because the Russian writer did not wish to enter the public dining room. After luncheon Gorky, to please his host, consented to smoke a Havana cigar. He made a sad job of it, being used only to Russian cigarettes.

Gorky and his party were taken on a tour of the kitchen and wine cellars of the establishment. The Russian marveled anew at what he saw.

"Neither the Grand Dukes, nor even the Czar, have anything like this," he said. "And yet they say in Russia that this country is far behind Europe in this sort of thing."

Mark Twain and W. D. Howells called upon Gorky at his apartments in the Hotel Belleclaire last evening. They remained with him for about half an hour discussing literature, and invited him to attend a literary dinner about a fortnight from now. Gorky accepted the invitation.

Some waiting reporters waylaid Mr. Clemens and Mr. Howells in the hotel lobby after their call. When Mr. Clemens was asked regarding the purpose of their visit he made signals of distress to Mr. Howells, who was some distance away, and said:

"Come here, Howells. You don't look as if you had any information. You are a good man; come back here and tell them all about it, and be sure to make it a private talk so as to get it in the papers."

Mr. Howells modestly averred that the idea of the dinner had originated with Mr. Clemens.

"Yes," said Mark Twain, "we are going to offer Gorky the literary hospitality of the country. He is big enough for the honor. It is going to be a dinner with only authors and literary men present. We want to do it in proper style, and will have authors not only from New York, but from Chicago, and we may have some literary geniuses from Indiana, where I believe they breed 'em."

Edwin Markham, Robert Hunter, and Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Scott dined with Gorky and his wife last evening. Mr. Hunter said that the appeal on behalf the revolutionary movement might be issued on Monday, and that some additional names of committee members would probably be announced then. Among Gorky's callers yesterday was Prof. Montague Donner of the Erasmus High School. Prof. Donner is a Finlander by birth, and familiar with conditions in that country.

William M. Bush a Suicide.

Special to The New York Times.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., April 12.—The body of William M. Bush, formerly proprietor of the Hotel Newman in Providence, was found lying on the roadside near the State farm at Oaklawn today. There was a bullet hole in his head, and the Coroner said it was a case of suicide. Mr. Bush, who was 47 years old, was the first proprietor of the Newman House, which he opened in 1897. Two years ago he retired, owing to business reverses. Since then he had been engaged in business at Ninety-seventh Street and Broadway, in New York.

witness admitted that he "may have opened up the means of getting them," and said again that the money to be paid to him for a trip to Washington was for his interviews with officials in behalf of Jiminez, whom he later introduced to them.

High Official Hidden.

Cunningham's lawyer objected to the details of his client's services being revealed, as they were not pertinent, inasmuch as the simple face of an agreement was the meat of the case. After some argument, Cunningham said that he thought there was something funny about the business, when Morales and Jiminez changed their names upon reaching Mobile, and he was introduced to so many Santo Domingans. He declared, however, that if he had known that his services were in the interests of such a dangerous venture he would not have given them for anything like $65,000.

"Did you keep quiet after you heard of the failure of the expedition?" asked the lawyer.

"I did," replied Cunningham, dryly. The spectators laughed.

"Do you know whether the arms and ammunition mentioned were procured as a result of your personal efforts?"

"I think so," replied the witness.

Cunningham admitted that he had done work for the Government, and that sometimes he was paid for it, but that he was not on the pay roll. Pressed on this point, Cunningham suddenly remembered that he was Postmaster at Greenville, N. J., many years ago, and that he was Postmaster in a Pennsylvania village when he was a young man. The witness was not compelled to disclose the nature of his more recent services. His lawyer said such disclosures were against public policy, and Justice Fitzgerald ruled that the questions asked him were too broad.

The witness said with respect to the Fanita expedition that he may have rendered a service to the United States Government in helping Jiminez. He had told the officials that Jiminez intended to help Gen. Gomez in Cuba, and he believed what he said.

"After Jiminez was arrested," he continued, "I had a talk with a Government official. He said he was surprised that Jiminez had deceived and fooled him, and that Jiminez had got him into an awful mess, and that if it was known that he had had anything to do with it, he would get into serious trouble. I told him that Jiminez had fooled me also."

It was the gossip in the courtroom yesterday that this particular official was high in the Navy Department.

Had to Pay Mrs. Fisher First.

A copy of the document in the trust company's hands was at last produced. It is in Spanish. Cunningham said he could not read Spanish, but he had understood that the agreement to pay him $25,000 in American gold was written in English. He said he gave the document to Percy S. Dudley, Mrs. Fisher's counsel, to secure her to the extent of $2,000.

A letter from Lawyer Dudley was read. He said that a note for $25,000 was in a sealed envelope deposited with the Colonial Trust Company, and that it was to be returned when payment of $2,000 was made to Mrs. May H. Fisher. A copy of the agreement was next admitted. It set forth that $25,000 was to be paid to Joseph L. Cunningham for moneys advanced for the furtherance of the Republic of Santo Domingo.

Justice Fitzgerald found that one of the conditions of the agreement was that the money was to be paid if a regular Government was established by the revolutionary party within two months. No evidence was offered in support of that fact, so the complaint was dismissed.

TORNADO DESTROYS TOWN.

Two Reported Killed and Many Injured in Briggs, Texas.

BERTRAM, Texas, April 12.—The town of Briggs, about eighteen miles north of this place, in this county, was swept by a tornado about 5 o'clock this evening and almost completely destroyed. Two persons are reported killed and thirty injured.

All the telephone wires out of Briggs are down for a distance of three miles. The school building was demolished and every business house in town was either badly damaged or destroyed.

The tornado was preceded and followed by a heavy rain and hail storm, and crops were damaged. The town had a population of 250.

JERSEY LEGISLATURE QUITS.

Adjourns After the Busiest and Most Turbulent Session in Years.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, Friday, April 13.—Although the people of Trenton had been sound asleep for some hours, the clocks in both houses of the Legislature declared it to be 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon when the one hundred and thirtieth New Jersey Legislature passed into history at 2 o'clock this morning.

The closing hours brought out the same sort of wrangling that has marked every session since the Legislature first met. It was the noisiest, the hardest-working, and probably the most efficient Legislature in many years. When the time came for adjournment the stings of partisanship ceased smarting, and Leader Perkins assured Mr. Martin, the Colby leader, of his warm personal esteem, and the House, through Mr. Perkins, offered Speaker Samuel K. Robbins assurances of regard and loyalty and gave him a substantial testimonial of their good-will.

Most of the recommendations made by Gov. Stokes in his annual message to the Legislature have been enacted into law.

HEINZE'S COPPER PLANS.

Says He Is Going Into the Butte Field Extensively.

Special to The New York Times.

BUTTE, Mont., April 12.—F. Augustus Heinze hereafter will be associated in business with J. A. Coram of Boston, according to rumors current in this city. Heinze has made the statement that he is still in the Butte field, and will soon be operating as extensively as heretofore.

Mr. Coram has arrived here on a mission connected with the American Consolidated Copper Company, the $15,000,000 corporation recently launched in Maine by him and his Boston associates. A large copper smelter for Butte will be constructed.

ASKED PAWNBROKER $75 ON GEMS WORTH $5,000

STOLE IT FROM A PACKAGE

To Whom It Was Addressed the Police Haven't Found—They Wasted No Time on the Case.

A young man walked into the pawnbroking salesroom of Rothman & Spiegel, at 136 Park Row, last night shortly before 9 o'clock and offered for $75 a diamond necklace, which was appraised afterward at from $2,300 to $5,000 by the pawnbroker and his clerk. The young man was Edward Walsh, 18 years old, of 127 Washington Street. He said he was a waiter at the Café Savarin, at 120 Broadway.

The manager of the place, Joseph Lockmann, was amazed when the low value was put on the necklace, and took it to the rear window to show to a clerk, who said that he believed it was cheap at $2,500. Lockmann darted out of the back door and told Policeman Perkins of the Elizabeth Street Station. On the way back Perkins picked up Detectives Duffy and Scurry.

The detectives say the young man turned white when he saw that suspicion was directed against him, but stolidly offered the necklace again for $75. Then they questioned him, and in reply he said, first, that he had found the necklace; then that it belonged to his sister, Mamie, to whom some one had given it or bequeathed it, and that Mamie had given it to him to raise some money for the rent and to pay a few bills.

Then the detectives locked him up in the Elizabeth Street Station charged with being a suspicious person. The detectives then went to Walsh's house. They asked for the mother of the boy. She lived on the top floor of the building. Their first question was: "Who is the red-headed boy that chums with your son?"

"Why, that's John Renner; he lives at No. 123 on this street," replied Mrs. Walsh.

The detectives had asked the question because they saw a lanky youth with red hair following them when they took young Walsh to the station.

As they stood talking the detectives heard a soft sound just above their heads, and reasoned that it was some one crawling out through the scuttle on the roof. Duffy went downstairs quickly, and took his stand in front of No. 123. Detective Scurry went up through the scuttle to the roof and across the housetops to No. 123. He opened the scuttle there and went into the house.

In the apartment where Renner lived with his family the detective confronted him with the necklace story, and, according to Scurry, the tall, red-headed boy soon confessed.

The story he told the detectives was nearly complete, they say. He said that he and Walsh worked as drivers for the United States Express Company at the Jersey Central Railroad Station at Communipaw, N. J. They saw a package marked "jewelry" arrive on Wednesday night, and thought they would take a chance on making a "big haul."

To whom the package was addressed could not be learned. The police say that the cold-blooded way in which the Renner youth told of it was enough to raise suspicions of other robberies. Renner was taken to the Elizabeth Street Station and locked up as a "suspicious person."

The police got an expert jeweler to look at the diamond, and he placed its value at $5,000.

The necklace contains fifty-seven stones, ranging from three-quarters of a karat to one and a half karats each, set in platinum, with a gold base. The setting is Tiffany work.

QUIZ INTO JEROME PETITION.

Somebody Trying to Prove That There Were Forgeries in That.

The District Attorney's office discovered yesterday that printed copies of the following blank, apparently meant to be filled out as an affidavit, have been spread broadcast over the city:

——————— being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is a citizen of the United States, and resides at ——————; that deponent did not on the ——— day of ——— sign a petition which purports to be his signature, placing in nomination for the office of District Attorney one William Travers Jerome, under the emblem of the black square, known as the Jerome Nominators Emblem, and if deponent's signature appears on said petition it is in every respect a forgery and was not signed with his knowledge or consent.

At the head of this was printed the words "State of New York, County of New York," and lines appeared below the reading matter for the names of the signers and the acknowledgment of a notary.

While nothing could be learned as to the origin of this scheme, it was found that not only had copies been sent by mail to most of those who signed Mr. Jerome's nomination petition, but that men who called themselves notaries had been making a house-to-house canvass to obtain signatures.

The appearance of this document a few days after the arrest of Benjamin M. Goldberger, the clerk in the Register's office who has admitted having filed forged petitions for the nomination of William Randolph Hearst and his fellow-candidates on the city ticket of the Municipal Ownership League in the last election, made it generally believed about the Criminal Courts Building that the two incidents had some connection with each other.

Mr. Jerome did not know of the scheme when he started yesterday morning for Lakeville, Conn., to spend Easter holidays with his family, and no member of his staff would say anything on the subject in his absence. The origin of the document and the efforts to get signatures will be investigated.

CANADIANS OUTBID US.

American Company Loses Bridge Contract on Dominion Road.

Special to The New York Times.

OTTAWA, Ont., April 12.—Contracts aggregating $19,000,000 were awarded by the Dominion Government to-day for the construction of two sections of the National transcontinental Railway. In each case the lowest bidder got the contract.

The contract for the western section, from Winnipeg to Superior Junction, a distance of 245 miles, was awarded to J. D. McArthur of Winnipeg. The price is a little over $13,000,000, or a quarter of a million less than the Government estimate. The contract for the eastern section, from Quebec to La Tuque, was awarded to Hogan & McDonald of Montreal. The price is $5,300,000, and $700,000 less than the Government estimate.

The contract for the Cape Rogue steel viaduct went to the Dominion Bridge Company of Montreal for $320,000. The bid of the Phoenix Bridge Company of Philadelphia was the next lowest of the ten bidders on this last contract.

each company shall collect from each employe such amounts as may be levied by the organization monthly, the amounts thus collected at each colliery to be turned over to an authorized committee at the colliery," and substituting in lieu thereof this section:

"For the purpose of executing this agreement, or the award of the commission provided for herein, the companies shall deduct from the wages of every employe authorizing them to do so any amount designated in the authorization. The amounts so collected shall be paid over to the person or persons empowered to receive them."

You will thus observe that we have removed two seemingly insurmountable obstacles and have relieved you of the necessity of considering further what you are pleased to term "fundamental principles."

With these modifications we submit again our original proposition for your consideration, and if unacceptable to you in the form in which it is herewith presented we agree—subject to the following changes—to accept your proposal providing for an investigation and an adjudication by the Anthracite Coal Strike Commission.

First—Your proposal for a continuance of the award of the Anthracite Coal Strike Commission and the amended proposition submitted herewith shall be referred for arbitrament to the commission appointed by the President of the United States at the close of the anthracite strike in 1902. Should any of these gentlemen decline to serve the President, if he is willing to accept this responsibility, shall fill by appointment such vacancy or vacancies.

Second—The award of such commission shall be effective from April 1, 1906.

Third—Should this proposal receive your assent, the representative of the miners will call a convention immediately and recommend a resumption of work.

Baer's Short Refusal.

As soon as this had been read the operators withdrew to another room for consultation. They were gone for about ten minutes. On their return Mr. Baer made this reply on their behalf:

"We regret that you have not accepted our propositions. We do not feel that we can modify them.

"We will hereafter answer your communication of this date by letter, or if you desire a further meeting the time can be arranged now, or be hereafter fixed by the respective Chairmen."

There was no attempt to debate the points of difference. A brief discussion followed as to the time of the next meeting, and as it was impossible to appoint a date immediately, the matter was left to Mr. Baer and Mr. Mitchell, and the conference adjourned after being in session for forty minutes.

A fuller explanation of the brief statement of Mr. Baer was sought from Mr. Truesdale, President of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad.

"Does it imply," he was asked, "that there is any possibility of the operators receding from their position?"

"No," he replied. "It does not mean that. They are fully determined to stand by their proposition as submitted last Tuesday. The question now is, What will Mr. Mitchell do? It is not too much to say that at the present moment the negotiations between operators and miners are practically suspended."

"When will the operators send their letter to the miners?"

"It will be a detailed, formal answer, setting forth the position of the operators," answered Mr. Truesdale, "and it may take to the middle of next week to complete it."

When Mr. Mitchell returned to the Ashland House he was asked to explain the miners' answer.

Mitchell's Views.

According to him, there are two distinct suggestions of the matters which should be submitted to the Strike Commission. No question, he said, would be raised of the necessity of any fresh arbitration at all, and the commission would be invited to consider every phase of the mining industry instead of only the two points—wages and the constitution of the Conciliation Board—to which the operators desire to limit the inquiry. No mention of reduction of wages would appear in the terms of the reference.

In the first place the miners put forward the whole of their original demands with two modifications. They withdraw the implied recognition of the union, and suggest that the agreement should read be drawn between the operators and the "anthracite mine workers" instead of "United Mine Workers of America." They modify the demand for the "check-be bound to collect funds for the union from only those employes who notify them of their willingness to subscribe and the amount they wish to pay. According to the original section, every mine worker would be forced to contribute, whether he was a member of the union or not, and would have to submit to a deduction from his wages of whatever sum the union chose to levy.

With these amendments the miners insisted upon all their demands, the chief of which were the eight-hour day, 10 per cent. increase in wages, payment by weight instead of measure, the reform of the Conciliation Board, and a lot of minor matters, which took up the details of the industry.

If the operators are not willing to submit to an arbitration on these points alone, the miners, it is said, will agree to lay them before the Strike Commission along with those of the commission's own award of three years ago.

To neither of these proposals are the operators inclined in the least to listen. They regard the complete ignoring of their second proposal as a clever move to get rid of the proposed reference to a possible reduction of wages. They are still reluctant to throw the whole industry back into the melting pot, and note that the miners, so far from desiring greater permanence of conditions, cut down the term of the agreement to a bare twelve months. They consider the modified "check-off" proposal still very objectionable.

Unionizing, Operators Say.

It means in their eyes that every mine worker will be forced in a short time to become a member of the union and that they will be the instruments by which this is brought about. The liberty of any man to refuse to contribute to the union would be entirely illusory. Pressure of every kind would be brought to bear on those who refused, and life would not be worth living to the obstinate. At present there is a certain amount of liberty and a good many men manage to escape joining from one reason or another, but once the "check-off" system was established, the line between union and non-union would be drawn officially and there would be no possibility of any man getting off. At least this is the operators' view.

The Executive National Committee of the United Mine Workers will meet in Indianapolis next Tuesday, and Mr. Mitchell is going there. He does not expect to receive the reply of the anthracite operators until that is over, and they may delay their reply until they know the bituminous outlook. He will then reconvene the Scale Committee, and will probably ask them to sanction the summoning of a convention of the anthracite miners. With this body will rest the decision for or against a formal strike.

It was said at the Ashland House yesterday that the chances of a contest are great. The sub-committee and the Scale Committee are regarded as the conservative element among the miners, and at the district meetings the younger and more impulsive elements are expected to have force. Mr. Mitchell himself is represented as a restraining force, but he is handicapped, one of his friends said yesterday, by the fact that a large proportion of the miners are Poles and Hungarians, who do not understand English. To them his speeches have to be translated, and the interpreters, it is said, often color them according to their own desires.

As the delegates left for the train they were plainly depressed.

PHILADELPHIA, April 12.—Reports received here from all sections of the anthracite coal fields are that the mine workers are greatly disappointed at what they regard as a virtual suspension of negotiations between the operators and miners' representatives in New York. In the various districts the headquarters of miners' local unions were thronged the greater part of the day by expectant crowds seeking information concerning the result of the conference. The belief is generally expressed that President Baer's brief answer to the amendment proposed by Mr. Mitchell and the Scale Committee leaves but small hope for an amicable settlement of the questions at issue.

The opinion had prevailed that the negotiations would reach a stage to-day which would end the suspension of mining operations and permit the idle men to return to work pending a final agreement.

MINE WORKERS MOBBED.

Stoned, Clubbed, and Pursued Behind Barricades—Police in Fight.

Special to The New York Times.

WILKESBARRE, Penn., April 12.—A riot at the Franklin colliery of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, just outside the city, resulted in a call for aid upon Sheriff Davis and the State mounted police to-night. Forty men who were keeping up steam for the pumps were attacked by a crowd of 300 men as they left the colliery for home, and were stoned and clubbed. They had to rush back behind the barricades. The mob followed them to the gates, and surrounded the fence to prevent their escaping.

The police and the Deputy Sheriffs found a thousand angry men outside the barricades, and they had to draw their clubs and spur their horses to break through. Two of the leaders were captured. The crowd remained, and was so threatening that Sheriff Davis advised that no attempt be made to get the workmen to their homes, and they are now housed behind the barricades under guard.

FELL 125 FEET TO DEATH.

One Man Killed When Rope Broke—Strength and Coolness Saved Another.

The purchase of an old factory chimney at 137th Street and Canal Avenue by Edward Beacon of 58 East 158th Street, a sign painter, was made in the hope of adding to his savings. He thought that in the brick of the old stack he could make a fair profit.

Yesterday he rigged a scaffolding and hired Thomas Turner of 311 East 14th Street to help him tear down the chimney. The scaffolding was swung from iron hooks fastened in the chimney, and beside this slim platform was a guy rope. Turner was next this rope.

The men began work 125 feet in the air. They were warming up to a fast job when one of the ropes snapped and the two planks beneath them fell.

Beacon was whirled to the ground. Turner grabbed the guy rope as quickly as the planks fell from under him and slid to the ground. His employer lay dead at the base of the chimney with almost every bone in his body broken. Turner fainted when he realized what a close call he had had.

Tower Burns Like a Torch in Jersey.

NEWARK, N. J., April 12.—A spectacular fire which illuminated the country for miles destroyed the paint department of the De Witt Wire Cloth Works at Belleville this evening. The loss was about $5,000. The building was a high tower which was necessary for the handling of the product. It burned high in the air like a giant torch beyond the reach of the firemen.

Our new auto department.

IF there is anything in the line of automobile supplies that we have omitted from our stocks, we'd be glad to have customers call our attention to the fact. Second Floor.

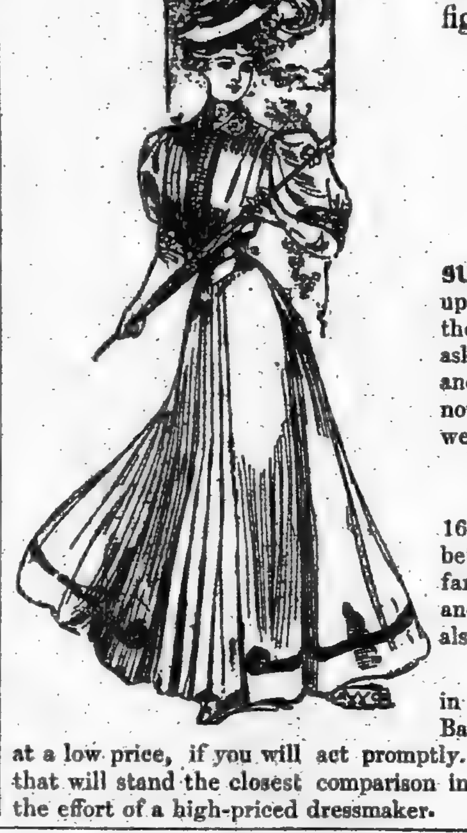
Our aim, in a few words, is to supply all the necessary articles of wearing apparel and those sundries for which there is frequent call at lower prices than the regular automobile supply house.

Can do so through the great buying prestige of our organization and the fact that owing to a great volume of sales a small dry goods profit on individual sales is sufficient.

Special to-day—175 men's linen auto dusters of liberal measurement and large full sleeves—all sizes—2.50 grade at.................. 1.25

250 ladies' all silk Gloria rubberized auto coats in grey, ivory, red; full sleeves and worth 22.50; special 12.50

Women's serge suits at 16.50.



HERE'S a suit bargain so exceptionally good that we would be derelict in our duty not to bring it into prominent notice. A suit that cannot be made to-day for a cent less than $20, and could only be sold at that figure at a close profit. Third Floor.

The material is an excellent grade of serge in either blue or black—cut after a very fashionable bolero Eton model—daintily trimmed with silk and Persian braids—made with the new Princess skirt and fitted bodice.

Have just 250 of these suits—all that we could get made up for us to sell at this figure. When they're gone, we shall be obliged to ask $20 or $22 for the same quality and style. There's nothing later, nothing more appropriate for Spring wear. $16.50

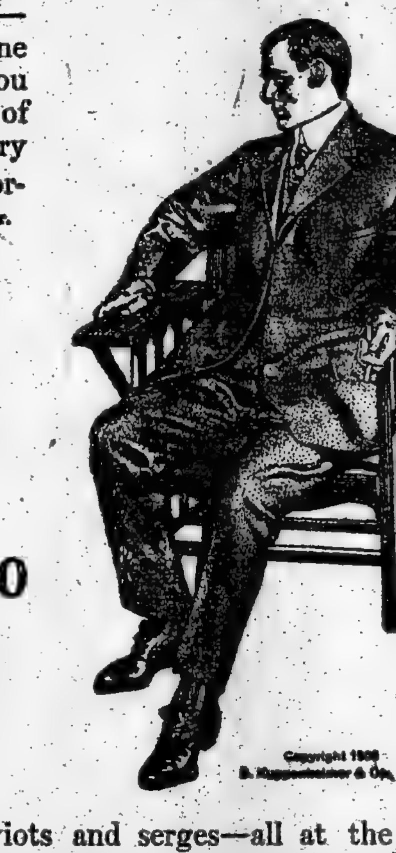
Gray worsted suits, 19.75.

Such a close second are these suits to those at 16.50 that we hesitated at first which to call the better value. Come in several handsome shades—fancy short Eton jacket styles with deep roll collar and turn back cuffs of white moire—short sleeves; also light fancy mixtures.

Remember that you have only two days left in which to choose your Easter suit—and on this Bargain Friday you can obtain an elegant costume at a low price, if you will act promptly. Certainly a great opportunity to acquire a suit that will stand the closest comparison in every detail of material and workmanship with the effort of a high-priced dressmaker.

Men's Easter suits for 15.50.

A SUIT of Kuppenheimer clothing means the same sort that many men go to custom tailors for—but at a far different price. Instead of paying $30 or $40, you pay 15.50—and when you take your place in the line of well dressed men next Sunday you will feel as comfortable as the best of them, because you'll know that every detail of your suit is in absolutely correct form. Second Floor.



The best custom tailor $30 suits are the only ones to compare with these 15.50 suits—made with the long cut coats now popular, form fitting, with snug collars—broad shoulders, deep side and centre vents.

We show them in the newest fabrics—most exclusive patterns—fashionable grays in fancy Scotch and English cheviots—handsome silk worsteds in new granites and slates—and also in the novel two-toned effects which are creating such a furore this season. 15.50

Then, for all occasions, the ever ready, always acceptable blue and black cheviots and serges—all at the same price. Every build is provided for in these generous assortments 15.50

Men's negligee shirts, 75c.

THERE are some dollar shirts in this collection, but the majority are 1.50 grades—not a thing wrong with them—patterns are the nobbiest this season.

Maker's samples—that's why they came to us at less than cost of making, and that's why you buy them at 75c

Both madras and percales with plaited or plain bosoms, the new box pleats—attached cuffs and coat model—or detached cuffs.... 75c

Men's sample terry bath robes.

EVERY man who appreciates the comfort of such a garment—for lounging about the house, going to and from the bath—will hail this item. Main Floor.

Manufacturer ran out of material after making a lot of samples, and could not get cloth at his own price—hence a big loss. Plenty of room in these well-cut bath robes — good terry cloth — with girdles—regular $3 to 4.50 grades—at...... 2.25

THERE are just 8,500 jardinieres in this purchase, and we count on disposing of the entire purchase before Easter. Have good reason to think we can, as no such values in jardinieres were ever offered in New York before. Basement

They're made of the finest majolica ware, of rich blended colorings, and will afford beautiful receptacles for Easter lilies—four sizes—7-inch, 8-inch, 9-inch, and 10-inch.

8-inch, regularly 60c., at....... 39c

9-inch, regularly 1.00, at....... 60c

10-inch, regularly 1.50 at.. 75c

Dealers are excluded from the benefits of this sale—and only 2 will be sold to a customer—no mail or telephone orders filled. Must make these restrictions, for we cannot duplicate them ourselves at anywhere near these prices in the wholesale market, all four designs in the four sizes.

About Queen Quality shoes.

THE high quality standard of Queen Quality shoes is at all times maintained despite the small profit margin. Within the past year the cost of leather has advanced greatly, and many of the well known brands have been cheapened in quality as an offset—not so with Queen Quality.

You'll find them as good as ever—fashioned in the same faultless manner on lasts that insure a comfortable fit. Just as easy to make shoes that are easy on the feet as any other kind. It's all in the knowing how, and the makers of Queen Quality shoes have learned the secret. $2.50 $3

Our Easter display includes a great variety of exclusive shapes in patent leather and kid. Among the Oxfords the wide ribbon ties are the favorites. Pumps are in great demand. Shoes that the exclusive shoe houses ask fancy prices for at the low range—$2.50, $3 and $3.50.

POLICE IN AMBUSH WAIT FOR HOTEL INCENDIARY

OTHER HOUSES GUARDED, TOO

Police Think Pyromaniac or a Discharged Employe Set Fires Wednesday Night—Other Theories.

When the lights had been dimmed in the Broadway Central Hotel last night there was hidden in every nook and corner of the place a detective from the Central Office. On the stairways, in the corridors, behind boxes piled high in the storehouse, and secreted in various other places between the cellar and the roof were detectives and policemen. They swarmed everywhere about the hotel, scanning the faces of guests who entered and departed, and watching strangers who drifted in and out of the café. Not since that day in January, 1872, when "Ed" Stokes killed "Jim" Fisk, Jr., had there been so many policemen in the famous old hostelry.

But the guests of the hotel knew why the police were there yesterday. They had been aroused from their slumbers on the previous night by the clanging of the fire-engine bells, after three attempts had been made to burn the hotel. To quote Police Captain Stephenson of the Mercer Street Station, a firebug had got to work late Wednesday night, and between 8:35 and 11 o'clock had set fires in three different places.

When Police Inspector McLaughlin learned of the attempts to burn the hotel he summoned all the detectives in the Central Office Bureau and told them that they must land the incendiary. Police Captain Stephenson in the meantime had sent his reserve squad to the hotel, and they remained on duty all night lying in wait for the culprit.

The police learned that Jack McCormack, one of the stewards, had discovered the first fire. It was 8:35 o'clock when McCormack, entering the engine room, found a pile of oil-soaked rags burning in a corner. The flames were eating away the woodwork near a door. McCormack extinguished the burning pile and reported the matter to the night clerk.

An hour later, at 9:30, Samuel Johnson, a negro bell boy, found a window curtain blazing in a room on the second floor. He tore down the curtain and shouted for help. Mamie Dowle, a chambermaid, called other employes, and they, forming a bucket brigade, stamped out this fire within a few minutes.

By this time the news that two fires had been discovered in the hotel spread through the house, and the guests, numbering about 500, began to grow nervous. House Detective Armstrong had just made an investigation and was about to report to the police when another fire was discovered. This time one of the guests, a member of the Providence baseball team, found a heap of old clothes burning in a toilet room on the fifth floor. This fire was also put out before it had time to spread.

Then the fire engines appeared, although none of the hotel employes or guests had turned in an alarm. The firemen found all of the guests up and dressed, many of them badly frightened. Fire Marshal McGough and Chief Croker at once began an investigation. Then came the police.

On learning that policemen in plain clothes would be stationed in all of the corridors and on all of the floors of the hotel the guests went back to their rooms.

The police found many clues to work on. The first was that a man resembling Edward Farley had been seen about the hotel earlier in the day. Farley is known to the police as a pyromaniac. He was recently released from Elmira Reformatory, after serving a sentence for arson. Back in 1897 Farley had worked at the Broadway Central as a porter. A fire which occurred there that year was traced to him.

On March 21, 1902, while he was employed as an assistant elevator man at the Astor House, he was arrested for setting fire to that hotel three times in one day. He confessed that he had started eleven such fires in various hotels for the purpose of gaining notoriety by extinguishing them later. The detectives were unable to find Farley last night.

Some of the detectives thought that the fires at the Broadway Central were the work of persons interested in freeing men now held under parole in the custody of detectives from District Attorney Jerome's staff. One of these men, Benjamin Goldberger, is held in the alleged forgery case of the Hearst petition names. He and the Jerome detectives are quartered at the hotel. This suggestion did not impress many persons seriously, but Assistant District Attorney Whiteside, who is in charge of the Goldberger investigation, called up Fire Marshal De Malignon and asked him to make a report on the fire to the District Attorney as well as to the Fire Commissioner.

Discharged Employe Suspected.

Another theory, which is the one held by Police Captain Stephenson, is that the fires were started by a young man who had been employed at the hotel until a few days ago. This young man after he was discharged loitered about the hotel until the hotel detective threw him into the street on Wednesday. He is a Greek. Capt. Stephenson detailed two of his detectives to visit the employment agency from which he was hired, while Inspector McLaughlin sent Greek detectives into the Greek quarter to search for him.

The police are also looking for another ex-employe of the hotel. This man, they said, was familiar with the fire alarm system of the hotel and might have been the person who sent out the alarm. This alarm had been rung from Signal 26, on the fifth floor. To ring this signal a sign above it directs that the glass case be broken, but whoever turned in the alarm carefully removed the glass by pulling it up and got at the signal lever without breaking the glass.

"We hope to have the firebug in custody before many hours have passed," said Police Captain Stephenson.

At Police Headquarters it was said that a general alarm had been sent out directing the police all over town to be on the lookout for incendiaries in hotels. At many of the hotels when the message was received extra detectives were employed to watch.

Some folks had an idea that negroes had set fire to the Broadway Central, seeking vengeance against David Oliver, who has charge of the cigar counter. Oliver's wife caused the arrest of a negro who had struck her in the face a few days ago on an elevated railroad train. The police did not take any stock in the negro revenge story.

NEW CRUISER SPEEDY.

BOSTON, April 12.—The armored cruiser Washington, a product of the New York Shipbuilding Company of Camden, N. J., successfully completed her official speed trial to-day with a four-hour endurance run along the New England Coast, during which she maintained an average speed of 22.272 knots an hour. The contract speed of the Washington was 22 knots an hour.

About a month ago the armored cruiser Tennessee, a sister ship, built on the opposite side of the Delaware River, made an average speed of 22.146 knots an hour over the same course.

CASTRO NOT OUT FOR GOOD?

Venezuelan Charge Says There is Nothing Unusual in Situation.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—A cablegram received by Señor Garbiras, the Venezuelan Chargé, from Caracas confirms the announcement of the temporary retirement of President Castro from the Presidency, and the installation of Vice President Vicente Gomez as Acting President.

"Gen. Castro desires a long rest, and intends going into the country," the Venezuelan Chargé said to-day. "There is nothing in our advices to indicate that his retirement is to be permanent. Gen. Gomez acted as President for more than a month last year, when Gen. Castro was going down the Orinoco. The Constitution of Venezuela requires that the Vice President shall act in the absence of the President from the capital, and there is nothing out of the usual in the present situation."

It was stated at the Venezuelan Legation that the republic was at absolute peace, and suggestions that revolutionary movements might have caused Gen. Castro to retire were laughed at by the Chargé, who said that all rumors of a revolutionary movement against Gen. Castro were absolutely unfounded.

COUNT CAN WED DIVORCEE.

Court Annuls His Mother's Opposition to Marriage to American.

PARIS, April 12.—The Civil Tribunal of the Seine has annulled the opposition of the mother of Count Roger de Martimprey, who tried to prevent her son from marrying Miss Florence Drouillard of Nashville, Tenn., the divorced wife of Count Bernard de Pourtalès, whom she married in 1896.

Three years ago it became known that a duel had been fought between Count Roger de Martimprey and Count Bernard de Pourtalès. Immediately afterward the Countess de Pourtalès came to America, and Count Bernard obtained a divorce.

Count Roger de Martimprey announced his intention of marrying Countess Bernard, but met with the strong opposition of his mother, which finally forced him to bring the matter before the courts.

EMPEROR RECEIVES STORER.

The Unofficial Character of the Audience Is Emphasized.

VIENNA, April 12.—Emperor Francis Joseph this afternoon privately received the retiring American Ambassador, Bellamy Storer.

Mr. Storer, at the special request of the Foreign Office, did not wear evening dress, but was clothed in an ordinary day suit, so as to emphasize the unofficial character of the audience. The Emperor congratulated Mr. Storer on the excellent relations which he had established with the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Ministry, and assured him that he was leaving many cordial friends in Vienna. His Majesty also expressed his personal regret at Mr. Storer's departure. The audience lasted twenty minutes.

Doubtless before Mr. Storer's departure for Paris next week he will receive the Emperor's usual gift to departing Ambassadors—a signed photograph in a frame set with jewels.

It is understood that before his departure Mr. Storer will present to the Emperor his letter of recall.

To-day's audience has served to put an end to the temporarily strained relations between the Foreign Office and the American Embassy. The former will now recognize Secretary Rives as Chargé d'Affaires until the arrival of Charles S. Francis, the new Ambassador.

RUSSIA GIVES WAY TO US.

Agrees to the Postponement of the Date for The Hague Conference.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Baron Rosen, the Russian Ambassador, called upon Secretary Root at the State Department to-day and advised him that the Russian Government was entirely willing to have the meeting of the second Hague conference postponed.

It was stated that the Russian Government in naming July as a suitable time for the conference had only in mind what it conceived to be the convenience of the Dutch Government and of all concerned. However, upon learning that the date would be inconvenient to the United States and other countries, and after consultation with the Government of the Netherlands and learning that that Government could accommodate the conference at another date, it was deemed best to accede to the general wish of the powers and allow the postponement of the conference to a date to be selected by agreement.

DIDN'T EXPECT BINGHAM.

Commissioner Drops In at Patrolmen's Association Meeting.

Police Commissioner Bingham surprised 400 policemen last night by arriving unexpectedly at the monthly meeting of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, held at Maennerchor Hall, in Fifty-sixth Street, just east of Third Avenue. The meeting had been called to order by the Chairman, Andrew Kenny, when a loud rap was heard at the door.

"New business," said the Chairman, but before he had time to add anything the Sergeant at Arms interrupted the proceedings by opening the door and asking "Who's there?"

"Police Commissioner Bingham," replied the man who had rapped, and as he introduced himself he unbuttoned his coat and showed his shield.

The man in charge of the door bowed and welcomed the Commissioner to the meeting. Then he led him up the aisle to the platform. The policemen clapped their hands and cheered to show that they were glad that the Commissioner dropped in on them.

Commissioner Bingham then explained that he had received an invitation from the association to attend one of their meetings, and he thought he would accept it without further formality. At this point one of the policemen up front whispered to another that the association had been inviting Commissioners for fifteen years, just as a matter of form, but no Commissioner had ever attended a meeting before.

Commissioner Bingham made a little speech and said he would stick to every man on the force who did his duty and enforced the law.

The Commissioner was an interested auditor for an hour while the policemen transacted routine business.

PARK OPPOSED BY RAILROAD.

Lehigh Valley Wants to Erect a Freight Shed on East River Site.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad Company was said yesterday to be the chief opponent of the plan to establish a city park on the East River water front, between 123d and 125th Streets. The road has planned a large wharfage scheme, which will require the entire water front where it is desired to establish a park.

The railroad's scheme contemplates the construction of a large steel freight shed, two stories high, and capable of storing thousands of tons of freight. Under this plan, the entire section would be converted into a freight centre. While Borough President Ahearn has practically agreed to recommend the construction of the park, the railroad has gone to the Dock Department for permission to construct the freight shed. The matter has been referred to the Corporation Counsel for an opinion.

ASSEMBLY CONSPIRACY ON LAUNDRY CHECKS

A Proud Day for Reilly When His Anti-Chinese Bill Came Up.

FOR WASH TICKETS IN ENGLISH

But While He Read Telegrams from "Mock Duck" and "Theodore Roosevelt," Jokers Grinned.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 12.—A knot of Assemblymen were gathered in the Ten Eyck lobby last night discussing their colleagues.

"There's Reilly," observed one, "the most sensitive man on earth. Say, they tell me he went into a Chinese laundry down in Brooklyn one day last Winter, and put in $50 worth of silk underwear. The Chinaman gave him a check looking like the John Hancock on a Plymouth Rock hen on a red ribbon, and told him to come back next Tuesday. When he went back and presented the check the Chinaman handed him a nice bundle containing a pair of torn socks. Reilly got mad and wanted his silk. Chinaman showed that the checks corresponded, and in diplomatic vernacular the 'incident closed.'

"Reilly came back to Albany and introduced a bill providing that all laundry checks should be printed in English. Anybody who violates the proposed law, I believe, is to be hanged with a torn sock. At any rate, the bill is now before the Committee on Taxation and Retrenchment."

"Let's report it," suggested one.

"Sure," agreed the first speaker. "I'll have the committee discharged from further consideration to-morrow."

And after much preliminary labor in the way of explanation he carried his point. The bill came out of committee with a flourish, and the clerk read its title with a dignity befitting a measure of international import. Reilly heard what was going on and strutted about proudly.

"Good bill, that, Reilly," suggested one member seriously.

"Glad you think so," responded Reilly, "I think it rather important. In fact, it aims to correct a menace threatening the people—"

"I'm afraid the Chinese Minister will object," suggested another.

"I don't care if he does," retorted Reilly. "I tell you that when a man takes $50 worth of silk—"

> Reilly: If you don't put that bill back where it came from you will hear from us.
> MOCK DUCK.

Reilly frowned and was about to pay his respects to Mock when another page handed him a second telegram. It read:

> Reilly, Albany: When I was Governor I attempted to have such a bill enacted, as I believed the Chinese a menace to the country. You have performed a great service.
> THEODORE ROOSEVELT.
> Pet Loeb.

Reilly swelled with pride as he read the dispatch from "Roosevelt." He walked into the anteroom of the Speaker's office, and, as the word soon got around, he was obliged to hold a reception.

"Good boy, Reilly," said one Assemblyman. "The Administration is behind you. No more bum laundry tickets for us."

Reilly smiled and thanked his friend. "We'll win this fight yet. I tell you it's agitating the country. Roosevelt knows that. As for Mock Duck, I'll either make those Chinamen give a red, white, and blue ticket or it's back to the Yang-tse-Kiang for his. I'm in earnest."

The joke will end to-morrow, when Reilly's bill will unostentatiously be put back in committee for keeps.

ESOPUS FARMERS IN A RAGE.

They Say Water Supply Surveyors Destroy Property Wantonly.

Special to The New York Times.

MARGARETVILLE, N. Y., April 12.—It is charged by farmers and others in this section that 200 engineers, who are making the preliminary surveys for New York's proposed additional water supply in the Esopus Valley, are causing thousands of dollars worth of damage by their disregard of the rights of the farmers who own the land under survey.

It seems likely that many of the farmers will not wait to go to law to stop the encroachments and damage, but will take the matter into their own hands and get out their guns. Many of them have engaged the services of lawyers, and much bad feeling has been aroused. A farmer who lives in the vicinity of the proposed reservoir said:

"The engineers first came to my land afoot. Then they came with a wagon, and as they didn't like the idea of going around the way I do to get to a certain field they cut down the fence I put up last year and tore down a rail fence further on. My cattle got out of the field, and before I knew it they had wandered away and I haven't got them back yet. Then they made borings in a field that I had planted last Winter, and they've tramped and driven over that field so much that my whole crop is ruined.

"So as to get the best use of their instruments they chopped down some of my apple trees, and other big trees that were nearly a foot in diameter they cut off four feet from the ground.

"What am I to do? Insolence seems to be all I get when I speak to the engineers and their assistants. When reproved, they simply say that they are working for the City of New York; that 'New York will own the land some day, anyway'; that to interfere with their work is to violate the law, and 'What's to be done by anybody, anyway?'

"They seem to have the idea that so many New Yorkers entertain that the wilderness begins at the Bronx, and that beyond the Bronx all is common property and the people are untamed animals."

It is stated that in several instances the men have cut down nearly the whole of valuable apple orchards. Wire fences have been cut haphazard, stone fences that are old landmarks torn down, and rural cemeteries even have not been free from damage by these engineers.

Complaints come in every day from the whole territory under survey of more or less damage having been done by the surveying parties.

CITY BREVITIES.

Mark Twain is to deliver his farewell lecture in Carnegie Hall next Thursday evening for the benefit of the Robert Fulton Memorial Association. The demand for tickets has exceeded the expectations of those having the entertainment in charge.

Sheriff Hayes received an order yesterday, signed by Supreme Court Justice Garretson of Brooklyn, directing him to bring Gong Wing Chung, a Chinaman who has been in the Matteawan Criminal Insane State Hospital since November, 1900, back to the Tombs to await trial. Dr. R. B. Lamb, the Medical Superintendent at Matteawan, has certified that he is now sane.

An entertainment, followed by a ball, will be given by the Postal Employes' Mutual Aid Association at the Grand Central Palace next Tuesday night. A stage performance for the amusement of the women and children will begin in the afternoon and dancing will follow in the evening. The proceeds will be turned over to the association's mortuary fund.

Big Long Branch Realty Deal.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., April 12.—The Port-au-Peck Realty Company has been incorporated with a capital of $300,000 to develop a tract of 900 acres, including about four miles of river front, embracing the Port-au-Peck resort and the Edwards farm. Lots will be laid out, and a New York architect is designing a hotel to cost $150,000. C. M. Fowler is President of the company.

For Men With The Courage of Their Convictions:

Distinctive Suits and Topcoats at Fifteen to Forty Dollars.

Perhaps you know what made Milwaukee famous. Analyzed, it was the power and disposition to do the thing better than it ever had been done.

That is our disposition. We believe we have the power. Grant us the one—we can demonstrate the other in our garments for men. Mere disposition is not enough.

The power and skill to master the faults that leave a garment without grace and character; to exercise all the resources of expressive tailoring—that is the fountainhead of the distinctiveness which marks and identifies a suit or top coat of ours.

We have asked you to believe that we can demonstrate our power. Yes, and a suit or topcoat at fifteen dollars will serve the purpose as well as one at forty.

We know our stock of models and fabrics to be big and varied enough to exhaust every man's taste and fancy.

The Suits at $15.00 to $40.00.

New single and double breasted models, with straight, round or angular edges; side, centre or false vents; flap or welted pockets; French cuffs, false cuffs, or without cuffs; half lined with silk, mohair or serge. The fabrics include a big collection of worsteds and velour finished weaves in overplaids, stripes, herringbone and mixtures, together with plain gray, black and blue.

The Topcoats & Spring Overcoats at $15.00 to $40.00.

Paddock, box, silk-lined conservative coats and form-fitting coats with inverted plaits and centre vents, in new gray weaves, together with black and tan.

CONTROL TO THE MERGER BY THE ELSBERG BILL

Rives Asks the Transit Board to Fight the Measure.

OBJECTS TO TENANCY CLAUSE

Says the Interborough, Having Power Houses, Is the Only Company That Could Afford to Bid.

George L. Rives, counsel for the Rapid Transit Board, declared to the board yesterday that the Elsberg Rapid Transit bill, in its present form, would play directly into the hands of the traction merger interests and give those interests control of the situation at the letting of the next subway contracts. He thereupon urged the board to oppose the enactment of the bill to the end. The bill will come before the Mayor next week for a public hearing, and then, if accepted by him for the city, will go to Gov. Higgins.

Mr. Rives offered an entirely new view of the Elsberg bill when he called the attention of the members to the fact that only a company owning equipment and power houses could afford to take a contract for further subway building under an operating clause giving it but twenty years' tenancy, with a renewal privilege for the same term. He said that to enable the city to get proper terms and to free it from the control of the merger interests the board would have to have power to grant an operation contract for fifty years, with a twenty-five-year renewal clause, as now.

"Now that the bill has passed both branches of the Legislature," Mr. Rives told the commission, "it will come before Mayor McClellan next week for a hearing. This board should oppose the bill to the very end, and should submit to the Mayor next week the same brief that it submitted to the Cities Committees of the Legislature when the matter was pending at Albany.

"The provision of the bill restricting operation clauses to twenty years, with a renewal clause for the same period, will hamper the authorities in getting contracts for the next subways. It means that only people now owning equipment and power houses could accept a contract for operation on so short terms, because no other interests could afford to spend so much money on equipment and take the contract on the same terms. The enactment of this clause of the Elsberg bill into law would strangle competition on future subway building. It is manifest that under such provisions the city would get only such future subways as the Interborough Rapid Transit Company sees fit to build."

The board authorized Mr. Rives and Mr. Boardman, his associate, to appear before the Mayor and submit briefs and arguments as they did before the Legislature.

Mr. Boardman reported to the board that the Belmont interests had made a new move to prevent the plan to construct a subway in Third Avenue. This line is not desired by the Interborough people because it would be in direct conflict with the Third Avenue elevated and surface lines, and would be near the Lexington Avenue Subway, which is to be built.

According to Mr. Boardman, the commission named by the Appellate Division to pass on the route had completed its hearings and was at work on its report when Martin W. Littleton appeared this week as counsel, supposedly for the Interborough, but nominally for property owners, to urge the reopening of the matter. This is likely to be granted next Tuesday, and then delay after delay can be secured by Mr. Littleton. Mr. Boardman said the plan would enable those interested to block the Third Avenue line for months and possibly indefinitely.

The board received a report from its special committee named to decide the applications of Brooklyn department stores for the location of show windows in Brooklyn subway stations, especially at the Hoyt Street Station. The committee reported in favor of granting the applications and the charging of $1 a month for each square foot of space used. Mr. Rives then submitted a letter from Mr. Wickersham, counsel for the Interborough, declaring that the company would not consent to the arrangement. Mr. Wickersham declared it was inconsistent for the city to refuse the use of the stations for advertising purposes and then be willing to let space for show windows. The board adopted the report of its committee, however, subject to the consent of the Interborough Company. It was thought the latter would consent if the store keepers made a supplemental arrangement with the advertising agents of the road.

Chief Engineer George S. Rice got the board to consent to the employment of J. S. Starr, a refrigerating and ventilation expert, to work out a plan of improvement of the Subway air. Mr. Starr will receive a retainer of $500, with $40 per diem compensation for the time he is actually engaged on the plan. He also is to receive 15 per cent. of the expenditure if the plan is adopted. President Orr, when the request was granted, said he thought the bill should be paid by the Interborough Company, and Mr. Rice was asked to communicate with the company to see if that could not be arranged.

FOR LABRADOR FISHER FOLK.

Dr. Van Dyke Re-elected President of the Grenfell Association.

The Rev. Dr. Henry Van Dyke was re-elected President of the Directors of the Grenfell Association of New York yesterday. These officers were also re-elected: Dr. D. Bryson Delavan, Vice President; Ernest Hamlin Abbott, Secretary; Eugene Delano, Treasurer. In the last year the total amount received by the association was $12,596.34.

The association assists Dr. Wilfred Grenfell, who is devoting himself to the relief of destitute deep-sea fisher folk in Labrador. When the waters are free from ice he patrols the coast in his hospital ship, and when the ice covers the rivers and harbors he travels by dog teams.

Dr. Grenfell writes concerning the neighborhood of Harrington Hospital: "I am quite certain that section of the coast would have seen neither doctor nor hospital for many years yet had it not been for the money raised by the Grenfell Association, which we counted to lessen the expense at Battle Harbor and on the Strathcona. Moreover, the new launches, the new doctor's house at Battle, and the maintaining of an extra nurse were all outcomes of the efforts of the Grenfell Association."

OSBORNE ON NEWSPAPERS.

He Thinks the Solution of Our Great Problems Lies with Them.

James W. Osborne says he believes that with the newspapers, and the newspapers alone, lies the work of solving the great civil, commercial, and industrial problems of the day. He described that function as the greatest of present and future newspapers, in a talk he delivered before the members of the People's Institute at their clubhouse, 318 East Fifteenth Street, last night. Said he:

"The newspaper of to-day has three functions. The first is to gather news. The second is to make news. They make news, not in the sense that they fake it, but in the sense that a newspaper reporter works upon a murder mystery and runs down the man or woman who commits the crime. The third is the editorial function of thinking for people and forming intelligent ideas which shall guide them in estimating men and public questions.

"In the old days a man was robbed on the highway by the baronial bandit or on the sea by the pirate. How is he done now?

"Take, for the sake of argument, the bricklayers. They form a combination in the United States and Canada, and if a man wants a brick wall built in New York he can't get a man to lay a hand to the work unless he complies with the agreement made by the great combination of bricklayers.

"Take the coal miners, as another instance. An agreement is entered into whereby a rebate is allowed for shipment. The result is the same. Hold-up!

"We must fight ideas with ideas. Those who are prejudiced against existing laws and want new laws are on the wrong tack. What we need is a better understanding of the laws we already have. We have, in fact, too many laws already.

"If the people would quit talking about existing evils, if the editors would quit writing editorials about them, and if some great newspaper would only take up one of the menaces and master it, that newspaper wouldn't have to write editorials for any great length of time, for it would solve it. One of the functions of the modern newspaper is to grapple with these evils, study them, and then exterminate them. I think the great press of the country will be the instrument by which these threatening things will be suppressed.

"I consider the functions of an editor almost as sacred as those of a Judge. So many people read the papers and take as verity what they read therein that the editor assumes a high responsibility in the community. And again the people substitute his conscience for their own in forming opinions."

WHY SHE IS A REPUBLICAN.

Mrs. Wilson's Definition Saves the Day for Women's Republican Club.

Mrs. Augustine J. Wilson saved the day for the West End Women's Republican Club at its meeting yesterday afternoon at the Hotel Astor.

After the club had listened to several papers dealing with topics of a general nature the President, Mrs. Tonjes, asked the members why they favored the Republican Party. She began with Dr. Rose Littell.

"'Because my husband and father are Republicans' was what I used to say when asked that question," Dr. Littell replied, "but now I know that I am a Republican because I want to see the best men serving the best cause."

Mrs. Harriet Ostrom was then called upon. "I am a Republican because I am one," she said; "because I think the Republican Party is all right, although I can't say I think it always gets the best men."

Instead of calling for more reasons Mrs. Tonjes said that as the hour was late perhaps the meeting had better adjourn. It was here that Mrs. Wilson rose to the occasion.

"I am a Republican," she told the women present, "because I believe in a strong Federal Government rather than in State sovereignty and in the protection of home interests as opposed to free trade."

UNUSUAL ACCIDENT VERDICT.

$20,000 Award to Capt. Noyelles Against the New Haven R. R.

Capt. Alexander De Noyelles of Watervliet, N. Y., obtained a verdict in the United States Circuit Court on Wednesday against the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company for $20,000 damages on account of personal injuries resulting from the company's negligence. The action was brought in the Federal Court instead of the Supreme Court because the defendant is a foreign corporation. The case is of unusual interest for two reasons: First, because the verdict is believed to be the largest of the kind ever awarded in a Federal Court in this State; second, because of the differing views of contributory negligence held by the Federal and State Courts.

Although the accident resulting in Capt. De Noyelles's total and permanent disability occurred in this city, the case was tried before Judge Ray in Syracuse. Richard J. Donovan of 170 Broadway appeared for the plaintiff, while McKenzie & Wade of Syracuse represented the railroad company.

Capt. De Noyelles was in command of the Winnie of the Williams Line, and had discharged a cargo of lumber on the New Haven docks on the Harlem River between Second Avenue and the Willis Avenue bridge. The lumber was to be shipped to Danbury, Conn., over the company's road. On Aug. 24, 1905, Capt. De Noyelles was standing with one foot on his boat and the other on the dock, casting off a hawser preparatory to leaving. Four boats were lying outside the Winnie, including two belonging to the railroad company.

A tugboat belonging to the defendant road rammed the outside boat, the shock was transmitted to the Winnie, and Capt. De Noyelles was thrown between his boat and the dock and crushed. He sustained a fracture and dislocation of the left hip, his left knee and ankle were crushed, his left leg was paralyzed as the result of the injuries to his spine, and his right arm and shoulder were permanently disabled. He was also injured internally.

The defendant road contended that the striking of the outside boat was not the proximate cause of the accident, and that the plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence. At this point the difference between the Federal and State laws on this question was brought out. It was shown that in the State court, in a negligence action, the plaintiff must show that he is free from contributory negligence in order to recover damages; in the Federal court the defendant must prove that the plaintiff is guilty of negligence to prevent recovery.

The trial of the case occupied three days. A verdict was returned after several hours' deliberation on the part of the jury.

Calls Josephina Terranova Sane.

"Sane, though highly excited at the time," was the report made yesterday by Dr. Frank McGuire, physician of the Tombs, to Justice O'Gorman in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court on Josephina Terranova, the young Italian woman who killed her uncle and aunt in their Williamsbridge home last February because they had bitterly wronged her. Justice O'Gorman set the woman's trial for the first week in May.

Cosmides Released on Bail.

Cash bail to the amount of $7,500 was deposited yesterday on behalf of Cristo Cosmides, manager of the Oriental Fruit Company, who is charged with complicity, with Alfred R. Goslin and Charles H. Dunn, in the theft of a United States Steel Company stock certificate. Cosmides was then released. Goslin is now a fugitive from justice. Dunn is in the Tombs, and is said to have made a confession to the District Attorney.

Henry Bergh, Nephew of the Founder, Is Elected Treasurer—A President Not Chosen Yet.

The Board of Trustees of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals met yesterday afternoon and inaugurated the first of a series of reforms which will go into effect even before President John P. Haines, who leaves office on Sunday, is out of his place.

The board elected Col. Alfred Wagstaff Acting President. Col. Wagstaff is senior Vice President, and he will have charge of the society as executive officer until a permanent President is chosen.

John Mason Knox, an old friend of the retiring President, offered his resignation as Treasurer. It was accepted on motion of Gen. Roe without mention of his many years of service. No explanation was offered for the resignation, but the cause for it is taken to be unwillingness on the part of Mr. Knox to remain in office after the retiring of his old superior.

Henry Bergh, nephew of the founder of the society, was elected Treasurer, and Richard Welling was elected Secretary.

An important resolution was offered by the new Treasurer, Mr. Bergh. He asked the board to pass a resolution requiring the deposit of all of the society's securities, mortgages, &c., in a box in a safe deposit vault, this box to be protected by a double lock combination. One of these combinations will be known only to the President and the other only to the Treasurer. The box cannot be opened save in the presence of both officers. This resolution was passed and it calls for the immediate disposition of the society's securities in this manner.

The Committee on Building reported that it had investigated the matter of adding seven stories to the present building and had been assured that the seven stories could be built safely, the walls being unusually thick and strong. It is estimated that the rental of the offices will average $1.25 a square foot per annum. This will bring in a large income, but it is not only from this proposed addition that the society is now looking for money out of its own property.

The committee decided that two floors of the present five-story structure, with the basement, provided all the space necessary for the society, and recommended that only this space be used in future. Reform in expenditure will go further. The Board of Directors will stop the use of the elevator in the building until the additions are completed, and will also use gas instead of electric lights. The Finance Committee being discharged, it was appointed as a committee to continue investigation into the building of the seven additional stories and to devise other means of adding to the society's income.

Col. Joel B. Erhardt went after the outside men of the society in seeking reform of the society's operations. He presented a resolution, which was carried, compelling the men on duty throughout this borough and the Bronx to carry a time book, in which every hour of their tour of duty will be accounted for.

"I used this plan when I was a Police Commissioner," said Col. Erhardt after the meeting, "and although there may be wrong entries in such a timebook, the man who is shirking is bound to be caught up with, and when he is caught up with it means that he'll be broke. I put eight Police Captains out of business under these conditions. The instructions in the book also require the men to be careful in their patrols, so that they will not double on each other. Ten or twelve districts newly drawn, with the present force of men, will extend the work of the society practically and will give quick service."

The names of those who are willing to take the Presidency at $6,000, with their communications to the society, were in a huge bundle at the meeting yesterday, but none of them was brought up, not even the name of Gen. Chaffee, the latest under favorable consideration. The Nominating Committee, of which Gen. Roe is Chairman, reported that it was not ready to nominate. It is believed that by the May meeting of the board the Nominating Committee will have selected a man.

The report of the expert accountants on the bookkeeping methods of the society is ready, and is now being printed. It will be made public when it is off the press, said Mr. Welling yesterday.

"There will be no more secrecy about this society," said the Secretary yesterday after the meeting. "There will be more work done by the officers and the board, as well as work along economical lines. Heretofore the board has not been meeting in the Summertime. It will meet hereafter every month in the Summer."

At the meeting there was not a single voice heard from the ranks of the Reform Association, which made matters so turbulent during the last days of the Haines régime. The meeting yesterday, Mr. Welling said, was entirely harmonious and businesslike.

Col. Erhardt, who has been mentioned for President, said yesterday afternoon that he was not looking for any office, and that he was only anxious to have the society run on the best possible lines, and to have every man in it give good service.

Gen. Chaffee is at a private hotel near the society's building, and will in all probability meet members of the society in the next few days concerning the question of the presentation of his name for the Presidency.

MULLIGAN NOT GUILTY.

Jury Acquits Oakley's Lieutenant of Perjury—Joy in Court.

After being out fifty minutes the jury trying James A. Mulligan on a charge of perjury before Judge McMahon in General Sessions returned a verdict of not guilty yesterday afternoon. The courtroom was packed with minor politicians and Tammany men from the Fourteenth District, where Mulligan is a saloon keeper and a lieutenant of John T. Oakley.

Mulligan was escorted out of the rooms by his delighted friends. The charge against him was that he had made a statement under oath before Supt. of Elections Morgan identifying a man named George Walsh as "Arthur Smith."

THE BAD BOY AND HIS DOG.

Jakey Stuck by Jacob Till the Gerry Agents Locked Him Up.

Two agents of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children went to the home of Jacob Koenig, a boy 13 years old, on First Avenue, near Forty-fifth Street, Tuesday to get the boy to testify in the Yorkville Court against George O'Neil, a junk dealer at 836 First Avenue, for buying from minors in the neighborhood.

"Where's Jacob?" the agents asked the boy's mother.

"Sure, the las' I seen o' him he ran out o' the house with the cook stove, and sold it for a quarter," she replied.

"Is he in the neighborhood?" they persisted.

"I don't know, but if you find Jakey probably you'll find Jacob, too." She explained that Jakey was a little yellow dog that followed the lad everywhere.

The agents canvassed the neighborhood, and finally saw a disreputable, short-tailed mongrel answering Jakey's description. He was following a boy.

"Come here, Jakey," coaxed one of the agents, snapping his fingers. Jakey showed his teeth and growled.

"Come on, Jacob," said the other agent, addressing the boy.

"Sick 'em, Jakey!" yelled the lad as he ran away.

The agents ran after him and the dog, and finally cornered both under a bed in a room of a nearby tenement. They started with him for the officers of the Children's Society.

"Gimme Jakey!" he screamed. "Gimme Jakey or I'll—say, you," he growled, assuming a belligerent attitude, "I wants me dog or I don't go nowhere, see!" The agents bundled him into a street car, and Jakey, with his tongue hanging out, galloped alongside. The boy watched him from the car window. When they reached the society's headquarters the agents locked Jacob up. Jakey stood outside and whined all night. In the morning the lad was taken to court, where he and Jacob Heileman, a companion, were charged with having robbed a flat at 312 East Forty-fourth Street of lead pipes, selling them to O'Neil. Magistrate Mayo held O'Neil in $300 bail, and the boys were sent back to the society. Jakey could not go, so he yelped a bit and then trotted off, to become a waif of the streets.

MOCK DUCK'S BAIL REDUCED.

Leader of the Hip Sing Tongs Now Held in $2,000 for Bribery.

If Mock Duck, once the leading spirit of the Chinatown clan of the Hip Sing Tongs, can raise $2,000, he may get out of the Tombs, where he has been imprisoned ever since last February.

The charge against the gentle-faced Mock is that he tried to bribe two Chinatown policemen into letting a friend go free from arrest. On account of his record, rather than from the nature of the offense, the bail was fixed at an unusually high figure. Lawyer Abraham Levy moved yesterday for reduction of bail, and Recorder Goff granted the motion.

Last night Mock Duck was still in the Tombs.

COCKRAN IN RATE SPEECH CRITICISES SENATORS

Accuses "Constitutional Lawyers" of Befogging the Issue.

ASSAILS HOUSE OLIGARCHY

Says Williams Will Be the Next Speaker—Calls the Hepburn Measure Practically Perfect.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The Post Office Appropriation bill was laid aside by the House for one hour this afternoon while Bourke Cockran delivered a speech on the Railway Rate Regulation bill. Incidentally he nominated John Sharp Williams for Speaker when the Democrats get the House, as they hope to this year.

Mr. Cockran started off with a description of the debate on the Postal Appropriation bill, and commented on the wide range it had taken. The variety of the speeches was infinite, he said, and their connection with the subject technically under discussion so thin as not to be understood by an outsider. Fifty years hence a reader of The Record would find that any one of the speeches was a gem of its own kind, but that the "whole debate represented the incoherence, discordance, and dissonance of a lunatic asylum rather than the proceedings of a business body."

"It is a melancholy spectacle," he said, "that this House, which, when free, is controlled by the judgment, intelligence, and patriotism of its members, has been reduced by the shackles of its rules to such an exhibition of incapicity as it gave on the Statehood bill."

With that thrust at the "House oligarchy" Mr. Cockran brought up the Rate bill. It was the product, he declared, of the free, untrammeled action of the House, which, in passing it, had been neither hampered nor gagged by a special rule, so that debate had been unimpeded and action not restricted. It was as nearly a perfect measure as it was poussible to make, and the extreme difficulty the Senate was having in finding genuine flaws in it proved the assertion.

"All this shows," Mr. Cockran said, "what the House can accomplish when its abilities can be utilized to the public credit, rather than dissipated to the public discredit."

Mr. Cockran paid his disrespects to the "Constitutional lawyers" of the Senate, who, he said, had been raising all the fog and dust they could in the effort to hide the real issue and conceal the excellence of the bill. In their contention as to what a bill must be to be constitutional he agreed, but he parted company with the critics of the Hepburn bill just as soon as they declared that it did not contain these elements.

"Then comes the Constitutional lawyer," he cried, "whom we always recognize by the awfulness of his mien and the mystery of his meaning. He tells us that the bill is unconstitutional, and upon that we have mountains of law books piled up and strident voices filling the country with mysterious and unintelligible quotations from them. They say it is unconstitutional because it does not specifically provide for a court review, and they talk about 'liberal court review' and 'broad court review,' and 'limited court review,' and all the rest. I say the House bill is a triumphant proof of wisdom. For the Constitution has given the courts all the power that can be used. To attempt to extend it would be officious, to define it superfluous, and to restrict it impossible.

"Every rogue whom this bill is intended to punish denounces it, but the vast body of the people applaud it. I would we could punish the criminals against whose actions the country cries out, but it is extravagant, preposterous, and absurd to expect it to be done so long as they are not pilferers of pennies, but plunderers of millions."

Reverting once more to the House rules, Mr. Cockran repeated his assertion that it was only because the House had not been gagged or bound that this superb measure of perfection had been passed. Then, waving his hand at John Sharp Williams, who sat near him, he said that "when the House is no longer controlled by the despotic rule of three men, although the gentlemen who make up that three are of respectable character, but by the hand of the majority, as it will be when my friend from Mississippi is Speaker of the next House, there will be free opportunity for the exercise of its proper function."

The reference to Mr. Williams evoked a storm of Democratic cheers. It had been understood for a long time that in case of the election of a Democratic House in the Sixtieth Congress Mr. Williams would be chosen Speaker with very little, if any, opposition, but this was the first time he had been so publicly named for the post.

RATES AND TILLMAN'S FRUIT.

Foraker Talks on Peaches, and Gets a Lesson on Crop Seasons.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The rate debate developed into a tariff duel this afternoon between Senator Foraker and Senator Tillman.

Tillman protested against the combination of the railroads with the protectionists to give the East the benefit of low-priced commodities, and then ship all sorts of tariff-protected necessaries back West and down South under a favoring rate system.

To this Foraker retorted that Tillman wanted a flat mileage rate all over the country, and the South Carolina Senator boldly admitted that he did, commenting that it would be fair and just and right.

Foraker tried to make an illustration that would hit home by referring to the low rate given to South Carolina peaches to New York in competition with Delaware peaches which are near by New York.

To this Tillman retorted that he was a peach farmer himself, and no matter how it affected his interests he would stand and die for the flat rate principle for the peach shippers of his State.

"Well," said Foraker, "the peaches will be very hard and sour in South Carolina when that comes."

"Why," said Tillman, "the trouble is not with the rate from South Carolina, but that the poor fellows in Delaware must pay the same rate over the short haul to New York.

"Well, suppose they had the low rate according to your flat rate idea?" said Foraker, "and came in competition with such an advantage against you in South Carolina?"

"But they couldn't," said Tillman. "Our peaches are all over and eaten up before they get ripe in Delaware."

MUST PRODUCE ITS BOOKS.

Order to Pennsylvania Road in Coal Companies' Rebate Suits.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 12.—In three decrees handed down by Judges McPherson and Holland in the United States Circuit Court to-day the Pennsylvania Railroad was ordered to produce and allow the inspection of books and papers necessary for the preparation of the rebate discrimination suits brought by the Mitchell Coal and Coke Company, Webster Coal and Coke Company, and the Pennsylvania Coal and Coke Company.

These documents are to be accessible at the Broad Street Station beginning April 16 and are to remain there until the coal companies' attorneys have concluded their inspection.

Notwithstanding the many applications made for the production of documents in the rebate discrimination suits pending in both the Federal and Common Pleas Court, the decrees of to-day are the first of their kind to be handed down against the Pennsylvania Road.

SMOOT'S SEAT DEMANDED.

J. G. Carlisle Argues Mormon Senator Should Be Disqualified.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Arguments in the case of Senator Reed Smoot were begun to-day before the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections after an inquiry extending over three years into his right to retain his seat. The committee room was crowded, most of the spectators being women. Smoot was present as were several prominent Mormons who have assisted him in his defense.

John G. Carlisle opened for the protestants. He said the Mormon Church is more than a church; it is a commercial and political organization. He asserted that the situation is such that the politics of Utah can be dominated by the Mormon Church at will. Mr. Carlisle said that the officers of the church could do nothing without the consent of the apostles, of whom Mr. Smoot is one.

Speaking of the Endowment House oaths, Mr. Carlisle admitted that he did not know the exact form of the obligation taken, but he believed it could not be disputed that some oath of the character described by several witnesses is administered and that each person taking the ceremony assumes an obligation to avenge the blood of the prophets upon this Nation.

Discussing the constitutional provision relating to the eligibility of Senators, Mr. Carlisle contended that the case against Smoot is to disqualify him for service, and that it can be done by passing a resolution to the effect that the Utah Senator lacks the requisite qualifications and the seat therefore may be declared vacant by a majority vote.

Members of the committee took great interest in the argument, Messrs. Bailey, Knox, Dillingham, and Dolliver asking numerous questions. When Mr. Carlisle closed he announced that he would not attempt to answer the arguments of A. S. Worthington, of counsel for Smoot, which will be made to-morrow.

SENATORS BY DIRECT VOTE.

House Committee Also Favors Four-Year Term for Representatives.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—A resolution providing for the election of Senators by direct vote of the people has been favorably acted upon by the House Committee on Election of President, Vice President, and Representatives in Congress. The resolution, which was introduced by Mr. Norris of Nebraska, makes the term of members of the House four years instead of two. Both propositions are to be put into force by amendments to the Constitution.

Reasons why the term of members should be four years are stated to be because no party can inaugurate its policy in two years.

"The people are tired," the report says, "of this continuous drama, and as a result are inclined to give no attention to the primaries and the conventions—the very foundation of our political system—the forum wherein the country's interests can best be guarded and protected.

"With an election every two years the political grafter who thrives on partisan strife and on the nervous uncertainty controlling candidates for office is able to live from one election to another by the boodle secured at his unholy business. The adoption of the proposed amendment would render it less possible for this creature to ply his trade."

Regarding the election of Senators by direct vote the report says:

"The proposition to provide for the election of Senators by the direct vote of the people has been before the House of Representatives and has received favorable consideration upon several different occasions. A proposition to amend the Constitution, having this object in view, passed the House of Representatives at four different times, and each time by a practically unanimous vote."

PETER NOT TO ABDICATE.

April 28 Named for the Servian King's Dethronement.

LONDON, Friday, April 13.—The correspondent at Vienna of The Morning Post sends the following:

"Belgrade telegrams give official denial to the statement that King Peter intends to abdicate. The denial, however, does not counteract the general belief that a serious Servian crisis is brewing. April 28 is named as the day on which the King will be dethroned and expelled unless he abdicates beforehand.

"A strong party is reported to have been formed against King Peter, but in favor of his cousin, Prince Arsen Karageorgevitch, who is now an officer in the Russian Army."

STRIKER SENTENCED FOR A BRUTAL ASSAULT

Recorder Goff Gives Ironworker a Year in the Penitentiary.

DEFINES RIGHTS OF LABOR

A Man's Privilege to Dispose of His Labor Must Be Protected, He Says.

Before sentencing Frank Hawkins, a striking ironworker, convicted of having attacked and brutally beaten Samuel Anderson, a strike breaker, Recorder Goff said in General Sessions yesterday:

It is not my purpose to descant upon the relations of capital and labor, but as a Judge I deem it important to say to you that the evidence in this case clearly points to a conspiracy, with you as one of the conspirators, to assault Anderson because he was working instead of the men on strike. That he was assaulted and brutally beaten, and possibly permanently injured, there can be no question.

The jury has taken, to say the least, a most merciful view of your case.

I wish to say just a word to you, Hawkins, and if it could only reach the men associated with you it would be of great benefit to this community. The law gives to you, and to every workingman, the right to organize for the betterment of your condition; the right to sell your labor to the highest bidder; the right to refuse to work for any one that you do not like; the right to withhold your work except on conditions that are agreeable to you. The law even goes so far as to extend to you the right to persuade other men to adopt the same course, but when men representing organized labor step over the very broad and generous provisions of the law and use violence as an argument to enforce their views upon their fellow-men, then the law is violated, and not only the rights of the individual are trampled upon, but the peace and safety of the community are in danger.

I think every true friend of the workingman and every honest and sincere workingman must feel regret every time a man connected with a labor organization takes the law into his own hands and commits an act of violence. That man Anderson had just as much freedom and right to work as you had to refuse to work. And while you have said this man took the bread out of your children's mouths, you took the bread out of his children's mouths, and his children were just as dear to him as yours were to you. You disabled him, practically speaking, from earning bread for his children, and surely you as a man cannot claim that he loved his children less than you love yours.

I am confined in this verdict by the discretion the law gives to me—if I exercised it to its fullest extent I would sentence you to the fullest term provided by law and the extended imposition of fine. I shall not impose the fine upon you. Justice must be maintained, and in the maintenance of justice it is my duty to sentence you to the penitentiary for twelve months.

Anderson, who lives at 212 East 121st Street, was attacked on his way home on the night of Feb. 2 by four men, one of whom struck him with a blackjack while the other three hit him with their fists. Anderson was badly beaten about the head. Three of his assailants escaped, but Hawkins was caught.

Another union workman, Michael J. Farley of the International Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' Union, was put on trial in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court yesterday on the charge of murder in the first degree. The complaint alleges that on Feb. 17 of this year Farley shot and instantly killed George Tully, also a union man, but a member of a hostile branch of the order. As a member of the Enterprise Steamfitters' Union, Tully refused to leave work on a building at 135th Street and Lexington Avenue, against which the metal lathers had declared a strike.

James Hewlett, a foreman of the lathers, was talking with Tully and trying to persuade him to quit work when Farley appeared on the scene and attacked the steamfitter with such violence that Tully picked up a piece of lead pipe and started for the street. While he was on his way out of the building, it is alleged, Farley fired two shots at him. Tully tried to drag himself away, but before he could get out of reach Farley fired a third shot, which killed him.

FERRY BILL STRIKES SNAG.

Several Jokers Discovered in It, and It Will Be Amended.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 12.—Senator Cooper's Ferry bill, which it is charged is drawn in the interest of the Union Ferry Company and is intended to make New York buy the whole of the property if the city wants any of it, ran against another snag when it came up on the third reading in the Senate to-day.

Senator Marks charged that one of the amendments, which changes the whole law as relating to condemnation proceedings by the city, was put into the bill after it left the Cities Committee, and that had this not been the case the bill would never have been reported out.

It appears that the law under which the city got possession of the Staten Island ferries is so amended as to include any ferries running between Manhattan and Brooklyn which the city might want to acquire. The Cooper bill says that the city and the owners must have agreed upon a price before the city can begin condemnation proceedings, and that if the city desires to acquire one of the ferries it must take all, and at the company's own price.

Senator Hinman pointed out to Grady this provision. For once Grady was stumped.

"If it says anything like that," he said, "I won't stand for any such proposition."

Grady contended, however, that the city ought to take the bad ferries with the good ones, but not at the ferry company's price. After the debate had gone on for some time Cooper agreed to have the bill laid aside so that it could be further amended.

JUDGE McMAHON PUZZLED.

Did Fear or Gratitude Make Thief Restore His Pocketbook?

Was the thief moved by fear or gratitude? This question kept Judge McMahon thinking hard yesterday after he had had a peculiar experience on the way from his home to the Court of General Sessions in the morning.

When about to leave a Broadway car at White Street, the Judge found his way blocked by two men. At the same time a third man jostled him from behind. The incident was over in a few seconds. But the knowledge gathered by Judge McMahon during his many years on the bench made him feel as soon as he had left the car to see whether any of his belongings had disappeared. A search showed that his watch was still there, but that his pocketbook was gone.

Looking up at that moment, Judge McMahon caught sight of the three men who had surrounded him on the car. At once he recognized the one who had been behind him, and whom he had not seen till then, as a pickpocket on whom he suspended sentence some time ago. The thief's eye met that of the Judge, and the recognition was apparently mutual.

The three men were then only a few steps away from the Judge. A moment later they separated, two of them walking away in opposite directions, while the paroled thief tarried a second or two before he began to run up the street. Judge McMahon stood still looking for a policeman. Just then a newsboy said to him:

"Did you drop that pocketbook, Mister?"

Near the spot where had seen the thief stop and only a few feet away from himself, Judge McMahon saw his pocketbook lying on the ground. Taking it up he made sure that no part of its contents was missing. Judge McMahon was glad to get his property back, but at the same time he was puzzled.

If the thief was moved by gratitude, he felt that the man should be left alone. If, on the other hand, fear caused him to surrender his booty, then, Judge McMahon thought the only right thing to do would be to notify the police and cause his arrest. In the end, the Judge took no action in the case.

PRESIDENT ON PLAYGROUNDS.

Must Consult Children's Wishes, He Tells National Association.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The National Playground Association, composed of representatives from various parts of the country interested in outdoor and athletic sports, and the chief promoter of which was Dr. Luther Gulick of New York City, was formed here to-day. The delegates afterward visited the White House, where President Roosevelt addressed them. He said:

"Ladies and Gentlemen—I trust it is not necessary for me to say what a pleasure it is to meet you and how very earnest and hearty my sympathy is with your purpose. I owed my first interest in the playground question, among a great many other things, to Jacob Riis, when he spoke of the poor children who had to play in the streets, as they had no other place to play. I have felt very keenly the need of playgrounds, and of course, as the children grow older, the need of athletic grounds.

"I am sure it is hardly necessary for me to say that in trying to shape the plays for the children you have got to consult the children especially. You must try to take advantage of their initiative and simply help in shaping it in the proper direction.

"One of the chief difficulties that all of us have encountered who have tried to help in establishing hotels for young women, or houses where working girls could live or clubs where instead of being saloons there shall be coffee clubs for men, is that we often establish such an excellent series of regulations that nobody will go to them. While aiming to develop the plays, as far as possible, let the children work out their own salvation in their own way; simply exercise such supervision to see that they do not do harm. Remember in the last analysis the play has to suit them, and not us."

Senator Platt Here for Easter.

Senator Thomas C. Platt came to town yesterday for the Easter holidays. He declined to discuss politics yesterday, but intimated that he might have some interesting comment to make before his return to Washington next week.

FOOD.
MILK DIET
Not So Good As a Better.
A merchant in a thriving interior town writes:
"I can recommend Grape-Nuts food to all, whether well or sick, as a preventative of, or a cure for many ailments.
"For about six years I was unable to be in the store much of the time. I was suffering from gastritis and constipation, which confined me to the house part of the time and at last put me to bed and kept me there for almost a year. I ran down in weight from 150 to 85 pounds, trying to live on a milk diet. But I could seldom retain that, nor anything else of any account, on my stomach.
"The doctors finally gave me up; then a friend advised me to change my food and use Grape-Nuts food and Postum Food coffee. I followed his advice and watched results.
"I commenced to get well at once, and in the first 3 months I gained about 40 pounds. The gastritis and constipation left me in a very short time, and in the 6 years that have followed I have enjoyed the best of health and attend regularly to my business. I eat Grape-Nuts every day, and usually make my entire breakfast off of a few teaspoonfuls of it and a cup or two of Postum Food coffee."

FEAR IN THE MUTUAL THAT FIELDS ISN'T BACK

Some Hint of a "Plant" to Draw the Company's Fire.

PRESIDENT PEABODY TALKS

Doesn't See How a New English Company Could Receive the Mutual's English Reserves.

Whether or not Andrew G. Fields is actually back at his home in Dobbs Ferry is a question that is being seriously considered by officers of the Mutual Life who are looking for the former manager of the company's supply department for information on subjects that they consider important. Men sent from the Mutual's office have been about Dobbs Ferry ever since the announced return of Fields, but have been thus far unable to find him, and they have reported that only two persons, and those close friends of Fields, have been found who say that they have seen him.

There are, on the other side, the assurances of Dr. Judson, Fields's physician, and of Henry T. Velte, his lawyer here, that Fields is back in person. But the Mutual men argue that the whereabouts of Fields concerns, at least prospectively, the District Attorney's office, and have suggested that the reappearance of Fields is a well-constructed "plant" to draw the fire of the Mutual and test public opinion.

The Mutual sought personal service in the suits which have now been started against Fields by service on his attorney, but without result. The complaints in these suits have not been drawn yet, and it is understood that they won't be until a new report by the Truesdale Investigating Committee on supply department matters is prepared.

President Peabody of the Mutual had something to say yesterday in regard to the demands of the English policy holders of the company. His attention was called to a London dispatch saying that the cablegram sent to Mr. Addison, counsel for the English policy holders, had been deemed unsatisfactory and evasive and that what the British policy holders really wanted was the retirement from the board of the Trustees who had been closest to ex-President McCurdy. None of them has resigned yet. A reporter referred to them as "the McCurdy Trustees."

The reporter enumerated several, and was interrupted by the Mutual's President with:

"Then you must include Mr. Baker and Mr. Davies also."

The reporter conceded that George F. Baker and Julien T. Davies were included. Then Mr. Peabody said:

"Well, I presume that all those gentlemen would either resign or else give their reasons for not doing so to the English policy holders."

Subsequently Mr. Peabody dictated this statement as his impressions of the demands of the English policy holders, gained, as he said, partly through the newspapers and partly from the report that Augustus D. Juilliard made on his return from the other side:

"It was suggested that an English actuary be employed to examine the reserve, which has already been computed by the New York State Department of Insurance. We have no objection to this.

"The second suggestion was that we elect one or more English Trustees. This, I think, the board would gladly do, and would be glad to receive suggestions from the English policy holders.

"The third suggestion was that we turn over the whole English business to a new company to be founded in London, delivering at the same time the total reserves held against English policies. We see no way at present of lawfully doing this, and for that and other reasons we do not consider it practical. The legal questions involved have been referred to Mr. Choate."

It was learned yesterday that the Mutual and New York Life Insurance Companies have been increasing some of their commissions to agents, the increases to have effect until the end of the current year. It is understood that this is a part of the preparation for the campaign for proxies that the companies are preparing to conduct through the agency forces just as soon as the new laws make it possible for them to get at an active canvass.

BRITISH NOT SATISFIED.

Mr. Choate's Letter to the Mutual Policy Holders Received.

LONDON, April 12.—A meeting of the British policy holders of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York has been called for April 20 to consider the reply of Joseph H. Choate, of counsel for the company, to the representations made on their behalf by A. D. Juilliard, a Trustee of the Mutual.

The reply, which was received this morning through Mr. Addison, counsel for the policy holders, was not satisfactory to those policy holders who were seen today. Mr. Choate says the proposals require careful legal consideration, and that in the meantime the Trustees would be pleased to have the British policy holders appoint an actuary to verify the reserve and the liabilities.

This the policy holders say is evading the issue. They are satisfied with the financial condition of the company, but demand a change in the management, desiring particularly the retirement of those of the Trustees who were closely associated with the McCurdys.

HIPPODROME CELEBRATES.

Show's Men and Women the Audience at a Performance This Morning.

After entertaining some 3,000,000 persons in the last year, the Hippodrome had a celebration of its first anniversary last night. Preparations had been making for the show for several days.

After the show last night Joe Weber, Bonnie Maginn, Marie Dressler, Otis Harlan, and Pete Dailey were each in turn introduced by Charles Ross, master of ceremonies, and did various acts on the stage. The Hippodrome men and women enjoyed it while sitting in the seats that the regular audience has on other nights.

The real fun, however, began at 2 o'clock this morning, when about four feet of lukewarm water was run into the big tank and all sorts of aquatic sports were indulged in. For two hours at least 40 per cent. of the audience were in bathing suits, enjoying themselves Coney Island style.

"After this feature, ladies and gentlemen," announced Mr. Ross, "there'll be some punch—at least for those who are not on the water wagon."

The enthusiastic patronage received by the punch bowl showed that the vehicle mentioned didn't have many passengers.

In the audience were John W. Gates, Charles F. Murphy, Bird S. Coler, and others of prominence. The management announced that the gross receipts last year had been $2,000,000, and that the Thompson & Dundy's Hippodrome, Luna Park, and "The Yankee Circus on Mars," which is on the road, had entertained about 8,000,000 persons since April 12 last.

RICE A CHEERFUL PRISONER.

In His Cell in the Tombs He Is Planning a New Theatre.

Edward E. Rice, the theatrical manager, who was locked up in the Tombs on Wednesday night under an order of arrest growing out of unpaid board bills contracted in Baltimore by the chorus of "The Shop Girl" company and guaranteed by Mr. Rice, had not been bailed out last night, and the Tombs still retained the most cheerful prisoner in its history.

Rice was as busy in his cell planning a new theatre of his own, where he expects to retrieve his shattered fortunes by presenting productions on the scale of the "Evangeline" and "1492" shows, which made him rich some years ago.

Rice said he harbored no ill-feeling against the Baltimore landlords who had him arrested, though he thought they might have been a little more considerate in view of the fact that the unpaid bills were only a small balance of a $1,000 bill. He added:

"You see, Christmas was coming on, and the show had gone to pieces, and unless I had stood for the bills of the girls they would have been stranded in Baltimore. I never left a company or a player on the road yet, even though it has been slim pickings for myself sometimes of late years. I will settle this bill as soon as I can get out and see my friends."

WON'T INSURE THE BELMONT.

Fireproof Construction Satisfies the Hotel's Management.

Announcement is made that the Hotel Belmont, at Forty-second Street and Park Avenue, opposite the Grand Central Station, will forego fire insurance and will carry its own risk, thereby avoiding the heavy premiums which would necessarily have to be paid for insuring the twenty-eight-story building.

It is said that the task attempted of making the structure really fireproof has been accomplished, in the mind of the management, which is satisfied that the fireproofed wood and other special features of construction, as well as a model fire-fighting apparatus that robs even a closet blaze of its terrors, have been sufficient to secure the hotel against any loss from flames in the future.

The hotel, although not opened yet, is finished except as to interior fittings and furnishings.

DR. HAUBOLD'S BOY GONE.

Doctor, Who Is Separated from His Wife, Must Produce the Lad.

Dr. Herman A. Haubold of 644 Madison Avenue, a surgeon connected with the Cornell Medical College, failed to produce his son Bryant, 5 years old, before Justice Clinch, in the Supreme Court, yesterday, as directed by a writ of habeas corpus. The doctor said that he only knew "in a general way" where his son was. He was ordered to produce him to-morrow morning.

Dr. Haubold and his wife, Elise, who is a daughter of the late Mayor Nolan of Albany, separated last January under an agreement. The mother was to have the custody of the boy until he is 14 years old, the father being allowed to see him every second week. He was taken to see his father by a nurse last Tuesday. When the nurse returned for the child she was unable to find either him or his father.

Mrs. Haubold's lawyer, Edmund L. Mooney, hunted for the child all Tuesday night and Wednesday, and then swore out the writ.

The physician appeared in court yesterday with his counsel, George C. Basch. The lawyer told the court the boy was out of the State, and he did not know where he was.

"Do you mean to say the father does not know where the child is?" inquired Justice Clinch in surprise.

"He knows in a general way," responded the lawyer, "but is not sure. If your Honor will adjourn the case for a week the boy will be produced."

Mr. Mooney objected, saying that the doctor was in contempt for disobeying the writ, and that the boy's mother was prostrated.

Justice Clinch then gave Dr. Haubold until to-morrow to produce the boy.

"If he is not produced then," said Mr. Mooney, "we will scour every State in the Union to find him. I will have a hundred men out within fifteen minutes after their failure to produce the boy."

ART BOOKS AT AUCTION.

Books, fine art publications, and art sales catalogues belonging to L. Christ Delmonico and to the estate of the late Mrs. Eliza M. Curtis were sold yesterday afternoon and evening at the American Art Galleries, and realized $1,002.35. Mr. Delmonico's art publications and catalogues at the evening sale brought $899. Most of them were bought by dealers. The highest price of the evening was $20, paid by Keppel & Co. for "Princess Mathilde," illustrated and priced. The Society Library paid $3.25 for "Armand Doria," illustrated and priced.

Prime's "Pottery and Porcelain," illustrated, was the most interesting book sold in the afternoon. It is a rare book and went to Charles Scribner for $14. J. O. Wright paid $7.80 for "Manners and Customs of the Ancient Egyptians," six volumes in half calf. A set of Dickens's works, the original household edition, illustrated by Darley, 44 volumes, sold for $24.20.

GOT BACK HIS LOST $6,000.

A. B. Morley, a dealer in mining securities at 41-43 Wall Street, reported yesterday that a wallet containing certificates of mining stock aggregating 20,000 shares, worth about $6,000, which he had lost Tuesday afternoon on a Ninth Avenue elevated train, had been returned to him. The wallet had a label directing its return if found to his Wall Street address or to his home at 41 West Sixtieth Street.

Late yesterday afternoon a ragged small boy called at Mr. Morley's house and asked for him. Mr. Morley wasn't there, but a guest, Ambrose Neil, saw the boy.

Holding out the wallet, the boy said:

"Me brudder found this bundle of stuff. He didn't know wot it wuz, but the tag on it says to bring it here. So here's de goods."

Mr. Neil gave the boy a five-dollar bill.

Fifteen Hotel Keepers and Others Are Held for Trial.

Fifteen hotel keepers, brewers, and manufacturers were held yesterday for trial in General Sessions for violation of the smoke ordinance.

"I would rather use hard coal," said E. M. Tierney, manager of the Marlborough, when arraigned in the Jefferson Market Court, "but it's so scarce that it's hard to get."

W. E. D. Stokes, proprietor of the Ansonia, whose fireman had been arraigned in the morning, was arraigned in the afternoon on a similar charge.

"I do not see why Commissioner Darlington should be hard on me," he said. "Members of the Hotel Men's Association say it is impossible to get coal."

After suffering the fate of the other alleged violators, he added: "From what I have found, Charles T. Barney is behind this crusade. He is the head of some sort of air-purifying society."

Among the other alleged violators brought before the Magistrates were representatives or employes of the Hotel St. Hubert, the Wellington, the Orleans, a piano factory, a cigar box factory, and a manufacturer of flagpoles.

In one case photographs of volumes of heavy black smoke pouring from the chimneys of a factory were presented.

Queens Policeman Missing.

Policeman Howard Greves of the Richmond Hill station, Queens, has been missing since Monday night, when he started out from his home, 3,114 Fulton Avenue, to visit a friend. He had complained of a headache when he came off duty, and his wife fears that something has happened to him.

There are Two kinds of general printers—one knows his limitations and sticks to general printing, does not attempt specialties for which neither his experience nor facilities fit him, and when he gets inquiries for color illustrations refers them to the house which specializes that business.

The other kind of a printer "prints everything," knows no limitations, quotes Colortype work at less than it costs Colortype specialists to do it, and cheerfully guarantees the most absolute satisfaction.

Results: The printer loses money, the customer is disappointed, disgusted and denounces the Colortype process as "no good."

SCHAEFER AND SLOSSON MAKE TOURNEY RECORDS

"Wizard" Averages 31 4-16 Against Cutler.

THE "STUDENT" RUNS 153

Boston Billiardist Makes Good Fight, but Succumbs to Schaefer's Skill —Slosson Erratic.

Both of the billiard veterans, Jacob Schaefer and George F. Slosson, were yesterday winners in the international championship, and each made a record for the tourney. "Wizard" Schaefer attained the average of 31 4-16, while Slosson, the "Student," put together a run of 153. The cue dexterity each displayed in the concert hall of the Madison Square Garden was remarkable, and easily the best eighteen-inch balkline, two shots in balk, that has been shown so far in the tournament.

Schaefer defeated Albert G. Cutler, the former Boston amateur, in the night match by 500 points to 366. The game was an excellent contest, for Cutler clung right upon the heels of his opponent, playing with such unlooked-for speed that his [illegible] average was 24 6-15, which also excelled the former high mark. Slosson, against an overwhelming lead, defeated Ora Morningstar, securing two remarkable runs—153, followed by 108, and leaving at the end of his string of 500 his younger professional adversary at 366.

Schaefer missed the lay-off shot after winning the bank, while Cutler negotiated it by playing the balls around the table for his opener. Then the "Wizard" set the balls rolling under his deft touch and speedily counted 25. Two shots later Schaefer was engaged in coaxing another gather. The balls were widely spread on the green plateau, and he attempted a cushion shot, but an unlooked-for kiss set all the balls a-rolling, the cue ball zigzagging twice across the table, finally being kissed to the second object ball by the red. There was a burst of laughter from the crowd, and Schaefer himself grinned at the ivories for the balance of the inning, which terminated at 52, as Schaefer's cue ball traveled sidewise on a long draw shot.

It was a dazzling and varied array of 99 carroms that Schaefer provided for the delectation of the spectators on his next turn. Swift and puzzling three-cushion shots, spread draws in which the cue ball described curves like a bow and that marvelous nurse in which the balls appeared to be lulled into somnolence under the almost hypnotic magic of this master's willow wand were all counted within the space of a few minutes. The exhibition held the spectators spellbound, and at the end they groaned at his failure, and then applauded him without stint.

Three turns after this Schaefer entered his third hundred, having followed his big run with 35, 0, and 16. His total for the six innings was 202, while the best Cutler could show on his string was 88. Taking the balls from a close leave of Cutler's on his seventh turn, Schaefer in three counts sent the ivory globes into the centre unlimited panel and rythmically kept them kissing until he had counted 34, and had only moved the balls a few inches. Cleverly executed ball to ball carroms followed until his total was 51, at which a bank caused his retirement.

The Boston man, previous to this run of Schaefer's, had begun to show surprising form and skill at really close nursing and position. Beginning with his sixth inning he put together runs of 34, 57, 18, and 61, which brought him up to 219, as against Schaefer's 280. Cutler was lion-hearted in the way he went after difficult shots. He had any number of line-ups, enough to have broken the spirit of a veteran. This only served to bring out the perfection of his massé stroke, and the applause indicated that it was appreciated. Cutler protested at Referee McLaughlin's ruling of no count which closed his 57. More than half of the spectators were of the opinion that the count was made, and a murmur of protest was raised, but the referee remained inflexible.

Those whimsicalities of Schaefer's which kept the spectator thoroughly alive to his cue work were exemplified when he opened his twelfth inning. He began by masséing, and for half a dozen shots he used the stroke without any apparent necessity for so doing. A considerable number of shots followed, in which he put so much English on the ball and used the cushions so adroitly and deceptively as to keep the crowd guessing as to what the next shot would be. This inning added 49 to his string, and the attention of the attendants remained held by Cutler, who, when he stepped to the table, counted 55 by deft manipulation and nursing.

Cutler put together 47 closely played carroms in his next turn after a brief but brilliant run of 29 ball-to-ball shots by Schaefer. Then the "Wizard" began what promised to be his concluding run. Again the bewildering and diversified carrooms came so quickly under his wielding of the cue that Referee McLaughlin's tongue tripped more than once as he rattled off the count. The middle section of the run, which totaled 124, was made by the perfect line nurse along the chalked streak at the head of the table, the balls only perceptibly moving as the carroms were scored. At the one hundred and twenty-third count the balls froze. Schaefer then executed a massé that was so quickly made and with so little effort in spite of its difficulty that the crowd cheered him to the echo. Then he tried a second massé, but this went awry, and Cutler took his turn, which resulted in his working out 28 prettily calculated ball-to-ball shots.

The big run had brought the "Wizard" near to the end of his string, and although a careless three-cushion drive only resulted in his getting 1 on his following turn he ended the splendid contest in his next inning with an unfinshed 8 during which he had the spheres bunched in one of the corners. The summary:

Schaefer—0 52 99 35 0 16 51 4 29 8 0 49 20 124 1 8. Total, 500 points; average, 31 4-16; high runs, 124, 99, and 52.

Cutler—15 6 3 30 0 34 57 18 61 5 0 55 47 28 12. Total, 366 points; average, 24 6-15; high runs, 61, 57, and 55.

Referee—Edward McLaughlin.

Few of the spectators that attended the afternoon match witnessed George F. Slosson's defeat of Ora Morningstar by the score of 500 to 388. This result was only incidental, for the real feature of the competition was the record run of Slosson of 153, and immediately backed with 108, when he appeared to be so hopelessly behind that many of the spectators left believing that there could be no doubt as to Morningstar's victory. The big cluster that Slosson put together is the best of the tournament so far.

From the opening bank for lead, which he won, Slosson was in such poor stroke that he failed to count in double figures until his fifteenth turn at the table, when a hard-earned 16 brought his total up to 58 as against 214 for Schaefer's former pupil. The younger professional steadily manipulated the spheres for pretty clusters, playing from ball to ball and showing splendid control of position. His best bit of manipulation netted him 60 on his tenth turn at the table, and this contained several massé shots of a pyrotechnical character.

At the twenty-first inning Morningstar led by 160 points, the score being 336 to 176, and after Slosson had followed this by several vain attempts he was so disgusted that he threw his cue against his chair, and, walking over to a friend, remarked that it was robbery to take the public's money to see him play, and that after the close of this tournament he would never again contest in a match.

Slosson's miss of a simple cushion carrom in the twenty-eighth inning, which brought the score to 360 for Morningstar and 213 for Slosson, caused more than half of the spectators to leave, thinking that the "Student" could not hope to overcome a lead of 147 points at that stage. But from a good leave Slosson coaxed the balls into the unlimited centre panel on his following turn, and he did not stop until he had counted 153. He then missed on a thin massé in one of the corners.

Morningstar came back at Slosson with 26 neatly gauged carroms, but as he missed leaving a good set-up, Slosson followed with 108, which made his victory sure. One of the counts in this last run was a bare grazing of the balls, and Referee McLaughlin created a laugh by sprinting around the table and placing his face close to the rolling spheres to make sure of the count, as both Morningstar and Slosson earlier in the match had questioned his decision upon similar shots. The summary:

Slosson—0 0 4 1 7 8 1 2 5 1 8 0 4 1 16 0 40 33 0 20 25 4 0 0 11 20 0 2 153 108 1 26. Total 500 points; average, 15 20-32; high runs, 153, 108, and 40.

Morningstar—0 0 0 14 36 1 48 10 3 60 2 4 15 12 0 9 18 36 6 30 28 4 4 7 3 0 6 0 26 0 2. Total—388 points; average, 12 16-31; high runs, 60, 48, and 36.

Referee—Edward McLaughlin.

The games to-day will bring William F. Hoppe against Morningstar in the afternoon, while in the evening George Sutton will engage the Frenchman, Louis Cure.

GERMAN YACHT COMING HERE.

Crown Prince Will Be Competitor for Roosevelt Cup This Summer.

KIEL, Germany, April 12.—The Kiel Gazette says that the German Crown Prince intends to send his new small yacht, the Angela II., to Boston, to compete for the Roosevelt Cup late this Summer. Fifteen German boats have been ordered for the trial races abroad.

The conditions which govern the contest for the Roosevelt Cup, to be raced for next September off Marblehead, between small German and American yachts under the auspices of the Imperial Yacht Club of Kiel and the Eastern Yacht Club of Boston, Mass., provide for three yachts from each country. The entries for the trial races for the American boats will close July 16 and the trial races will be held in August.

Each yacht will be designed and built in the country they represent, and all their sails and fittings will be made in the country to which they belong. The racers are limited in dimensions to thirty-two feet for the sum total of water line length, beam and draught measurement. There is no restriction as to rig and there will be no time allowance. Each yacht will be required to carry a crew of not more than three, who must be native-born citizens of the country in which the yacht is built.

Mansfield Wants to Buy Yacht.

Richard Mansfield has made an offer to Henry A. Morss for the sloop Cossack, being anxious to have a smaller boat than his schooner Amorita, which he has placed on the sales list. W. S. Eton's Agatha, the new schooner which he built last year, and which he has now discarded in order to build a bigger boat which will be eligible for the King's Cup race, is also listed for sale.

JOCKEY CLUB'S NEW BUREAU.

Will Supply Stallions to Encourage New York Breeders.

A meeting of the Stewards of The Jockey Club held in the rooms of The Jockey Club, in the Windsor Arcade, yesterday afternoon, took the first steps toward a new departure in the management of racing affairs in New York, the innovation approved consisting of what the Stewards styled "A Bureau of Breeding in connection with The Jockey Club." For the establishment of the new bureau the following resolution was adopted:

"Be it resolved, That a committee of five from members of The Jockey Club be appointed by the Chair to establish a breeding bureau, by which thoroughbred stallions may be placed in various counties of the State of New York, under such regulation as may be deemed proper, and, to that end, authority be given to the committee to draw from the treasury of The Jockey Club a sum not exceeding $10,000."

The Chair appointed the following committee from the members of The Jockey Club: H. T. Oxnard, Clarence Mackay, Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., Harry Payne Whitney, and H. K. Knapp, Chairman.

The Stewards who voted on the resolution included all of the board, as follows: August Belmont, Chairman, presiding; J. H. Bradford, F. R. Hitchcock, H. K. Knapp, James R. Keene, Andrew Miller, and F. K. Sturgis. The intent of the Stewards is that stallions approved by the Bureau of Breeding shall be provided at the expense of The Jockey Club to be placed in the several counties of New York where horses may be bred profitably, with the view to encouraging the breeding of thoroughbred or half-bred horses for either racing or general purposes. It was stated by the Stewards and members of The Jocky Club, who comprise nearly all the most extensive private breeders of thoroughbred stock in America, that many stallions already have been approved and appropriated to the purposes of the new bureau.

W. S. Vosburgh was appointed Steward to represent The Jockey Club at the Spring meeting of the Queens County Jockey Club, which opens Monday, and Steward in the same capacity for the Metropolitan Jockey Club's Spring meeting at Jamaica. C. Cornehlson was appointed clerk of the scales for both the Aqueduct and Jamaica meetings. Henry J. Morris was appointed Steward to represent The Jockey Club at the Spring meeting of the Maryland Jockey Club at Pimlico, and other officials for the Pimlico race meeting were approved as follows: Starter, Philip McGinnis; Steward to represent the Jockey Club and handicapper, Joseph A. Murphy; clerk of the course and scales, John Boden; judges, Frank J. Bryan and W. P. Riggs; paddock and patrol judge, C. W. Smith. The following licenses were granted:

Jockeys—Henry Alex, Solly Blondheim, Frank Chisman, Peter Coane, Walter H. Curd, William Davis, William F. Doyle, David Englander, Joseph Frucht, Frank Garvin, Almer Helgesen, W. Hustis, Douglas Kent, Fred Keyes, Charles Koerner, Charles Morris, John Mulrenan, William Muth, B. Myers, J. McCaney, Dave R. McDaniel, Harry Noone, Joseph Notter, George Pierott, Herman Radtke, Lewis Redel, Frank Riley, John M. Schaffner, Ben Smith, Gaston Sterck, Pat A. Walsh, D. E. Wishard, Leroy Williams, William Woods, John C. Curran, H. B. Farrow, William Hayes, Thomas Harty, Henry Drolette, Harry Cochran.

OKENITE DISQUALIFIED.

August Belmont's Colt Lost Race for Fouling at Benning.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—No better overnight events have been carded at the meeting of the Washington Jockey Club at Benning than those offered to-day. No special features were presented, but all of the six events filled well and the sport was excellent.

The first serious trouble of the meeting grew out of the second race, a two-year-old event, in which August Belmont's Okenite was made an odds-on favorite. After committing what seemed from the stand to be a palpable foul, Okenite jumped out in front in the first furlong and won, eased up at the end, by four lengths. He evidently was the best horse in the race. So much grumbling has been heard about fouls in previous races that the judges took this matter under consideration. After a long discussion, Okenite was disqualified, Orphan Lad, which ran second, being declared the winner, with Black Knight second and Bettie Landon third. The decision of the Stewards was received with cheers. Summary:

FIRST RACE.—Handicap, for three-year-olds and upward; five and a half furlongs, Columbia course. Pater, 116 pounds, (Miller,) 6 to 5, and 2 to 5, won; Bohemia, 124, (Knapp,) 2 to 1 and 3 to 5, second; Race King, 114, (Robbins,) 4 to 1, third. Time—1:10. Monacodor and Veronese also ran.

SECOND RACE.—For two-year-olds; four and a half furlongs, old course. Orphan Lad, 102 pounds, (Miller,) 7 to 5 and out, won; Black Knight, 102, (McDaniel,) 40 to 1 and 8 to 1, second; Bettie Landon, 102, (J. Johnson,) 15 to 1, third. Time—0:58. Okenite won, but was disqualified for fouling. Sunburst also ran.

THIRD RACE.—For three-year-olds and upward; six furlongs, Columbia course. Lackey, 100 pounds, (McDaniel,) 8 to 5 and 2 to 5, won; Tickle, 98, (Miller,) 7 to 5 and 1 to 3, second; Waddell II., 110 (Knapp,) 12 to 1, third. Time—1:15. Warning and Midas also ran.

FOURTH RACE.—Steeplechase for maiden four-year-olds and upward; about two miles. Yama Christy, 151 pounds, (Q. Kelly,) 4 to 1 and 7 to 5, won; Fergus, 137, (Davidson,) 2 to 1 and even, second; Harry Bayler, 151, (Grantland,) 6 to 1, third. Time—5:23 2-5. Valley Forge fell. Currant also ran.

FIFTH RACE.—For maiden three-year-olds; seven furlongs, Columbia course. Lotowanna, 106 pounds, (Knapp,) 4½ to 1 and 2 to 1, won; High Brush, 111, (Robbins,) 5 to 1 and 2 to 1, second; Adonis, 106, (Shaw,) 8 to 1, third. Time—1:32. Tarlac, Contractor, Frills, Queen Mary, and Elton Weaver also ran.

SIXTH RACE.—Selling; for three-year-olds and upward; one mile and seventy yards, Columbia course. Yorkshire Lad, 106 pounds, (Frieshon,) 3 to 1 and 4 to 5, won; T. S. Martin, 95, (Miller,) 11 to 10 and 2 to 5, second; Merlingo, 96, (McDaniel,) 5 to 1, third. Time—1:47 4-5. Dekaber, Proceeds, and Zany also ran.

SIGNAL CORPS HOLDS GAMES.

Interesting Contest in Connection with Annual Review and Decoration.

The seventh annual review and games of the First Company, Signal Corps, National Guard of New York, at the Central Park Riding Academy, Fifty-ninth Street and Seventh Avenue, last night, produced a notable exhibition of equestrian skill. The company was reviewed by Gen. George Moore Smith, commanding the First Brigade. Sergt. Charles W. Le More and First Lieut. Henry Godet received State decorations for long and faithful service. Sergt. Henry W. Scharf was declared champion signalman for 1905, winning the John S. Scully prize for two successive years' leadership, while twenty-seven company decorations and twenty-five expert signalmen were rewarded.

The athletic end of the programme was introduced by a broad-sword contest between Corporal Thoma and Private Grassi, which resulted in a draw. Both the novelty and egg and spoon races caused much amusement. The latter consisted in riding with a dress suit case about the arena, then dismounting, putting on a shirt, lighting a cigarette, raising an umbrella, resuming the dress suit case and mounting, and completing another circuit of the ring. Summary:

Broad Sword Contest.—Corporal Thoma vs. Private Grassi. A draw.

Double Pursuit Race.—Two men seeking to remove colors from a third—Sergt. Hallahan, Corporal Huelser, and Private Coffin. Won by Corporal Huelser, who secured both colors and saved his own.

Egg and Spoon Race.—Privates Livingston, Anderson, Everitt, and King. Won by Private Everitt.

Novelty Race.—Sergt. Wallace, Privates Coffin and Prahl. Won by Sergt. Wallace.

Relay Race in Heavy Marching Order.—Won by Company B, with Privates Lee, Maloney, Rust, and Merwin; Company A second, with Privates Kane, Little, Schmidt, and Veeder.

Tug-of-War on Horseback.—Won by Team B, Privates Livingston, Tschimbke, Anderson, Bruckner, and Prahl, from Team A, Privates Knight, Callan, Kieb, Schmidt, and Stephens.

Team Wrestling.—Won by Team B, Privates Bruckner, Prahl, Livingston, Tschimbke, and Anderson, from Team A, Privates Stephens, Kieb, Callan, Schmidt, and Knight.

Mounted Melee.—Won by Team A, Corporals Collyer and Thoma and Privates Everitt, Moore, and Trunk, from Team B, Sergts. Roll and Howe and Privates Fowler, Cushing, and Snowber.

Potato Race.—Sergt. Hallahan and Privates Dooris, Shaughnessy, Bowe, and Kieb. Won by Private Dooris.

HERE are some of the marks whereby you can tell the correct thing in silk hats for this Spring:

Crown high with decided bell—flat set, that is, the rim has very little curve on the sides—cloth band 1¾ inches wide.

In choosing a hat, however, remember that an eighth of an inch in crown or rim makes a big difference in the general appearance. If you would be certain of getting a hat that is not merely correct but truly proportioned, the thing which more than anything else makes for style and character, choose from our Spring stock.

Our derbies are characterized by the same high quality and style—designed to appeal to careful and tasteful dressers. You will be especially interested in a line of featherweight self-conforming derbies that have already made a decided impression on our trade.

A Public Duty and Its Performance

If you personally owned the entire equipment and personally controlled the entire organization of the American Cigar Co.—

And if you used this equipment and knowledge to produce cigars exclusively for your own smoking—

You could make no better cigars nor make them more carefully than we are now making them for you.

We believe that the possession of the largest equipment, organization, resources and business ever known in the cigar industry, binds us to a public duty to give the public the best cigar possible to make. Furthermore,

It is Good Business Policy

We are good enough judges of human nature to appreciate the fact that meritorious service is the best and most permanent foundation for commercial success.

If we give better cigars at lower cost than can be given by any other manufacturer, we shall secure, by perfectly logical and common-sense methods, what is virtually a franchise from the public to supply it with its cigars.

A franchise based upon public preference is stronger and more enduring than any that can be secured by legislative enactment, and it is this sort of franchise, obtained in this way, that we are after.

Gaining Success by Deserving It

Cigar smokers know what they want. Taste is constantly improving, demanding better goods all the time. There is no way of forcing people to purchase any brand of cigar which does not appeal to them on its own merits.

From the beginning, we have devoted the entire force of this organization and equipment to the problem of improving cigar quality and lowering cigar cost.

THE "TRIANGLE A"

MERIT MARK

A

Stands for Honest Cigar Values

An "All-Around" Production

The products of our various factories include every variety of cigars—from the little cigar such as the "Royal Bengals" to the highest type of "Seed and Havana."

An important advantage in this comprehensiveness of output lies in the power it gives us to grade our tobacco very accurately. This assures unvarying uniformity—a feature much appreciated by the discriminating smoker.

The tremendous improvement in quality, due to our new and exclusive processes of curing, blending and ripening American grown leaf, extends through our entire line.

These processes are performed in our own gigantic "stemmeries." They have superseded the old, crude haphazard methods which have been followed with blind devotion since the days of Sir Walter Raleigh.

These scientific processes have improved the domestic cigar at least 100 per cent., giving a "mellowness," mildness, freedom from bitterness and a developed fragrance to our 5c. cigars, for example, which were by no means common even in the 10c. cigar a few years ago.

An Unbroken Line of Successes

This improvement has been demonstrated to the smoking public with ever-increasing emphasis by the appearance of brand after brand of cigars selling at 5c. possessing a superiority which has made them instantly popular and permanently successful. These are of different brand-names and different characteristics, but are all marked with our "▲" (Triangle A) merit-mark and possess the fundamental qualities of fragrance and "ripeness" for which the "▲" (Triangle A) stands unerringly.

This "▲" merit-mark appears on the front of every box containing such cigars, and may be accepted implicitly as a guarantee of mellowness, "smoothness," quality, fragrance and uniformity of character.

The NEW

Cremo

Victoria Size—5¢

The latest "▲" (Triangle A) production is "The New Cremo" in Victoria size at 5c. which, perhaps better than all that have preceded it, exemplifies the immense improvement that has been effected by our experiments and equipment.

Our purpose is that our organization and resources shall always be used to the increasing betterment of cigar quality and to the lowering of cigar cost.

NATIONAL LEAGUE OPENS CHAMPIONSHIP SEASON

New York in the Lead, but the Brooklyns Lose.

BIG CROWDS AT THE GAMES

The National League began its thirty-first championship season yesterday, and all indications point to one of the liveliest campaigns in the history of the veteran organization. The champion New Yorks played the Philadelphias upon the Quakers' grounds, and while outbatting the local men by more than two to one, just managed to win by one run. The champions presented Ames and Bresnahan as their battery, and Ames pitched one of the best games of his career.

At Washington Park, Brooklyn, the Bostons, with their celebrated left-handed pitcher, Young, beat the local team, but the all-around play of the Brooklyns showed that the team had been greatly strengthened over last year.

In the West the Cincinnati team, under the management of Edward Hanlon, was easily defeated by the Chicagoans, but at St. Louis the Pittsburgs were treated to a surprise, for the ex-champions were obliged to play thirteen innings before securing a victory.

BOSTON BEATS BROOKLYN.

Game Well Played, but Donovan's Men Could Not Hit Young.

There have been larger and more enthusiastic attendances at the opening of the championship season at Washington Park, Brooklyn, than that which witnessed the game between the Brooklyn and Boston teams yesterday, but the ten thousand persons who saw the Brooklyns defeated by a score of 2 to 0 had nothing but praise to bestow upon the splendid contest, especially the work of the Brooklyns under their new manager, "Pat" Donovan. Much curiosity was manifested in the play of McCarthy, Maloney, and Casey, who were exchanged by the Chicago club for Sheckard, and on all sides it was conceded that the Brooklyns have gained a big advantage in the change.

Young's pitching was undoubtedly the principal cause of the Brooklyns' defeat. The left-handed expert was in excellent form, as was shown by the futile attempts to gauge his delivery. Two safe hits, one of the scratch kind, were all that Donovan's men could make, and but one Brooklyn runner got so far as third base in the nine innings. Young was finely supported, a bad throw of Needham's to second base and a fumble by Strobel being the only errors charged against the Bostons.

McIntyre was pitted against the crack left-hander from Boston, and there was very little difference in their effectiveness. The work of McIntyre would in many instances have resulted in a victory, but his associates could not bat, while the Bostons were lucky in securing a home run in the second inning, which was the only tally made until the ninth. Then, with two men out, McIntyre appeared to weaken, and by giving the second base on balls during the game and his wild throw to first enabled the Bostons to add another run.

The chilly atmosphere did not dampen the ardor of the "rooters," and when the usual parade of the two teams was made from the clubhouse to home plate, headed by the Twenty-third Regiment Band, the players were enthusiastically cheered. The score:

PITTSBURG, 2; ST. LOUIS, 1.

ST. LOUIS, April 12.—Pittsburg opened the local National championship season to-day by winning an exciting thirteen-inning contest from St. Louis by a score of 2 to 1. Both Taylor for St. Louis and Willis for Pittsburg pitched in mid-season form and not a run was scored until the last inning. Pittsburg's runs came after Clymer and Wagner had singled, Nealon sacrificed, and Sheehan bunted, which Beckley threw wild to Grady, and two runs were scored. Score:

CHICAGO, 7; CINCINNATI, 2.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, April 12.—The Cincinnati baseball season of 1906 was opened this afternoon before 17,241 spectators. The weather was perfect. Mayor Dempsey addressed the players and tossed a ball on the diamond, starting the game. Cincinnati was first to score, but did not keep the lead long, Chicago securing passes off Overall and making hits when they would do the most good. The visitors played a perfect game in the field, while the support accorded to Overall was bad at times. Score:

AMERICANS RALLY AT BAT.

Score All Their Runs in Two Innings and Defeat Newark, 5 to 0.

For five innings yesterday at American League Park the Greater New Yorks and the Newark team of the Eastern League struggled for mastery, with the result that no runs were scored by either team. In the sixth inning, however, with a change of battery, Hesterfer and Shea taking the place of Fertsch and McCauley, the Americans did some lively batting, and before the third man had been put out men tallied. Williams also hit safely, scoring Elberfeld. La Porte also crossed the plate on a steal. In the seventh inning Clarkson, who replaced Hogg, hit for two bases, and Dougherty sent him home by another two-bagger. The score:

Columbia Won from Navy.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 12.—Columbia defeated the midshipmen here this afternoon by a score of 7 to 5. Errors were frequent during the game, but there were some redeeming plays on both sides. Tilt was unsteady in the first inning, but during the remainder of the game he improved, and Columbia gradually worked ahead. Columbia especially excelled in base running, and Young's throwing to bases was almost perfect. The score:

Columbia's Bowlers Champions.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTON, Penn., April 12.—Columbia won the intercollegiate bowling championship here to-night by defeating Lafayette in the last game of the series. The New Yorkers secured an early lead in what proved the deciding game, but Lafayette gradually crept up to an even position. Columbia's skill and experience told in the final half, and Columbia won by over 100 pins. Her team was: C. E. Schlachter, J. S. Cosgrove, M. C. Ansorge, R. J. White, W. Scharf.

CHAMPIONS START OFF BY BEATING QUAKERS

Snappy Play of New Yorks Rouses Philadelphians.

SCORE IS THREE TO TWO

McGraw's Men Gain Winning Advantage in First Inning—12,000 Persons at Game.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 12.—Nearly 12,000 persons assisted in the inauguration of the National League championship baseball season at the Philadelphia Park this afternoon. The world's champion New York team defeated the Philadelphias by the close score of 3 to 2, after a battle which enthused the big crowd from beginning to end.

The crowd came to the park by easy stages. There was at no time during the afternoon a crush so great that long lines waited for tickets. From 1 o'clock to half an hour before the game started the turnstiles clicked steadily, but not rapidly. Thousands had entered the park before 2 o'clock, and the musical selections rendered by Hummel's Veteran Corps Band were thoroughly appreciated and applauded for an hour.

At 3 o'clock the members of the band left their seats, in front of the grand stand, and proceeded across the field to the clubhouse, where both teams formed in a solid front behind the band and marched toward second base. Here the column wheeled, in more or less military precision, and headed toward the tall flagstaff in right centre field. Supt. Payne then hauled to the top of the pole a small red, white, and blue bundle, the band playing a National air, while from all parts of the field the spectators arose in their seats and uncovered their heads. A strong, dexterous jerk, and from a small bundle there sprang into existence the revered Stars and Stripes, the band playing "America," as Old Glory unfurled.

The champions were the first to take the field, and their snappy work impressed all who intently watched their every movement. Every one was convinced that it was the same old New York Giants, aggressive, nervy, and hard to defeat, while the local men in the field made an equally good impression by their vigorous practice.

Mayor Weaver had not been long in his seat when Umpire O'Day walked over toward the left side of the grand stand. This was the signal for every one to rise in his seat, crane his neck, and steadily gaze up to where Mayor Weaver and President Shettsline were standing. The club executive handed the City Executive a new ball, and with a full swing of his right arm Mr. Weaver hurled the white sphere accurately into the waiting hands of the umpire. The crowd shouted its approbation, the Mayor resumed his seat, and Umpire O'Day walked toward the plate, picked up his mask, and yelled "Play ball!"

Manager Duffy had selected Lush, the young left-hander, to operate in the middle of the diamond. The burly Bresnahan was the first batter to face the Quaker pitcher. Lush drew back his arm and hurled with all his speed the ball to the plate. But his control was poor, and the first ball pitched allowed a batter to reach first, as Bresnahan's short ribs stopped the career of the ball. With a wince and a laugh he trotted down to the initial bag. Browne came to bat, and after twice attempting to advance the runner by a sacrifice, hit directly at Lush, who retired Bresnahan at second. Browne was out trying to steal second on a splendid throw by Donovan to Gleason.

Donlin hit the ball just out of the reach of Doolin, and was safe at first. McGann followed with a triple to the right field foul line, Donlin crossing the plate with the first run of the local championship season. But the trouble was not over. Mertes caught one of Lush's swift inshoots on the end of the bat, sending the ball speeding to right centre for two bases. McGann walked home.

These two runs, made after two men had been retired by the most lucky of hits, really decided the game. While Lush was hit more or less frequently during the remaining innings, he always stiffened his pace when the champions appeared dangerous, and no more runs would have crossed the plate had not Sentelle thrown the ball to the right field "bleachers" in the succeeding inning, and another New Yorker crossed the plate.

It was in the second inning that the Philadelphias made their first run, after the first man had been retired. Titus reached first on called balls, and he went to third on Bransfield's double to right field. Doolin hit to McGann, who threw the runner out at first, but Titus scored. They scored again in the ninth on Wagner's single, a wild pitch, and Titus's out. The score:

Notes of the Thoroughbreds.

Official announcement of the declarations from the Excelsior Handicap, the second important event of the Spring handicap series, to be run at the Jamaica track, were made yesterday, the list including eight horses at $25 each. The horses are Sysonby, 131 pounds; Hamburg Belle, 120, and Cairngorm, 119, while the lighter weights declared are Blandy, 111; Oxford, 107; Mount Henry, 100; Astronomer, 96, and Belle of Pequest, 90.

The Coney Island Jockey Club has announced the full list of nominations for the Futurity of 1906, to be run at the Autumn meeting at Sheepshead Bay, the list showing 175 horses still eligible of the 1,109 original nominations, the declarations leaving the race worth approximately $35,000. The largest nominators represented in the race now are James R. Keene and August Belmont with twelve entries each, and Newton Bennington with ten entries.

J. C. F. Jacoby has reported to The Jockey Club the death of the two-year-old colt Gilt Edge, by Golden Garter-Salverine.

A partnership agreement between the two well-known trainers Frank McCabe and Thomas Welsh in the two-year-old Killochan, to run in the name of Trainer McCabe, has been recorded with The Jockey Club.

The programme set for the Metropolitan Jockey Club's meeting on the Jamaica track, announced in the racing calendar this week, has been changed from the original arrangement, to bring the running of the Excelsior Handicap on Saturday, April 28, the second day of the meeting instead of on Friday, the first day of Jamaica racing.

The Queens County Jockey Club yesterday filed with the Secretary of State at Albany a license granted to it by the State Racing Commission to conduct meetings at its race course at Aqueduct from April 16 to April 26, and from Nov. 3 to Nov. 15, all dates inclusive.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

In a decision by Marion De Vries, the Board of United States General Appraisers sustained yesterday a protest filed by R. F. Downing & Co. of New York regarding the rate of duty applicable to so-called grass cloth. The question at issue was whether the merchandise was properly dutiable at 45 per cent. ad valorem as manufactures of vegetable fibres, as assessed by the Government, or as "paper hangings," with duty at only 25 per cent. ad valorem. The Collector is directed to make suitable reliquidation of the entries, in order that the excessive duties may be refunded.

The board sustained claims submitted by B. Ullman & Co., E. Oppenheim, and Switzer & Schussels, New York, and Charles Taylor's Sons, Philadelphia.

SIGN BOARDS FOR AUTOISTS.

Roads Between This City, Boston, and Philadelphia to be Plainly Marked.

Nearly 200 sign boards will be placed within the next few weeks along the roads chiefly frequented by automobile tourists between New York and Boston and New York and Philadelphia. This laudable work, which will benefit not only users of automobiles but everybody who travels on the highway, is being done under the direct auspices of the Automobile Club of America in co-operation with the American Automobile Association. The Automobile Club has appropriated $2,000 for the purpose and in this respect it has shown itself worthy of a National name, for while assistance, financial and otherwise, will be gladly welcomed from local clubs whose members will be peculiarly benefited by this sign board campaign, the work will go on and all the sign boards necessary will be erected regardless of outside aid.

"If more money is needed," said an officer of the club yesterday, "and local clubs are not able to contribute, I presume we will find some way of raising the additional amount ourselves. Notwithstanding the large amount of travel between this city and Boston and also in the Philadelphia direction, there is a lamentable dearth of sign posts to direct the ignorant traveler. Many mistakes have occurred. Tourists are constantly getting off the main road and reports that a man has gone from forty to sixty miles out of his way are by no means uncommon. No section of the country is used so much by automobiles as the roads between this city and Boston, and before the touring season really opens we will have the roads plainly marked at all intersecting points so that there will be no excuse for taking a wrong road."

Between this city and Philadelphia about sixty signs will be used, while on the Boston route fully 150 and perhaps more will be needed. Secretary S. M. Butler of the Automobile Club said yesterday that he thought plans would be sufficiently completed to begin placing the first signs next week. The committee will make a definite decision from a number of plans that have been submitted this week, and as rapidly as the signs can be made they will be placed in position. It is hoped to have the two routes well placarded by June 1.

BIG BALLOON WILL GO UP.

Aero Club Members Make Ascension with French Count To-morrow.

Count de la Vaulx will make an ascension to-morrow from Pittsfield in his big balloon Centaur. It was sent to Pittsfield early in the week and word was received yesterday by the officers of the Aero Club of America, under whose auspices the ascent will be made, that the Pittsfield gas works have provided 100,000 cubic feet of gas and will be ready to attach a large pipe to the balloon so that it may be filled within two hours. The Centaur holds about 50,000 cubic feet of gas, and it has been used by Count de la Vaulx in many of his longest and most successful trips abroad.

Count de la Vaulx will be accompanied by Homer W. Hedge, President of the club; Augustus Post and Allan L. Hawley, all members of the Aero Club. They will go to Pittsfield this afternoon, and in the party will be Cortlandt Field Bishop and a number of club members. Provided the weather is good it is the intention of the Count to remain in the air for a long time, and it would not surprise the club members if the party stayed up all night. Count de la Vaulx will return to France within a short time and he is anxious to make a long balloon journey before leaving America.

GOOD TRIALS AT JAMAICA.

Phil Finch and Ram's Horn Show Fast Work.

The fastest work of the Spring training season on the Jamaica track was accomplished yesterday. The best moves were made by the stable mates from the New Orleans Winter tracks, Ram's Horn and Phil Finch, trained by Capt. J. T. Williams. The horses worked together, and, galloping lapped all the way, finished five and a half furlongs, with Ram's Horn seemingly a shade the better horse, in 1:13¾. Both horses look fresh and fit since their arrival at Jamaica two days ago, and it was asserted for the stable that Capt. Williams will send both horses to the post for the Carter. Other excellent moves included a splendid gallop of a mile by Eugenia Burch in 1:42¾, a smart six furlongs gallop by the Louisville filly Zienap in 1:15, a five and a half furlongs trial by Chimney Sweep in 1:14½, and a trial between Onatas and Go Between, from the Shields Stable, over a six furlongs course in 1:15, Onatas winning the trial by a half length.

The going on the Long Island training tracks was slow and muddy, and though the morning breezes dried the courses rapidly, the majority of the trainers passed anything like fast work and were content to wait for better conditions to-day. On the Gravesend track, where the stables of Frank Weir, Thomas Welsh, Richard Miller, and W. B. Jennings were represented among the horses that cantered, Roseben, the present favorite for the Carter Handicap, was the most conspicuous in the morning, and for the first time this Spring had up the jockey who has been engaged to ride him in the race ing more than a half-speed canter, the big in gmore than a half speed canter, the big sprinter being reserved for his regular work to-day.

Of W. B. Jennings's horses Dainty had an easy gallop of a half mile in 0:56, A. J. Goldsborough's Flip Flap had a half mile at just better than a two-minute pace, Thomas Welsh's Merry Lark and Inquisitor worked together a mile in 1:53¾, and the same trainer's Ormondale cantered three furlongs in 0:42, Fred Burlew's First Water breezed a quarter in 0:28, and Cinna, Edna Jackson, and several of the two-year-olds of the big Burlew establishment were sent quarters at a fairly lively pace.

At Sheepshead Bay the largest stable represented in actual work was that trained by Robert Tucker, who sent the highly tried maiden three-year-old King Henry five furlongs in 1:10½, and Glenecho had a similar trial in about the same time.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

FLORENCE J. ROSSE.—Florence J. Rosse, residing at 214 West Forty-fifth Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $8,109, and no assets. The debts were contracted between 1901 and 1905 in this city, White Plains, Plainfield, N. J.; Flushing, L. I.; Baltimore, Washington, and London. They are for borrowed money, antiques, board bill, doctors, dresses, dry goods, clothing, furniture, furs, flowers, groceries, hair dressing, ice, jewelry, livery, millinery, photos, piano hire, shoes, stationery, Summer school, tailoring, telephone, trunks, &c. Among the creditors are Edward J. La Place, $2,000 for antiques; T. Kirkpatrick, $1,800 for jewelry; Emilio Clark, $400 borrowed money; Woodward & Lothrop, Washington, $400 for dry goods; McGibbon & Co., $254 for merchandise; Jessie Kirkland, $250 for dresses, and Marino Struzzieri, $250 for tailoring. There are fifty creditors named in the schedules.

UNITED HEATING COMPANY.—Schedules in bankruptcy of the United Heating Company of 174 Wooster Street show liabilities of $175,639, of which $45,713 are secured and $72,200 contingent to surety companies on bonds for completion of contracts. The nominal assets are $47,810, consisting of stock, $3,563; office furniture, $675; horse and wagon, $285; machinery, $3,028; accounts, $39,982; cash, $170; note, $90; fire insurance rebate, $17. The company has contracts uncompleted on nine public schools, three hospitals, and several other buildings. George A. Walton, President of the company, is the largest creditor, $65,972, of which $29,677 is secured by assignment of contracts; he is also contingently liable for $51,900 bonds of a surety company for completion of contracts. Among the creditors are the John Simmons Company, $6,723; Johnson Service Company, $5,083; American Radiator Company, $2,404; Gurney Heater Manufacturing Company, $1,552; Atlas Engine Works, Indianapolis, $1,343, and P. Delaney & Co., Newburg, $1,488.

H. BIBER & CO.—Judge Holt of the United States District Court has dismissed the petition in bankruptcy filed on March 31 against H. Biber & Co., wholesale dealers in woolens at 181 Eldridge Street, having made a settlement with their creditors at 50 cents on the dollar.

HOLLAND METAL RECOVERY COMPANY.—A meeting of creditors of the Holland Metal Recovery Company of 42 Broadway was held yesterday at the office of Nathaniel A. Prentiss, referee in bankruptcy, at 120 Broadway, and William A. Ullman was elected trustee with a bond of $1,500. The schedules showed liabilities $21,771 and assets $1,500. Creditors were informed that all claims would be paid in full with interest.

There are two models, one of which is illustrated on the left. Note the lapels, the inverted side vents and the G. W. cuffs. Vest is 5-button, high cut; trousers have turn-ups. This is the "Derby I." The "Derby II" is more extreme. It has a centre slit, French side plaits, half-moon, no flap side pockets, no breast pocket, and G. W. cuffs. Both models are only shown by the leading merchant tailors. They are based on the lines of the "Derby" coat, very popular in New York in 1865.

The fabrics—copies of the finest materials—are "Club," "Gun" and "Glen" check designs; silver gray and gray-green colorings.

$22.50 Silk-Lined Black Suits at $16.50

Of vicuna finished black Thibet. Luxurious, comfortable, dressy and perfect fitting. The correct style—material, tailoring and the Merveilleux silk lining are all identical with those found in $22.50 and $25 suits.

$15.00 Black Suits at $11.50

Journeymen tailored, of Melton finished Thibet, whose strength color and wear are warranted by the mill. Lined with imported Venetian. Extreme and conservative models; sizes for all builds.

$20.00 Spring Coats at $15

Louis XV. fitted back models of aluminum gray covert. Exhibiting a handsome new lapel. Even most costly garments show no finer lines. The tailoring necessary to produce that smooth and perfect fit, without which such a garment fails most miserably, is lavishly expended on these coats. They fit and have extreme style. Can you ask more?

Custom Tailored Clothes $10

These would be excellent value at one-third more, because they're the only garments at the price that hold their shape, fit, style and color until worn out. Range includes: Sack SUITS of all-wool Thibet, all-wool black fancy cassimere and cheviot and excellent worsted. TOP COATS of tan and gray covert. SPRING COATS of black Thibet and Oxford cheviot, and CRAVENETTE RAINCOATS of all-wool black Thibet and excellent worsted.

CASTRO.

Such an atmosphere of tricky mystery, recalling CAGLIOSTRO, surrounds CASTRO, that there are doubtless those who will disbelieve the official assurance from the Venezuelan Consul General that the dictator has "temporarily" abdicated in favor of his Vice President. But the account is so circumstantial that there seems to be no reason for distrusting it. Certainly there is no reason for distrusting that it is authorized by CASTRO.

The question what he is "up to" at once stimulates and baffles conjecture. He has never attended to business when he heard the call of pleasure, and so there is no reason why he should have made a formal retirement in order to addict himself to pleasure exclusively. In other circumstances it might seem that he was putting Gen. GOMEZ up as a target to receive the fire aimed at himself. But that invulnerability to foreign critics which has always been his strength remains to him. He is a robber baron with a mountain fastness from which he can defy any attempt to dislodge him.

It is possible that the domestic Venezuelan situation, of which we authentically know very little, is disquieting enough to make him wish himself out of it. His suggestion that his temporary retirement may be made permanent if it should "bring harmony and good-will to the country" seems to point in that direction. At any rate, it is probable that he can abundantly afford to retire with his accumulations, and certain that Venezuela can yet more abundantly afford to have him retire.

TREASURY AND MONEY MARKET.

It will be recalled that not long ago Secretary SHAW proposed a scheme of emergency bank currency without additional assets as security, and justified the proposal by the argument that no lack of confidence would result because people would not know anything about it, as the new and old notes would be in similar form. Comment upon this theory of doing good by stealth was not such as it may be supposed would be agreeable to a Secretary of the Treasury regarding even an unofficial suggestion, but Mr. SHAW has not been deterred thereby from officially proving his faith by his works. According to a Herald's Washington dispatch, it seems that he has been relieving the stringency in Wall Street without saying anything about it. Treasury officials confirm the fact, without giving particulars regarding the place or amount of the deposits made by the Treasury in the favored banks. It is believed that some allowance was made to New York, and some to Chicago, and that the total deposited no more than suffices to make good the Treasury's collections above its disbursements. Thus the money market is left in substantially the same position that it would be if the Treasury were not accumulating a surplus.

It is necessary to approve the act now, as heretofore, but only for the previous reason of necessity. But the manner of doing the necessary act is undeserving of approval. There is nothing new to be said regarding this fresh proof of the ingeniously bad manner in which the Treasury and the money market are linked, to the disadvantage of both. One of two things—either the United States should establish a Government bank with banking functions, or the Treasury should be relieved of discharging banking functions in extra-legal and ingenious methods. If Congress were not preoccupied with a constitutional debate, something might have been accomplished long ago. As it is, reform of the currency and of the tariff may be expected together. Since the incident is unavoidable, it is well that it happens just as the Chamber of Commerce's committee is considering the topic of reform. The greater the accumulation of awful examples and specific cases, the stronger will be the report, based upon actual conditions and not upon any academic theories.

Particularly, it would be interesting to have the testimony of such practical men upon the point whether the method the Secretary adopts does in effect execute his declared purpose of promoting legitimate money market demands, and foiling the speculators. If the Secretary can be relied upon to act in that declared manner, it occurs to us that the speculators can be relied upon to do their share and produce the conditions under which the Secretary's policy would compel the sort of action which he disavows. And since the speculators might be relied upon to keep their plans to themselves, they alone would know whether they were doing anything, and therefore whether or not the Secretary would act. Thus they alone would be in possession of information by which they would profit at the expense of those lacking the information, and with the Treasury as an unwilling accomplice. We assume honesty of purpose and skill of execution on the part of the Treasury. If the day should come when those qualities are lacking, the case for stopping such things as do happen, and worse possibilities, seems to us made out.

NIAGARA RECIPROCITY.

Three thousand delegates to the "Cheap Power" convention, to make of Niagara Falls in Canada a multifold municipal lighting plant for all Ontario, presented their views on Wednesday to the Provincial Government at Toronto. Representative BURTON of Ohio on the same day laid before the American Congress the first definite proposition, looking to diplomatic action with Great Britain and a reciprocal measure by Canada within three years, for the preservation of the Falls by this Nation.

What the United States proposes to do if the Burton bill, backed by the Administration, is passed by Congress is to authorize the Secretary of War to grant revocable permits for the diversion of water for power from Niagara River "only to individuals, companies, or corporations which are now actually producing power from said water, [Niagara River,] and to them only to the amount now actually in use by such individuals, companies, or corporations."

Meanwhile a Federal policy to preserve the scenic beauty of Niagara has already been announced at the Canadian capital through the Minister of Public Works, Mr. HYMAN. By its provisions the right to export electrical energy into the United States is to be granted subject to revocation at short notice; there shall be no claim against either the provincial or the Dominion Government arising out of such revocation, and the companies shall be subject to such rules and regulations as the Government sees fit to impose.

The export of power is the most serious menace to the Falls. That the Canadian Government should have signified its intention to restrict this exportation is to be construed as an earnest of the spirit in which it would meet the advances of the United States through the President and Secretary ROOT. That the Dominion will allow Ontario to settle the matter provincially in a way to defeat the international purpose of preserving the Niagara we doubt. Besides, we are not certain that the intent of the "Cheap Power" conventionists of Ontario extends beyond the expropriation of existing charters and the lighting of towns in the province by power at present generated.

THE SMOKE NUISANCE.

> If the Health Board intends to prevent every hotel in this city from using soft coal in their furnaces it might as well give the order to close the hotels immediately.—Statement of a Hotel Manager.

The attorney for a defendant charged with causing a smoke nuisance was allowed on Wednesday, without contradiction by the court, to refer to Commissioner DARLINGTON's "edict against soft coal users." There is no edict against the use of soft coal. Moreover, its use is not the cause of the nuisance. The City of Cleveland uses bituminous coal exclusively in all its industries, and there is no smoke nuisance in Cleveland. Yet in that town in the past four years the number of manufactories has doubled.

The hotel keepers and factory proprietors responsible for the nuisance constantly plead in court that the Health Commissioner is trying to "put them out of business" by forbidding the use of inexpensive fuel. For their enlightenment we quote from a letter of Prof. W. JONES of the Metropolitan Railroad's power station at the foot of East Eighty-sixth Street, printed in THE TIMES during the anthracite strike four years ago. Prof. JONES said:

> In the power plant of this company, where I test all the coal used, there is little or no smoke produced. This result in no way depends upon any special apparatus termed a "smoke consumer." Indeed, I know of no such apparatus.
> The whole trick in burning soft coal and producing no smoke is to feed the coal gradually to the furnace, and in such a way that the smoke produced is produced only in the front part of the furnace, and is consumed in passing over the back part of the fire, which is a bed of incandescent coke, the whole fire being gradually moved from the front to the back of the furnace.
> This feeding is, of course, done in all large plants by machinery, both for soft and hard coal. This is all there is in what is commonly called a "smoke consumer."

In small furnaces an intelligent and efficient fireman can accomplish like results, no matter what grade of coal is used. In the City of Cleveland the firemen are intelligent and efficient. They have to be; there is a law, rigidly enforced, to arrest and fine not only the individual who is in charge of the offending furnace, but "the owner, agent, tenant, occupant, or any other person in charge or control of any apartment house, office building, hotel, theatre, place of public entertainment, school building, institution, or any building used as a factory or for any purpose of trade or for any purpose other than a private residence."

This enforcement of Cleveland's smoke ordinance is accomplished in a city of nearly half a million by a special engineer and three Inspectors. We think that Commissioner DARLINGTON, with his ample powers of arrest and with the co-operation of the entire Police Department, can do as well for this city. There is no adequate defense in law, morals, economics, or common sense in allowing to be sent broadcast over this populous city clouds and showers of burnable carbon, filling the air with filth, the town with grime, insulting the lungs and health of its inhabitants.

MORTGAGE TAX PROSPECTS.

Governors are seldom placed in such a position as Gov. HIGGINS is placed by the passage of the Mortgage Tax Repeal bill by the sort of vote recorded in yesterday's TIMES. It is his own party which asks the Governor to repeal the bill whose passage he favored, and whose retention he desired. We do not propose to reargue the merits, since no reply has been made in any quarter to arguments which the Legislature's vote approves. The prospect of a veto is the question now, and the Albany forecasts indicate such a result if the Governor is not allowed to perceive how lonesome his position is. He said that he signed the bill because he believed it sound in principle, and he has never recanted his belief.

That, however, was before his party deserted him upon the question. He now has to consider whether he prefers personal consistency or party unity. Individually, he might like to justify his previous signature, but as a leader he must see the objections to heading a rump of his own. We are not seeking to make partisan use of the Republican dilemma. Indeed, it might be argued that a veto would be an excellent thing for the Democrats as supplying material for the next campaign, and that the Republicans would strengthen themselves by a frank reconsideration of their position. The same may be said of the Governor for his encouragement. We hope for a signature upon the merits of the principle involved, and despite any technical criticism of details, which might be remedied hereafter more easily than the bill could be repassed if defeated now.

MILLIONAIRES' HOUSES.

A British visitor, the late G. W. STEEVENS, remarked that "if you are going to live in New York," meaning Manhattan, "it is well to take the precaution of being a millionaire." It seems that the advice is becoming increasingly timely. Yesterday's papers reported the sales of two houses adjoining each other for more than a million dollars.

Of course, to occupy a half-million-dollar house, one needs be not merely a millionaire, but a multimillionaire. A generation ago there was probably not a dwelling house in New York, with the possible exception of that of A. T. STEWART, which cost half a million dollars, or anything like it. Whoever could have afforded such a dwelling must have been one of the half dozen richest men in New York. He would have been so conspicuously rich that everybody would have known all about his fortune, and how it was acquired. Yet the names of the purchasers of these two presumable multimillionaires were not even known to the general reader before they appeared "in this connection."

In spite of the proverb which assures us that "Fools build houses, and wise men live in them," it seems that a man who is able to pay half a million for a house would prefer a "custom made" to a ready-made edifice. In fact, it is by no means uncommon for a man to pay not half a million, to be sure, but a sum with six figures for a house, and then proceed to reconstruct its interior at great additional cost. It is plain that a great and increasing number of New Yorkers are taking the precaution recommended by our British visitor.

FRANCIS P. CHURCH.

The Sun in particular, but also the press of New York in general, has suffered a loss in the death of FRANCIS P. CHURCH, an editorial writer for that paper for almost a third of a century.

Early in the civil war Mr. CHURCH, with his brother, Col. WILLIAM C. CHURCH, went to the front as a war correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES with the Army of the Potomac. Before the conclusion of the war they had established The Army and Navy Journal, which still maintains an honored and useful existence. Not long afterward the two brothers founded The Galaxy Magazine, which had a life of only a few years, but which lasted long enough to give publicity to some of the most noteworthy productions of the fiction and belles-lettres of the time. Not long after its discontinuance Mr. CHURCH became an editorial writer for The Sun.

As all his writing thereafter was done for that newspaper, his personal reputation was merged in that of the institution which he served, and he was scarcely known by name outside of the circles of his own acquaintance and of his own profession. Within those circles he was highly and justly esteemed. His were among the most important contributions to the ability, the interest, and the influence which, during his service, came to characterize the editorial page of The Sun. His specialty, one may perhaps say, was the discussion of religious, or rather of theological, topics from a secular point of view. To very many readers his treatment of these topics seemed far too sardonic and cold-blooded. But they showed a determination on the part of the writer "to examine and refine those grosser propositions which laziness and consent make current in common conversation," and they showed a determination to be nobody's dupe, not even his own. He might have taken for his own motto, "Endeavor to clear your mind of cant." And, by living up to it, he did in many cases clear also the minds of his readers. This was an important piece of public service.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Mr. Carnegie and the Kisses.

"Incensed" was probably an overlarge word for describing the state of Mr. CARNEGIE's mind after he found how far and in what forms the story of the kissing episode at Atlanta had traveled, but he had good reason to be annoyed at having been used as a means of securing notoriety, and the best of justifications for setting forth the facts exactly as they occurred and as they appeared when viewed from his standpoint. Mr. CARNEGIE, it seems, did not kiss his too enthusiastic admirers in Atlanta, but was kissed by them, as it were unawares, and no sooner had he recovered from his surprise than he made it unmistakably manifest that proceedings of that particular sort were not to his taste. One can hope that the peculiarly ill-advised comments that have been printed as coming from what may be called the other side of the incident were not accurate quotations of what were said by those supposed to be quoted. Be that as it may, Mr. CARNEGIE was quite right promptly to set the matter straight, and extremely kind, it may be said, to leave to others the drawing of the obvious inferences from his displeasure at the liberties taken with him. The affair could by no possibility have had any such serious consequences as followed the somewhat similar experience through which the then Lieut. HOBSON went after his return from Cuba, but perhaps he had in mind the vast amount of more or less unpleasant talk that followed the kissing of—or was it by?—the younger man. It gave an evil flavor to a fame that had been won by an act of real heroism, and seems to have had not a little to do with bringing to an end a career that was of remarkable promise. We were never able, ourselves, to discover the especial dreadfulness, or even the extreme ridiculousness, of what the young officer did in circumstances much like those that led to the "incensing" of Mr. CARNEGIE, but dreadful or ridiculous they must have been in some mysterious way or else they would not have had an effect so blighting. And it would hardly have been possible for Mr. HOBSON to make such a plea of avoidance as Mr. CARNEGIE has made. That would indeed have been unpardonable in the younger man, or at least it would have carried the absurdity of the case much further than it went without help. In both incidents there is a lesson which will, it is to be hoped, be heeded by—those who need to heed it most.

Another Word for the Medical Bill.

Public attention should not be distracted from the fact that the Army Medical Service bill is still pending in the House, that it is an extremely important and, as far as it goes, meritorious, bill, and that its fate depends in great measure upon whether the Speaker exerts his powers for or against its passage. The bill has twice passed the Senate, and though Senator HALE, for reasons that have never been fully explained, antagonized it with some very bad arguments, he could find only four men to whom those arguments appealed enough to make them vote with him against a measure that has the support of everybody with a right to an opinion on the medical needs of the army. It is said that a very large majority of the Representatives favor the raising of our Medical Service to a standard of efficiency remotely like that of the Japanese Army, and of course President ROOSEVELT does, but Mr. CANNON, who blocked the bill last year, is again placing himself in opposition to the House and to public opinion. Without his consent the bill cannot be taken up, as to do so requires a special rule. For him, however, to prevent the bringing in of such a rule would not be easily comprehensible, for he could gain no obvious political advantage by it, and would, on the contrary, bring his judgment into question by that part of the public which has given the subject any attention. The bill, after all, is but a step in the right direction. After its passage there will still be an enormous task ahead in the way of changing the present system, whereby highly trained experts are employed for their special knowledge and then are more or less ignored, and sometimes censured, when they offer advice on matters distinctly and exclusively within their province. It is now generally known that there is no excuse for letting more soldiers die in camp than on the battlefield, and, if it ever occurs again, the impatience and indignation which were manifested at the time of the war with Spain will assume proportions sure to make the most serious trouble for those responsible for what has come to be little less than murder. Not only is there immediate need for the increased number of army surgeons for which this bill provides, but there is an even greater need that the powers of the surgeons should be increased and that it should no longer be possible for them to suffer because of the conscientious and efficient performance of their duty. The "conservatism" that fears their interference with the conduct of military operations is entirely out of date. The Japanese proved conclusively the groundlessness of such apprehensions. Their soldiers received proper care and yet fought with sufficient vigor to satisfy all critics.

Spelling in the Schools.

With the reference by the Board of Education to one of its committees of the question whether the teaching of "reformed" spelling should or should not at once begin in the public schools one gets a realizing sense of the difficulties that lie in wait for those who would put into practice their belief that the present orthography of English words could and should be improved. If this belief is well founded, of course the public schools are where it should first be applied, and yet—and yet—well, it does seem like a dangerous experiment to tell our infant citizens to spell in a way different from the way in which elders are doing it. Even those of us who admit most of the claims of the reformers recoil timidly when we come to the actual innovation. The timidity is absurd, but it exists. The fact is, presumably, that we are all, or almost all, afraid of the often-mentioned "transition period," and we have been more impressed than we thought by the dire prophecies of confusion to follow any material change in the system of spelling. As so often happens, the trouble incidental to the remedying of recognized evils makes their endurance seem preferable to all except those of more than ordinary audacity—and consistency. Yet we will never begin unless we begin, and there is no better place for it than the public schools.

PROMOTION IN THE SCHOOLS.

Crying Need for More Flexibility in the System.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The last two articles of Dr. Shearer's in your issues of April 2 and 9 seem to me to open up wide possibilities for our New York City schools. It is not sufficient to put off with a sneer Dr. Shearer's arguments in favor of flexibility for individual promotions all along the line of school education. He makes claims for Elizabeth which can easily be disproved, if untrue. In a letter to The Brooklyn Eagle last week he invited inspection, and I hope THE TIMES will give the public the benefit of its own observations.

Along high school lines I am heartily in sympathy with Dr. Shearer's propositions and my articles in the September Educational Review and in The New York Evening Post for March 17 have brought me over a hundred letters, all but a few of which indorse the general proposition. President Eliot wrote me these words, which may be found on Page 221 of the City Superintendent's new annual report: "We have reaped now in the public school system all the benefits of system and uniformity, and it is high time to superinduce in the American school the opposite benefits of flexibility and variety." Flexibility and variety are needed in the public school system all along the line, but the inertia of conservatism is so great we shall not get them without a mighty struggle.

THE TIMES is doing a public service in bringing this matter to the front. New York needs it, Philadelphia needs it, Boston needs it. I hope other papers, like The Brooklyn Eagle, will enter the conflict. I have four letters from Philadelphia showing how much she needs this public service. In that city a pupil who fails in one-fourth of his programme goes over next time the three-fourths passed as well as the one-fourth in which he has failed. Here, according to existing rules, three-fifths passed is gone over if two-fifths of the work is unsatisfactory. The only escape is in certain schools under an added exception. I refer you to High School Circular No. 7, of May 3, 1904, the absolute repeal of which by the Board of Education I am seeking. At present the Board of Superintendents hesitates and strong reactionary forces are at work. However, I am assured the progressives, led by Associate Superintendents Stevens and Edson, will win with the assistance of Principals Gunnison, Larkins, Mickleborough, Buchanan, Rollins, Denbigh, and others.

When we come to analyze the situation it resolves itself into a question of classification, which assumes altogether too much importance in the eyes of certain conscientious Principals. With a system of counts instituted as at Columbia, under which, in an alphabetical card index for all pupils in any school, the number of points made at any time would indicate the record of the student and his place in the course, the present artificial grouping could be entirely broken up. It would pay to have a registrar in each school to keep the card records and programme of all the pupils. Then, where pupils sit may be entirely disconnected from their scholarship and used by the Principal for discipline, convenience, or anything else. Give all pupils fresh work, as each is equal to it, and keep them moving on. This is essential.

SUBWAY-ELEVATED TRANSFERS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I noticed several editorial articles recently in THE TIMES, more particularly the one in THE TIMES of to-day regarding a universal transfer system.

As an old reader and great admirer of THE TIMES, as the "best cent's worth in the world," will you let me suggest that THE TIMES ought to advocate the establishment of a transfer system between the Subway and the elevated at Broadway and Sixty-sixth Street, where these roads, as you know, cross.

Such a transfer system would be of great benefit to the people in the northern section of the city who wish to do their shopping in the great business section centring around Sixth Avenue, Thirty-fourth, Twenty-third, and Fourteenth Streets. I am sure that if THE TIMES took this matter in hand it would accomplish a great deal. F. M.

The Man with the Muck Rake.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

That was an excellent report you gave us in to-day's TIMES of Norman Hapgood's speech on "The Muck Rake Man," which was given at the Phillips Exeter alumni dinner. You culled the choicest bits of his remarks. It is undoubtedly true, as he says, that no reformer could be elected to office without the aid of the so-called "muck rake" men, either by speeches or through the journals of thought, (daily, weekly, or monthly.) Would we now have as Governor of one of our States such a man as Joseph Folk without them? They are brave men who have the courage to speak what they know. We are not living in the sixteenth century, nor are we under an Emperor, and freedom of speech is one of the things we Americans are most proud of. I say, "Long live the Muck Rake men!" Our hope of progress lies in them, and we are beginning to be suspicious of those who work against them. "There is no great difference between thinking wrong and thinking right," as Mr. Hapgood says, "if you are not going to do anything." A DAILY READER.

The Costa Rican Election.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

By to-day's mail I have received from Costa Rica the following details with regard to the secondary elections for President of the republic, held there, in accordance with our laws, on the 1st day of April. Of the 512 electors representing the different parts of the country, 427 voted for Mr. Cleto Gonzales Viques, 24 for Mr. Maximo Fernandez, 9 for Mr. Bernardo Soto, and 8 for Mr. Tobias Zuniga. Forty-four did not vote. The result of this election, which gave such a large majority to Mr. Cleto Gonzales Viques, is the best demonstration of the falsity of the rumors spread some days ago by the political enemies of President Esquivel. A Transit Solution.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Transit objections would be modified, I believe, if the Subway Sunday morning schedules and the Seventh Avenue surface schedules during all days in the week were advertised in the newspapers. PATIENCE.

JAYCOX MADE JUSTICE.

Governor Appoints County Judge to Supreme Court Bench.

ALBANY, April 12.—Gov. Higgins to-day appointed Judge Walter P. Jaycox of Suffolk County as Justice of the Supreme Court in the Second Judicial District, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Justice Wilmot M. Smith.

Judge Jaycox is the present County Judge of Suffolk County, and the Governor says that he was indorsed for the appointment by a large number of prominent Democrats and Republicans.

A curious circumstance in connection with the appointment is the fact that Justice Smith, whom he succeeds, was the means of changing the whole course of Mr. Jaycox's career and transforming him from a country storekeeper into a lawyer.

Justice Jaycox, who is 43 years of age, began his business career by assisting his brother-in-law, H. Clay Losee, with whom he then resided, to conduct Mr. Losee's hotel, at Patchogue, L. I. After a time he opened a small store on his own account. He was noted among the villagers for his studious habits, however, and one day Wilmot M. Smith, who was then a young lawyer and also a resident of Patchogue, found him reading Gibbon's "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" while waiting for customers. Mr. Smith became greatly interested in him, and finally induced him to give up the store and enter his office to study law. Five years later he was admitted to the bar.

He took an active part in the politics of Suffolk County, and in 1893 was elected District Attorney of that county, and three years later was re-elected to that office. When County Judge Benjamin H. Reeve died, in 1902, the Governor appointed Mr. Jaycox to fill the vacancy, and at the election in the following November he was elected for the full term of six years.

He is President of the Patchogue Investment Company and a Director in the Union Savings Bank.

MORE POWER FOR JEROME.

Bill to Give Him Additional Patronage Rouses Criticism.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 12.—District Attorney Jerome was attacked in the Assembly to-day when the Francis bill, creating the office of Commissioner of Records of New York County came up. It provides that the District Attorney shall appoint such an official. O'Neill of Kings demanded to know why the Republican Party should give Jerome—a Democrat—more power and should help to give him opportunity to appoint an official who would have thousands of dollars' worth of patronage to hand out.

"Why, Mr. Speaker, to Mr. Jerome, more than to anybody else, is the Republican Party indebted for the failure of Fusion last campaign, and consequently the failure to elect a Republican Mayor," said O'Neill. After some discussion the united support of the majority not being certain, the bill went over to next week.

AUTO TAX BILL PASSED.

May Bring In $70,000 Revenue—Reciprocity in Auto Licenses.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 12.—Senator L'Hommedieu's bill taxing automobiles in this State $1 for each 500 pounds' weight, was passed in the Senate to-day. L'Hommedieu said that the bill had the indorsement of the automobile associations, and that the income to be derived from the tax would be $70,000 a year. It would be used for improving roads, he said.

Another bill of interest to automobilists will be introduced by Senator L'Hommedieu, providing that New York honor the automobile licenses of any other State that honors the New York licenses. The bill is aimed to secure reciprocity with New Jersey, which taxes New York automobilists who desire to tour that State.

TO TRY SUPT. SHEARER'S PLAN

Adelphi Academy in Brooklyn Will Provide for Frequent Promotions.

As a result of the articles on educational matters by Supt. William J. Shearer in THE TIMES, Adelphi Academy of Brooklyn has decided to adopt two of the methods of restoring the child to its proper place in the scheme of instruction that have been suggested by Dr. Shearer. One method is the abolition of class instruction. The other consists in organizing the school into as many classes as there are grades of ability, and in putting each child into that class in which every subject corresponds to its special powers.

"A combination of these two ideas is the best arrangement," said E. N. Henderson, Superintendent of the elementary department, of Adelphi Academy. "Such a combination is about to be tried in Adelphi Academy. In that institution it will be possible at any time to promote to an advanced class in any subject a child who is progressing therein more rapidly than his companions.

"To bridge the gap, which will ordinarily be that of half a year's work, individual instruction will be provided. The result will, it is hoped, combine all the social and intellectual advantages of class instruction with all the flexibility and individual attention of the old-fashioned district school."

SATURDAY AND SUNDAY FUND.

Distributing Committee Apportions $81,000 Among City Hospitals.

The Distributing Committee of the Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association, composed of Morris K. Jesup, James Speyer, John Claflin, James C. Fargo, the Mayor, the Postmaster, and the President of the Chamber of Commerce, met yesterday at the City Hall and apportioned among the city associated hospitals the undesignated fund of the 1905 collections.

It was found that after deducting something over $9,000 on account of special designations and setting apart $4,000 to defray the expenses of this year's collection, there was left $81,000 out of a total of $94,000. This was distributed among the hospitals on the basis of the free work done by each during the year, qualified by the rule that no one institution shall receive more than 10 per cent. of the distribution nor any less than $250.

The apportionment of the fund was as follows:

Hospitals.	Allotted.	Hospitals.	Allotted.
Montefiore Home and Hospital	$8,100	House of Rest	1,151
Mt. Sinai Hosp.	8,100	Homeopathic	1,047
St. Luke's	4,945	Ophthalmic	949
German	4,655	J. Hood Wright	955
Roosevelt	3,919	Man. Eye & Ear	910
Post Graduate	3,804	Infirmary for Women & Children	813
Ruptured & Crippled	3,783	Skin and Cancer	797
Lebanon	3,404	Polyclinic	791
Nursery & Childs.	3,373	Eye and Ear Infirmary	649
St. Mary's	3,268	Sydenham	587

Indiana Republican Nominations.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 12.—The Republican State Convention to-day nominated the following: For Secretary of State—Fred Sims of Frankfort; for Attorney General—James Bingham of Muncie; for State Statistician—James S. Stubbs of Indianapolis; for Judge of the Supreme Court, First District—James H. Jordan of Martinsville. John C. Billheimer of Washington was nominated for Auditor of State.

ROOSEVELT ON RESULT OF MOROCCO CONFERENCE

Congratulates Germany and Kaiser in Speech to Germans.

OUTCOME MAKES FOR PEACE

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Forty-five veterans who have served with distinction in the German Army, and most of whom are American citizens, were received by President Roosevelt this afternoon. The German Ambassador, Baron Sternburg, presented the visitors, who came from various parts of the United States, and many of whom are members of the Kriegerbund, (military societies.)

"I welcome you here, my fellow-Americans; for among the many strains that go to make up our composite race stock in this country no strain has given us better Americans than those who are of German birth or blood. It is our peculiar pride as a nation that in this Republic we have immeasureably realised the idea under which good citizens know no discriminations as between creed and creed, birthplace and birthplace, provided only that whatever the man's parentage may have been, whatever the way in which he worship his Creator, he strives in good faith to do his duty by himself and by his fellow-men, and to show his unflinching loyalty to our common country.

"In addition to thus greeting you, my fellow-Americans of German birth, I wish also to greet the German citizens present, the members of the German Army, belonging to the reserve of that army, and to welcome them here, and especially, Mr. Ambassador, as they are brought here by you, yourself an old soldier, who have endeared yourself to the American people by your hearty friendship for this country.

"The reverence a man preserves for his native land, so far from standing in the way of his loving and doing his full duty by the land of his adoption, should help him toward this love and the performance of this duty. If a man is a good son he is apt to make a good husband; and the quality that makes a man reverence the country of his birth is apt to be the quality that makes him a good citizen in the country of his adoption.

"The ties that unite Germany and the United States are many and close, and it must be a prime object of our statesmanship to knit the two nations ever closer together. In no country is there a warmer admiration for Germany and for Germany's exalted ruler, Emperor William, than here in America.

"It is not out of place in closing for me to say a word of congratulation both to the German people and the German Emperor upon the work that has been accomplished in the Algeciras Convention which has just closed, a conference held chiefly because of the initiative of Germany. It was not a conference in which we Americans as a Nation had much concern, save that it is always our concern to see justice obtain everywhere, and so far as we properly can, to work for the cause of international peace and good-will.

"In its outcome this conference has added to the likelihood of the betterment of conditions in Morocco itself, has secured, equitable dealing as among the foreign powers who have commercial relations with Morocco, and has diminished the chance of friction between these powers.

"In particular it may not be out of place for me to say that I hope and believe that the conference has resulted and will result in rendering continually more friendly the relations between the mighty Empire of Germany and the mighty Republic of France; for it is my hope and wish, as it must be the hope and wish of every sincere well-wisher of humankind, that these friendly relations may not only continue unbroken, but may ever grow in strength."

TRUST COMPANY BILL PASSED.

Senate Eliminated City Bond Investment Provision.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 12.—The bill to provide that trust companies must keep a legal reserve of 15 per cent. in first-class cities and 10 per cent. in second-class cities passed the Senate to-day, but not in the form in which it came from the Assembly, and it will now have to go back to that body for concurrent action.

In the Assembly Mr. Wainwright, the proponent of the bill, made a strenuous opposition to the bill introduced in the Senate by Mr. Stevens, which provided that part of the legal reserve could be invested in bonds of first and second class cities, and the bill passed the Assembly with this restriction inserted. In the Senate this was eliminated and the bill was made to conform with the Stevens bill, which allowed such investments.

Mr. Wainwright said to-day that while he still adhered to his original proposition he would not stand in the way of the legislation if it was shown that the bill could go to the Governor only in the form prescribed by Mr. Stevens.

THE PUBLISHERS' DINNER.

Their Annual Feast Will Be Held in Atlantic City on May 4.

The annual dinner of the Periodical Publishers' Association of America will be held on Friday evening, May 4, at the Marlborough-Blenheim, Atlantic City. Guests of the association will be conveyed to Atlantic City by special train from New York and Philadelphia on the afternoon of May 4, returning the next afternoon. The Committee of Arrrangements consists of:

Cyrus K. Curtis, The Saturday Evening Post, Chairman; John S. Phillips, McClure's Magazine; Condé Nast, Collier's Weekly; Frederic L. Colver, The American Magazine; William B. Howland, The Outlook; Arthur W. Little, Pearson's Magazine; Arthur C. Vance, The Woman's Home Companion; Edward Bok, The Ladies' Home Journal; Edward E. Higgins, Success Magazine, Secretary.

The Pilgrims' Dinner in London.

The Pilgrims of London will give a dinner in honor of Bishop Potter, President of the Pilgrims of the United States, at the Savoy Hotel, London, on Tuesday evening, May 29. The Archbishop of Canterbury will offer the toast to the guest of honor. Field Marshal Earl Roberts, President, will preside.

ORIGIN OF THE GRABBER.

In days unsung, when Time was young
  And mundane things were still chaotic,
There lived, we're told, a race so bold
  Its tendencies were termed despotic.

And, strange to say, in that far day,
  Ere human kind had evoluted,
A mannish face adorned this race,
  Which made its progress undisputed.

Almost from birth it owned the earth
  By means which hardly need a mention;
Hands, feet, and tail could hardly fail,
  For all were organs of prehension.

Now, in the craze of later days,
  When frenzied financiers are grabbing,
We're forced to see the pedigree
  Of all these men who do the nabbing.

And oft we think the Missing Link
  No more in deep oblivion slumbers;
Where finance reigns there it obtains
  In terribly alarming numbers.

HOW THEY MANICURED DICK, SIBERIAN TIGER

Shameful Indignity Puts Park Animal House in a Roar.

IT WAS AN INGROWING NAIL

Dick—according to Bill Snyder the only Siberian tiger in captivity in America—walked about his double cage in Central Park yesterday with a green glare in his eyes. Dick was disgusted. It was bad enough to have been captured and made the "only" captive of his kind in America, but to have to submit to ultra-civilization in the form of manicuring ruffled the big tiger.

Dick kept taking long steps from the house section of his cage to the outside sun section, like a creature upon whom has suddenly come a great shame. To relieve himself he roared now and then. The green of his eyes scared the children, and when he'd give a cavernous yawn the blood dripped from the wounds in his jaws where he had futilely attacked the sticks of the keepers who had made him suffer the indignity of being manicured.

Dick's rage rose to its height late in the afternoon when a photographer appeared to take his picture. His keepers were in league with the man with the black box, he could plainly see, for they shut him into the small sunning section of his cage. Then the photographer began to move his little tripod and tinker with it while he looked through a glass at Dick.

Feeling that the last straw of indignity had been added, Dick went mad. He slammed himself against the side of his cage; he roared in a wild frenzy of useless anger; he tried to knock the roof off his cage; and finally he flung himself down on the floor and sat staring out at the photographer with great green eyes.

Maybe Dick was the madder because he felt that it wasn't exactly his fault that he had to be shamed by a manicure after the manner of weakling animals who have to wear clothes to keep them warm and eat meat out of which the blood has been fried in grease. One nail on his right forepaw had grown into the flesh because the tree erected for scratching and nail-sharpening purposes in his cage was not of a circumference to accommodate all his nails at once. Had he been in his rightful home he could have found trees of different circumferences on which to sharpen his weapons.

But when Dick has forgotten or become used to the shameful memory of the manicuring he will be glad of what Director Smith ordered. He had been limping about his cage for three weeks, and his paw was getting sorer every day. So an order went down to Chief Keeper Bill Snyder to manicure Dick early yesterday morning before the park filled up. About 8:30 Bill went to Dick's cage, accompanied by Assistants Cunningham, Holmes, Corcoran, Coyle, and Hurton.

Dick suspected that some indignity was contemplated when Bill began to creep around over the top of his cage with a lasso in his hand. He knew that some dark deed was contemplated when Bill slyly opened the little door. He knew Bill. What did he mean by slipping around in this way? The other keepers tried to keep his eyes busy by thrusting in a big stick. Dick smashed that with one slap of his paw, and went on growling and watching Bill.

Bill got the lasso around Dick's neck once, and then it slipped off. Dick, who had never been lassoed before, lost his temper entirely. He raced around the cage roaring and slapping the side of the wall. The leopard next door screamed with him, and the ten lions down the way took up the roar. Sallie and Jerry, the two hyenas just across the aisle, added their fiendish screaming, and Kitty and Sadie, the two black leopards next to the hyenas, joined the hideous medley of protests with two long-drawn shrieks like exaggerated caterwaulings of two hoarse tomcats on the back fence.

The doors of the house were closed, so that the noise was kept in. It grew so terrific that even Mr. and Mrs. Peter Murphy, the parent hippopotami, opened one eye apiece, although it must be said that Peter, their young son, never even shook his eyelid.

The howling went on for half an hour, and folks in Fifth Avenue thought that all the man-eating animals had surely broken loose and were feasting on the corpses of stall-fed keepers. Three or four persons timidly knocked at the door to ask if all was well inside. The answers they got from the tired and worried keepers convinced them that the keepers were still whole, but a trifle peevish.

But if it had been noisy when they were trying to lasso Dick it was pandemonium when they finally caught him, pinned one leg under him and dragged him bodily forward so that his injured paw stuck out through the bars. Dick will be hoarse for a week. Bill Snyder drew the ingrowing nail out of the flesh with pincers, clipped off the long, curved end, and then, as a climax to the insult, threw a lot of diluted carbolic acid on the paw.

When it was all over Dick shot to one corner of the cage and licked the stuff off his paw. Gradually the howls and moans and shrieks grew less and less, like the falling pulse of a dying man. A gloom settled over the lion house. Civilization had been thrust upon one of the lordliest in the house. Dick thinks that soon he will be asked to eat boiled turnips out of crockery. Manicured!

ENGAGEMENTS ANNOUNCED.

ERVING—DU VIVIER.

The engagement is announced of Miss Alice Frith Du Vivier, one of the daughters of Mrs. Charles A. Du Vivier, (Miss Alice V. Frith,) to Joseph Erving, son of Bernard Erving and grandson of the late Robert Erving of the old Philadelphia family of that name.

Miss Du Vivier is related to the La Montagnes, Buisses, Montants, and other old families. She is a great-granddaughter of Mme. Brugière. One of her brothers, Joseph A. Du Vivier, married Miss Keyes. Another, Edward Frith Du Vivier, married Miss Marie Delmonico.

SHEARER—HARTLEY.

TOWER—BOYD.

William A. Boyd of 24 East Seventy-eighth Street announces the engagement of his daughter, Miss Addie Storms Boyd, to George Homer Tower, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin J. M. Tower of Boston.

Benefit for Henry Clay Barnabee.

Arrangements are being completed for a benefit to Henry Clay Barnabee and Mrs. Marie Stone MacDonald, widow of William H. MacDonald, of the once famous Bostonians. "Robin Hood" has been selected as the bill with a cast that will include several of the original singers. The committee in charge is as follows: Daniel Frohman, A. E. Erlanger, Reginald De Koven, Marcus Mayer, Augustus Pitou, Frank L. Perley, Joseph Weber, and Antonio Pastor.

The Children's Plea

By Jacob A. Riis

Readers of The Outlook have not forgotten Sea Breeze with its hospital for crippled children, and the plea of Miss Laura Winnington, when she lay dying in St. Luke's Hospital, for a bigger institution that should repeat on a many times larger scale the success achieved there with that terrible scourge of ill nourished childhood, bone tuberculosis. And they will recall the results that followed quickly: the visit of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt to Coney Island, and the raising of a large sum of money over night, as it seemed, to realize Miss Winnington's dream. She closed her eyes upon this world with the knowledge that her wish was granted. Of the four or five thousand little cripples in New York's tenements with this ailment—hopeless unless the chance is given them of a life in the open on the seashore Summer and Winter until the healing forces of nature have done their work—only one in a hundred coud find shelter at Sea Breeze. The new hospital was planned for at least ten times that number. The plans called for a building to cost a quarter of a million of dollars. John D. Rockefeller offered half that sum if the other half were raised before Spring came again. The thing was to find a site.

It proved not so easy to get as had been supposed. On Coney Island there was no room. For a while it seemed as if there were none anywhere; as if the wave of pity for the forlorn little sufferers had swept on and out of sight, leaving cold selfishness and the greed of "property interests" in its place. Everywhere the door was slammed in the faces of the children's friends. No one wanted the cripples for neighbors. The seashore is for pleasuring, we heard; they would contaminate, ruin it. They did not know. Could they have seen them and what it all meant, they would never have let them pass. Verily, I think they would have given them the land for the asking. I know right well they would.

But they did not know. It became necessary to take land by condemnation, and it was resolved to kill two birds with one stone by hitching the plan to two prime needs of the city, viz., a great seashore playground for the people and a convalescent home for the sick and the disabled poor who are daily crowded out of New York's hospitals by the tremendous pressure upon them, although wholly unfit to take up the battle of life again. * * * The overcrowding of our hospitals has long cried aloud for a convalescent's home as an act of plain humanity. These things speak for themselves. I had sat down to speak for the little ones here, when they came to plead their own cause, all unconscious of their mission.

The children at Sea Breeze had heard that I, too, had been laid away in a hospital for a while to tame a rebellious heart if I might, and nothing would do but they must write to tell me how sorry they were. So to-day the mail brought me a batch of their letters. I wonder if that carrier knew how much of sunshine and cheer his bag held. Here is five-year-old Max Gross, child of poverty and want, all the days of a long and weary year strapped to a frame that holds his little body rigid because his back is not like other children's, yet ever cheerful, ever hopeful, calling across the room to the doctor, "I am all better!" Poor little chap! Once, and only once, his tears fell; and when his nurse went to him in alarm, he sobbed out upon her sleeve that some one had said on the porch as he was carried by: "Max will not get better." "And I don't want to get dead and be an angel," was the cry that wrung the nurse's heart; "I want to get off my board and play first." Hear his message to me:

Dear Mr. Riis:

I am very sorry you are sick. Are you on a board like me? I got a yellow pencil. I am writing this letter with the pencil. I am writing all myself, only some one is holding the pencil, too. Are you up?

A big dog bit Rags's eye. I think Rags belongs to Madge. Mary Maguire is dressed up like Miss Roosevelt. She has on a long veil. It is made of tissue paper. Maggie Brennan is dressed up, too. She is the bridesmaid. Come down again and bring Mr. Roosevelt. I would like to see you again. Goodbye, with love from your friend,

MAX GROSS.

Max came from a slum tenement. His parents are poor Jews. But the some one who held the pencil with him tells me that he hesitated over "Miss" Roosevelt. He had meant to say Alice, but did not think it was proper, and decided that it was not. The visit of the President to Sea Breeze is the proud tradition of the children that helps them over many a hard hour. They rehearse it again and again, usually with Max as spokesman. He forgets then the pain in his back, forgets the play that is not for him—never in this life—and remembers only the kind face that hovered over him and looked out of brimming eyes at his wasted frame. Then all Max's native optimism comes to his rescue with a rush, and he winds up his story: "I think the President will come back; for Dr. Wallace told him my name, and he said, 'Max, I hope you will get better.' He had nice shining eye-glasses and a big laugh."

Max has one priceless possession—an umbrella Santa Claus brought him by special request "lest it should quick come on to rain when he was going across the porch with Louis;" and regularly every day, rain or shine, he goes down stairs in Louis's arms, hugging the precious thing to his board. The big children may believe that Santa Claus "came out of the cellar at Sea Breeze" when they had the Christmas tree. Max knows better. He has the evidence always in sight.

Madeline Garland is Max's bosom friend. She is seven, and her Sea Breeze name is Bumps, supposedly from the big freckles that cover her jolly little face and snub nose. Like Max, she lies all her days strapped to the board that looks so cruel and is so kind, and views the world about her "brimming over with joy," her nurse says. Sea Breeze is all the home she has ever known. Her mother is a widow and lives out. Here is her letter:

Dear Mr. Riis:

Annie and Pasco and I and all the children are sorry you are sick. Do you have a bad outdoors like me? Is there a fire alarm in your hospital? We have fire drill here. Henrietta carried me out when the bell rang. Have you got some one like Henrietta to carry you out?

I am writing this letter myself, just like Max. Dear Mr. Riis, I hope you get better. Give my love to President Roosevelt. With love from your friend,

MADELINE GARLAND.

And David Goldscher, the boy with the pale, pathetic face that haunts me ever since I saw him standing propped up by his crutch, singing grace with the children at supper, the dreamy boy from the dark tenement in dark Allen Street, where the elevated runs overhead, writes: "Now it is getting Spring. I've seen lots of birds flying, and the ocean looks very still. Don't you think the sea would do you good, with the fresh air? Well I hope you can come to see us soon and be all better."

Children of the poor! Yes, of the poorest. But shall we let such as these perish unhelped? Here in the hospital where I write are twenty such in the surgical ward, for whom only the seashore hospital holds out the promise of life. Every hospital has the same story to tell; every children's institution is filled with them. Thousands slowly tortured to death in the tenements! Think of it, you fathers and mothers with healthy, happy children; think of the little sober-faced patient at Sea Breeze that said of her friend who was seven and never would walk: "She used to play when she was young." Think of Pasco, aged 13, in the grave conference on the beach over the things they would do and be when they grew big: "I want to be a boy first." The Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor says it needs forty-nine thousand dollars yet for the building of the hospital. If I know my city right, it will not need to ask another day.

Sometimes it is to me as though in the brave patience of these stricken ones I caught a glimpse of the real things of life and their meaning to us who, with sound bodies, are strong and able to do the world's work. Only last week there came a letter from a crippled girl way out West whose mother I know, a hard-working widow, growing old with this sorrow at her heart that her only child can never be strong and well. "I used to lie awake the long nights after the doctor had told me," writes the girl, "grieving because I could never do anything. But that was years ago. I am earning my living now teaching school, and the crutch doesn't hinder me much. I shall be able to care for mother when she is tired. I even think I shall be able to save enough to take her back once more to the old home across the sea that she so longs for. And the thought makes me happy." Never do anything! What is there in all the world that money can buy that compares with the pleasure of doing for these, who do so much for us, all that human skill, that long-withheld chance, can do to ease their pain?

By permission The Outlook, March 31, 1906.

Robert Shaw Minturn, Treasurer, 105 East 22nd St., New York City, will gladly send information and acknowledge gifts. $8 will keep a child one week; $150 until Oct. 1st; $350 will support Sea Breeze one week, $1,500 one month. Will you help?

BECAME A BURGLAR TO GET INTO JAIL

IMPULSIVE YOUNG MAN'S WAIL

Burgled Under Policeman's Nose—Stood, Jimmy in Hand, at Headquarters—At Last They Got Him.

When they did finally arrest Gustav Gerber on Wednesday afternoon at Police Headquarters on a self-made charge of burglary, the young man gave a long sigh of relief, laid his jimmy on the floor, and sank into a chair with tears of joy streaming down his cheeks, like a man who in a long and dreary desert comes upon an oasis of trees and flowers and flowing water.

"Thank heaven," he wept, "they pinched me at last. But it was hard to bring about. My! it was hard."

And he gave himself up to the overmastering joy of having at last induced the police to take notice of his jimmy and accept his self-spoken accusation.

"He came with ample proof," said Detective Drefenthaler when he arraigned Gerber before Magistrate Mayo yesterday morning in Yorkville Court. Drefenthaler was thinking of the jimmy. He wanted the prisoner sent back to Police Headquarters for the night, but to that Gerber would not listen, evidently fearing that if he went there he might be put out in the street. His face shone with joy when Magistrate Mayo remanded him to the Tombs in $2,500 bail. This is the story he told:

"I am subject to uncontrollable impulses. Sometimes they are good; sometimes they are bad. But whatever the impulse may be, I have to yield to it. So I wanted to be put away somewhere, in some reformatory for two or three years where I could be restrained. I am not crazy.

"I thought the best way to be put away was to commit a crime. I thought that would be a sure thing. So Monday noon I went looking for a house that I could burglarize. I found one at last at 310-312 East Thirty-second, with a cop near it. I went up on the second floor, jimmied a door and stole a woman's gold watch, a silver watch, a gold ring, and a bracelet. I waited around the room for an hour in the hope that somebody would raise a scream. For I was afraid that if I just went out without any scream behind me the cop wouldn't arrest me.

"Nobody came. I thought a while, and then I rushed out of the house with all the noise I could make, holding the jewelry in one hand and the jimmy in the other. I hung around the house for a while with the jimmy and the jewelry in my hands. I was sorter afraid to throw myself on the cop and tell him I was a burglar, for I thought he might drive me away with a club.

"He wouldn't notice me. Despairing of anybody arresting me, I went to Police Headquarters. I stood there from 2 o'clock until 5 o'clock. I flourished my jimmy. Nobody did anything."

Gustav Gerber came near breaking down at this point.

"In desperation," he went on, after a while, "I went into the building when night was coming on. I entered a long room, and I saw a man with a lame leg showing some people picture cases. That was Bingham, I know. I hung around in the room till finally I got up courage to go to the desk and tell the man I was a burglar. He finally agreed to arrest me. But it was awful hard."

Gerber said he had never committed any crime before. He admitted that he had assumed his present name to wage his almost futile campaign to get arrested. He had had family troubles, he said, but he wouldn't talk about his family. He is a clean-shaven young man, and says he is a machinist by trade, but has gone through a fortune left him by an uncle. When Magistrate Mayo ordered him taken to the Tombs yesterday a seraphic smile spread over his face.

"Merciful heaven," he said to a reporter, "this good fortune is too much. A last the police pinched me. Ah!"

WARREN P. EDGARTON DEAD.

A Soldier and Friend of Famous Men of War Days.

VINELAND, N. J., April 12.—Warren P. Edgarton, soldier, school teacher, lecturer, ex-Assistant Superintendent of the United States Mail Service and Special Agent for twenty-seven years, died last night. Since his resignation, in March, 1899, he lived at Newfield, near this place. Several months ago a cancerous affection showed itself in his mouth. Dr. R. E. Buck installed an X-ray apparatus in the Edgarton household and treated the patient both with X-rays and radium.

Gen. Edgarton was born in Harvard, Mass., in 1836. He was graduated from the New England Normal School at Lancaster, and went to teaching and lecturing. He was admitted to the bar in Cleveland, Ohio, in 1859, and soon afterward became special lecturer in President Garfield's school at Hiram, Ohio. In 1861 he enlisted in Col. James Barrett's battery of artillery, and served in every engagement of McClellan's campaign in Western Virginia.

In 1863 he was Chief of Artillery at the Port of Nashville, and was afterward on Gen. Morgan's and Gen. Sheridan's staff. He commanded the guns at Fort Negly, Chattanooga, and at the battle of Missionary Ridge. In 1864 he was made Major of artillery. He spent five months in Libby Prison, and retired from the army with the rank of Brevet Brigadier General.

In 1872 Postmaster General Cresswell appointed him Assistant Superintendent of the United States Mail Service and Special Agent of the Post Office Department. He was a friend of Rosecrans, Sheridan, Sherman, Grant, and Garfield.

A DAY'S WEDDINGS.

CONKLIN—SCHMIDLAPP.

Word was received in Brooklyn yesterday of the marriage in Rome, Italy, on Wednesday of W. H. Peer Conklin of Brooklyn and Miss Iola Schmidlapp, daughter of the late Charles Schmidlapp, a Cincinnati brewer. The marriage took place in the Presbyterian Church in Rome. Several months ago Mr. Conklin went to Italy, where Miss Schmidlapp was studying music, and their engagement was soon announced. The young couple will take a trip through Europe, returning to this country about June 1. They will probably make their home in Cincinnati.

Mr. Schmidlapp on his death left an estate said to be worth $10,000,000 to his wife, upon the expiration of whose life tenancy it is to go to the two children. Mr. Conklin is connected with a surety company in Brooklyn. His father, George H. Conklin, has for many years been in business as a merchant tailor in Bedford Avenue.

Fulda's "The Twin Sister" Played.

Ludwig Fulda's comedy, "Die Zwillingsschwester," (The Twin Sister,) with the star "guest," Marie Reisenhofer, in the principal part, was played at the Irving Place Theatre last evening. The performance was liberally attended.

ENTERTAINED BY MR. REID.

LONDON, April 12.—Ambassador Whitelaw Reid and Mrs. Reid are entertaining a large house party at Wrest Park for Easter. The guests include Lloyd C. Griscom, Ambassador to Brazil, and Mrs. Griscom; Mrs. Bronson, Frank Ernest Bille, the Danish Minister; the Hon. William A. F. Erskine of the Foreign Office, the Hon. Neil Primrose, second son of Lord Rosebery; Lord Esme Gordon Lennox, the Secretaries of the American Embassy, and a number of girl friends of Miss Reid.

There has been a general exodus from London for the Easter holidays, and business here will practically be at a standstill until April 17. The rush of visitors to the Continent is abnormal, and hundreds are taking advantage of the holidays to go as far as Naples to see the damage caused by the eruption of Mount Vesuvius. The courts and all the public offices are closed, the Cabinet Ministers and Members of Parliament are scattered, and for the best part of a week the streets of this city will present the appearance of a prolonged Sabbath.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

To-day being Good Friday, even the giddiest among society's devotees are abstaining from all entertaining. The coming week, however, with its innumerable weddings, bridesmaids' luncheons, bachelor dinners, balls, and dances—both private and public—will make ample amends for the dullness of Lent, and especially of Holy Week. A number of engagements announced in this column to-day are of decided interest.

An entertainment will be held on Thursday afternoon, April 26, in the Berkeley Lyceum, for the benefit of the Pascal Institute, at 576 Lexington Avenue. The proceeds will be applied to the fund for Summer classes at the Institute, which teaches young women millinery, dressmaking, and kindred work.

⁂

The wedding of Miss Mary G. Curtis of this city, a niece of Mr. and Mrs. Seth Low, to Dr. David Gordon Allen of Savannah, Ga., will take place on Wednesday next at the Shepard Memorial Church, in Boston.

⁂

Mr. and Mrs. Joel Nott Allen (Miss Fanny Walton Ogden) will continue their informal "at homes" in Mr. Allen's studio, 114 East Twenty-third Street, on Saturdays during April, from 3 until 6 o'clock.

⁂

Mr. and Mrs. George L. Ronalds will soon open their cottage at Tuxedo Park.

⁂

Mr. and Mrs. W. Scott Cameron, who recently returned from abroad, are still the guests of Mrs. A. Scott Cameron at 31 East Thirty-eighth Street. They will not open their cottage at Hempstead until May 15.

⁂

Miss Harriet Sprague, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Elliot Sprague, whose engagement to Walter Steward Phillips of New Brighton was announced last Fall, has just returned from a two months' visit to Boston and Providence. Miss Sprague's marriage will take place early in June.

⁂

Mrs. Henry W. Poor of Gramercy Park is arranging an entertainment in which Paul Orlenoff and Mme. Nasimoff, the Russian actors, will give recitations. Miss Margaret Chanler recently gave her friends such an entertainment. These artists have had such unfortunate experiences here that they are glad to accept such engagements.

⁂

A bazaar, the proceeds to go to the benefit of aged and indigent Frenchwomen, will be held in the East Room of the Waldorf-Astoria on Thursday next from 2 until 10 o'clock, under the patronage of Mrs. Charles Du Vivier, Mrs. Paul Fuller, Miss Iselin, Mrs. Charles Montant, Mrs. James B. Townsend, Miss Du Vivier, Miss Marié, Miss Bouvier, Miss Delmonico, Miss La Montagne, Mrs. Alexander H. Tiers, and others. Tickets are only 50 cents. The Treasurer is Miss Frances E. Fort, 231 West Forty-fifth Street.

⁂

Mrs. John E. Cowdin, Mrs. Charles S. Fairchild, Miss Katharine Dunham, Mrs. Richard Watson Gilder, and Amos Pinchot are members of a committee which has arranged for four performances by Paul Orlenoff and his Russian players at the Berkeley Lyceum to-day, to-morrow, and on Thursday and Friday of next week. M. Orlenoff and Mme. Nasimoff are to appear in "The Master Builder" and "Ghosts" this week. Maxim Gorky and his wife, Mme. Gorky, who was known on the Russian stage as Mme. Andreeva, are old friends of M. Orlenoff and Mme. Nasimoff, who is his wife. The novelist and his wife are to attend these performances, a box having been offered them by the committee.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The Western storm centre has reached Kansas, the principal depression extending in trough shape from Texas northward into North Dakota. The weather has cleared west of the Rocky Mountains, except on the north coast, while to the eastward the precipitation area has extended into the Mississippi Valley.

In the Ohio Valley, the lake region, and the Atlantic States the weather has been generally clear. There has been a decided fall in temperature in the Rocky Mountain region, and from Oklahoma and Northern Texas northward through North Dakota, with freezing temperature in the latter State.

From the Mississippi Valley eastward temperatures are quite high for the season, except in the Atlantic States and lower lake region.

There will be rain Friday in the Central Valleys and the greater portion of the lake region, followed by fair weather Saturday from the Mississippi Valley westward. There will be rain Saturday in the Atlantic States generally.

It will be colder Friday in the Mississippi and Missouri Valleys, and colder Saturday in the Ohio Valley and the interior of the Middle and South Atlantic States. It will be warmer Saturday in the West.

Winds along the New England coast will be light and variable, becoming east and fresh by Saturday; Middle Atlantic Coast, north to east, becoming fresh; South Atlantic Coast, light to fresh east to southeast; East Gulf Coast, fresh south, becoming northwest by Saturday; West Gulf Coast, fresh to brisk south, shifting to northwest; Lake Michigan, brisk to high east, becoming northwest by Saturday.

Steamers departing Friday for European ports will have light to fresh north to northeast winds with fair weather to the Grand Banks.

FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND SATURDAY.

Eastern New York, New Jersey, New England, Eastern Pennsylvania, and Delaware—Fair Friday. Saturday, rain; winds becoming east and increasing Saturday.

Western New York—Increasing cloudiness Friday. Saturday, rain.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

3 A. M.	47	46	4 P. M.	62	58
6 A. M.	48	45	6 P. M.	55	56
9 A. M.	50	48	9 P. M.	49	53
12 M.	56	50	12 P. M.	48	52

This thermometer is 108 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 52; for the corresponding date last year it was 52; average on the corresponding date for the last twenty-five years, 44.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 46; at 8 P. M. it was 54. Maximum temperature, 59 degrees at 5:15 P. M.; minimum, 45 degrees at 6 A. M. Humidity, 75 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 56 per cent. at 8 P. M.

WILL GIVE A CHARITY PARTY.

Women Plan an Unusual Entertainment for a Juvenile Club.

An immigration party for the benefit of the West Side Juvenile Club has been arranged by Miss Anna Constable, Miss Frances Hoppin, Mrs. Francis L. Pruyn, Mrs. William Beekman, Mrs. Richard Meade, and Miss Annette Clark, to be held on April 24 in the Music Chamber of Carnegie Hall.

These society women will be assisted by Harold Imbrie, F. S. Hoppin, Jr., Edward R. Duer, Arthur Nash, Langdon Geer, and Guy Van Amringe. The entertainment will be of the same kind as the old Mi-Careme parties that Miss Constable and her brother, Howard Constable, used to give every year at Mr. Constable's studios in West Sixteenth Street.

There are to be fancy dances, juggling, and other performances by entertainers of different nationalities. On the list of patronesses are the names of Mrs. Maitland Armstrong, Mrs. Dallas Bache Pratt, Mrs. Douglas Robinson, Mrs. Herbert Parsons, Miss Morgan, and others. Tickets of admission are $3 each, and include supper. They may be obtained from Miss Constable of 216 East Eighteenth Street.

CIRCUS TO CLOSE TO-MORROW

To Resume Monday—Rumor That McCadden May Manage It.

After the close of the circus performance to-night the doors of Madison Square Garden will be closed until Monday. To-morrow James A. Bailey, "the king of circus men," who died on Wednesday of erysipelas, will be buried at Woodlawn.

The funeral will be in keeping with the unostentatious character of the man, who, in the fifty years he has been entertaining others, withheld himself from publicity. The ceremonies will be attended by only a few intimate friends and relatives of the dead man.

The services will be held to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at Mr. Bailey's home, the Knolls, Corcoran Manor, Mount Vernon. They will be read by the Rev. H. H. Beatty of the Chester Hill Methodist Episcopal Church, Mount Vernon.

A special car attached to the 1:05 o'clock train from the Grand Central station will take members of the circus staff and some of the older performers to Mount Vernon to-morrow. Floral tributes from the different departments of the show have been forwarded to The Knolls. At the Mount Vernon house many telegrams and cablegrams of condolence have been received by Mrs. Bailey from all parts of the world.

It was reported in Mount Vernon last night that J. T. McCaddon, Mrs. Bailey's brother, will ultimately manage the circus. This could not be confirmed.

For the present the management of the show will devolve upon George O. Starr, associate director, who is now on his way to this country. He sailed from Europe on Tuesday and was notified of the death of Mr. Bailey by wireless telegraph when he had been two days at sea.

Tickets for the circus performances which were to have been held to-morrow may be exchanged for tickets for other performances, or the money for them will be refunded upon application at the box office. The performances will be renewed on Monday. Mr. Hamilton wishes the public to know that Mr. Bailey's death will in no way interfere with the performance for orphans and cripples on Tuesday. This annual event was carefully observed by the circus king, who loved children and animals. Speaking of the future of the circus, Hamilton said yesterday:

"Mrs. Bailey will, of course, be the largest owner of the show, but the fact that before his death Mr. Bailey divided 87,000 shares of circus stock among his employes should make it clear to all that the circus is in no danger of dissolving. It will, in fact, be perpetuated. It is now a big co-operative institution, partly controlled by its own employes."

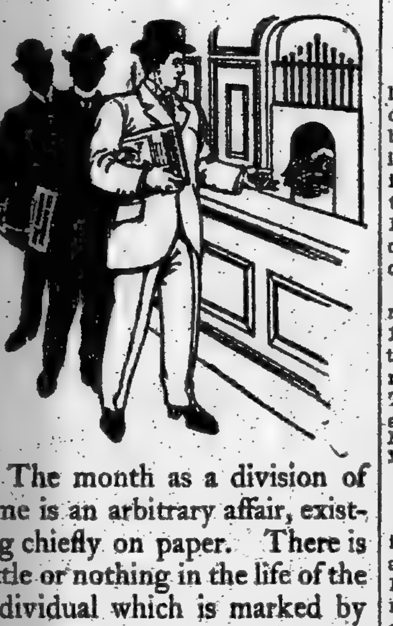
FUNERAL OF DEAN SHALER.

Entire Student Body and Faculty Attend—Impressive Services.

CAMBRIDGE, April 12.—Practically the entire student body and the Faculty of Harvard attended the funeral of Prof. Nathaniel S. Shaler, Dean of the Lawrence Scientific School, this afternoon. The city, too, manifested its sorrow, as a large number of the stores near the university were closed. Flags everywhere were at half staff.

The body of Dean Shaler was borne from his home, just beyond the college campus, to Appleton Chapel by eight undergraduates. They moved through a long double line of students, who stood with uncovered heads. The body bearers were followed by fifteen representatives of each of the classes, as an honorary guard, and these by the members of Dean Shaler's family and by immediate friends. At the door of the chapel the procession was joined by the honorary pall bearers, who included President Charles W. Eliot, Dr. H. P. Walcott, representing the corporation of the university; Prof. Charles Eliot Norton, and Profs. George H. Palmer, Josiah Royce, D. G. Lyon, C. H. Toy, and J. Love.

Bishop William Lawrence conducted the simple service of the Episcopal Church. No eulogy was spoken. Music was sung by the regular college choir of boys. The body was then taken to Mount Auburn Cemetery for interment.



The month as a division of time is an arbitrary affair, existing chiefly on paper. There is little or nothing in the life of the individual which is marked by it or corresponds with it. The week, on the other hand, is a real, conscious unit of time, sharply marked in the human mind and conduct by Sunday, by "pay-day," by "bargain-day," by innumerable human institutions which occur once a week.

There is a distinct, perceptible advantage to the advertiser in attracting the attention of the buyer during each of these week-units. The recurrence each week of the idea which you wish to impress on the reader, becomes in the course of time a habit with him, and fixes that idea with a permanence which, if some week-units were skipped, would be less surely achieved.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

William Bell Edgar.

William Bell Edgar of Yonkers, formerly of the firm of Acker, Merrall & Condit, died yesterday at his residence, Thornbrae, 204 Hawthorne Avenue, after an illness of five weeks. Mr. Edgar was born in Dumfriesshire, Scotland, and came to the United States about sixty years ago. In 1857 his grocery business was bought out by Acker, Merrall & Condit and he became a partner in that firm.

He was a member of the First Presbyterian Church, the Board of Education till 1896, the City Club, Board of Trade, and the Free Masons. On Dec. 6, 1862, he married Miss Mary Bryden of Clinton, N. Y. They had five children, of whom only one, a daughter, survives with her mother. Mr. Edgar retired from business over a year ago.

Henry Hayden Meeder.

Henry Hayden Meeder, a prominent resident of South Orange, and the representative of that place on the Essex County Board of Chosen Freeholders, died last night at his home, 61 Ward Place, after a long illness. He was 35 years old. Mr. Meeder was a Corporal in the Seventh Regiment, New York, and was made First Lieutenant and an aide on the staff of Brig. Gen. Edward A. Campbell of the First Brigade, National Guard. A few weeks ago he was presented with a silver loving cup by an association of former members of Company A, Seventh Regiment.

Obituary Notes.

Mrs. RACHEL DEBORAH SCHULMAN, mother of the Rev. Dr. Samuel Schulman, rabbi of Temple Beth-El, died on Wednesday of pneumonia. She was 76 years old and the widow of Tonhum Schulman.

CHARLES M. BENNETT, Superintendent of Maintenance of Ways of the Pennsylvania lines, died yesterday at his home in Urbana, Ohio. He had been Superintendent of the Cincinnati & Muskingham Valley Railroad, and Superintendent of the Indianapolis & Chicago Divisions of the Pennsylvania lines.

GEORGE B. HIBBARD, marine lawyer, died at Buffalo on Wednesday evening, aged 82 years. Mr. Hibbard argued the inland navigation case before the United States Supreme Court, the result of which was the establishing of the great lakes as inland seas. He also had much to do with the creation of inter-State commerce laws.

ROLAND HAYWARD died suddenly at his home in Milton, Mass., yesterday in his forty-second year. For fifteen years he was a member of the Boston Stock Exchange, but a few years ago retired from active business. He was an ardent entomologist and possessed a large collection of beetles. He was a member of the Boston Society of Natural History and Treasurer of the Cambridge Entomological Club.

JOHN KEPPEL, for forty-five years a resident of Greenpoint, died of pneumonia on Wednesday at his home, 118 Milton Street, at the age of 64 years. He was in the plumbing business in Manhattan and for many years took an active part in Democratic politics in his section. He was one of the Democratic Presidential Electors when President Cleveland was defeated and one of the organizers of the Cleveland Club of the Seventeenth Ward. He was also a member of the Seawanhaka Boat Club and in the early seventies was the champion single sculler of the club. He leaves one son, three sisters, and a brother.

SILAS STRONG

It will be worth more than a week's vacation. You will meet Zeb, the bear dog, and hear some odd songs and good stories. You will learn to enjoy a fresh brand of humor and you'll think you're in the woods.

A distinguished college president says of this story: "It is a clean, sweet human book—a dear story and a decent protest. The shadows of the great woods are in it, and the smell of the balsams and the clean lily pads."

"More convincing even than Eben Holden."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Tennessee Coal Changes.

The Directors of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company chose T. G. Bray and T. W. Guthrie yesterday to act as assistants to Chairman John A. Topping. These men hold similar places with the Republic Iron and Steel Company, their election to the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company being a further step in the consolidation of the managements of the two companies.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Irregular; Call Money Rates, 4@10 Per Cent.

Demand Sterling Above Import Point —Pension Payments Help Banks.

It became plain in the course of yesterday's stock market that the violent advance of the day before, consequent upon the announcement of heavy gold engagements and an accompanying break in call money rates, was due almost wholly to anxiety on the part of those who had sold stocks short to cover their commitments; for there was no resumption of the rise with the opening of the market yesterday, and in the absence of further short covering the volume of buying orders was insufficient to offer more than an uncertain support to prices. Call money opened at 10 per cent., and by the close of the day had fallen to 4 per cent., but such influence as this development had upon sentiment was largely offset by another sensational rise in exchange rates, demand sterling on top of its advance of 120 points on Wednesday rising 90 points yesterday and closing at 4.85, a figure well above the point at which gold might be imported under present monetary conditions. In the practical certainty, therefore, that a further relief from this source was out of the question at the moment the attitude of Wall Street became one of conservatism, there being evident a disposition to postpone stock market operations until clearer light is thrown upon the situation by to-morrow's bank statement. Trading under these conditions fell some 300,000 shares below the volume of the previous day, and the actual dealings were largely due to the activity of traders. Prices were fairly firm throughout the morning, but weakened near the close of the day, following heavy selling of Consolidated Gas, which broke over 3 points, although final prices generally were little more than fractionally lower than those obtaining on Wednesday night. There was much uncertainty over the meaning of the turn in the negotiations between the anthracite operators and miners, although the announcement that the miners had modified their demands served to offset the statement that the operators had refused to recede from their original position. The fact that the door has been left open for further negotiations again encouraged belief in the eventual composition of all differences.

Further importations of gold were, of course, rendered impossible by the course of the foreign exchange market, but those already made have afforded at least temporary relief to the money market, which has also benefited by the heavy pension payments which the Government is now making. As a result of these payments, the loss of nearly $2,000,000, which the banks had sustained to the Government in the early days of the week, was reduced yesterday to a bare $76,000, with the prospect that this would be replaced by an actual gain by the banks before the close of the week. Under these circumstances, not only call-money rates, but also rates for time money, were appreciably easier yesterday, funds for more than the thirty-day period lending for the first time in several days without commissions. The bulk of the day's call loans was arranged at about 8 per cent., a figure which should be materially decreased in next week's markets, although continued activity in money is promised for some time yet. Stocks in London were lower yesterday, and in St. Petersburg and Paris prices were weak, the Berlin market displaying strength. The Bank of England's weekly return was better than had been anticipated, owing to the drain upon the London money market, while the Bank of France reported a decided betterment in its already strong position. Discount rates in London were easier, and exchange at interior cities of this country moved favorably to New York.

THE NEW GERMAN LOANS.

Subscriptions Are Regarded as Distinctly Disappointing.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

BERLIN, April 12.—The new German loans, amounting to 560,000,000 marks, ($140,000,000,) have been subscribed to the extent of 850,000,000 marks. It is said that this result is distinctly disappointing, last year's loan of 300,000,000 marks, for example, having been subscribed fifteen times over.

It is pointed out that the terms offered by the banks were altogether incompatible with the present state of the German money market. The Boersen Courier insists that the refusal of the Imperial Government to countenance the new Russian loan prejudicially affected both the German money market and the general feeling on the Bourse.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call on Stock Exchange collateral loaned at 4@10 per cent., with the last loans at 4 per cent. Most of the day's business was done at 8 per cent.

Time money, 6 per cent. for thirty, sixty, and ninety days, and 5½@6 per cent. for four, five, and six months.

Mercantile paper rates, 5½@6 per cent. for sixty to ninety days' indorsed bills receivable, 5½@6 per cent. for choice four to six months' single names, and 6 per cent. for others.

Clearing House statement: Exchanges, $359,224,222; balances, $10,350,686. Treasury debit balance was $258,000. The local banks have lost since Friday $76,000, against a loss in the same time last week of $3,953,000.

Sterling exchange was firmer. Nominal rates were $4.82 for sixty days and $4.85 for demand. Actual business was done at $4.84¼@$4.85 for demand bills, $4.81½@$4.82 for sixty days, and $4.85¼@$4.85⅜ for cables. Commercial bills were $4.80¾@$4.81⅛.

Continental exchange was quoted: Francs, 5.21⅞ and 5.18⅝; reichsmarks, 94 and 94 9-16@94⅝; guilders, 39 11-16 and 39¾.

Exchange on New York at domestic centres: Boston—Par. Chicago—20c premium. New Orleans—Commercial, $1 discount; bank, $1 premium. Savannah—Buying, 50c discount; selling 75c premium. San Francisco—Sight, par; telegraphic, 2½c. Cincinnati—Par. St. Louis—25@35c premium. Charleston—Buying, par; selling, 1-10 premium.

BULLION AND MINING.

Bar silver was quoted in London at 29⅞d per ounce, and in New York at 64⅝c per ounce. Mexican dollars were 50c.

On the Consolidated Exchange 100 shares of Alice sold at 3.00, 500 Atlanta at .15, 200 Confidence at .95, 4,000 Comstock at .23@.21, 150 Consolidated California and Virginia at 1.35, 300 Chollar at .19, 2,000 Comstock bonds at .17½@.18, 500 Den. Bull Frog at 1.60, 1,000 Gold Sovereign at .07, 200 Hale and Norcross at 1.25, 500 Indiana Tonopah at .05, 1,000 Manhattan Comet at .16, 1,300 May Queen at .35, 1,300 Jim Butler at 1.30@1.40, 200 Mexican at 1.15, 500 Mollie Gibson at .08, 500 Overman at .15, and 100 Potosi at .18.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, April 12.—Money was in quiet demand in the market to-day. Discounts were influenced by the export of American eagles, owing to the expectation that more will follow, though it is not anticipated that the New York drain will be serious.

Prices on the Stock Exchange were quietly firm, the feature being a sharp rally in Americans. Elsewhere business was meagre. Consols hardened on easy money. Home rails were cheerful.

Americans were upheld to well above parity, consequent on the improved monetary conditions in New York. Union Pacific was buoyant, and Missouri Pacific, Erie, and Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé were in request. Prices eased during the last hour, and the market closed quiet.

Foreigners recovered, after a dull opening.

The sum of $1,005,000 in gold was withdrawn from the Bank of England to-day for shipment to the United States.

Japanese imperial 6s of 1904 were quoted at 101⅝.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 15.20; Lisbon, 3.75.

Bullion amounting to £251,000 was withdrawn from the Bank of England to-day, of which £201,000 was for shipment to the United States and the remainder to South America.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, April 12.—Trading on the Bourse to-day was inactive, and prices generally were weak on realizations in view of the approaching issue of the Russian loan.

Three per cent. rentes, 99f for the account.

Exchange on London, 25f 11½c for checks.

BERLIN, April 12.—Prices on the Boerse to-day were firm, and had an upward tendency. Americans hardened.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 48¾ pfennigs for checks.

Discount rates: Short bills and three months' bills, 3½ per cent.

NO MORE GOLD ENGAGED.

Canadian Banks, However, Will Import Sovereigns at a Profit.

No further gold was engaged by New York banks yesterday, but it came to light that in addition to the $8,100,000 taken in London and Paris on Wednesday by the National City Bank and the Guaranty Trust Company, the Canadian banks had arranged to import a large amount of sovereigns into Canada. Estimates of the amount of gold taken by these banks varied. The agent of one of the Canadian banks said that the total engagements of sovereigns made by the banks in Canada this week amounted to about $4,000,000. The banks of Canada can import sovereigns to much better advantage than the New York banks, for the reason that they can count them at par as part of their reserves. In other words, the sovereigns are worth to the Canadian banks 4.8667, and when sterling exchange here was depressed on Wednesday to 4.8290, the Canadian banks were able to make a large profit on their importation of sovereigns.

The foreign exchange market recovered still further yesterday, as a result of greater ease in the local money market. Demand sterling rose to 4.85 and closed at the highest price of the day. This represented a net advance in two days of 2.10 cents to the pound sterling, which was even more rapid than the previous decline. Call money at no time yesterday lent above 10 per cent., and rates as low as 4 per cent. were quoted for the loans made at the end of the day. Time money also showed some recession in rates, although 6 per cent. was still quoted for all periods up to ninety days. For periods longer than three months the rate varied from 5½ to 6 per cent.

DEMAND ON LONDON CHECKED.

It Is Believed There That Gold Export Is Practically Over.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
[Copyright, 1906.]

LONDON, April 12.—It is believed that the sharp recovery in New York exchange which took place to-day has checked the American demand for gold in this market, and that the withdrawal to-day of £200,000 in eagles for shipment to the United States has practically completed the export movement begun yesterday.

It is reported that a number of gold withdrawals that had been arranged for were countermanded this afternoon, but whether this is true or not there seems to be no apprehension here that the drain upon the English supply of gold will go beyond moderate limits.

It is held that as the shipments to America are based on loans obtained in this market it is within the power of this market to set a limit beyond which withdrawals may not proceed.

The suspicion is entertained in some quarters that New York has already obtained more gold here than is generally known. It is suggested that a considerable amount of sovereigns ostensibly withdrawn for domestic purposes has found its way across the Atlantic.

BIG FOUR'S ANNUAL REPORT.

The annual report of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railway—the Big Four—issued yesterday, shows gross earnings of $22,517,763, an increase of $376,658 over the previous year, and net earnings of $5,638,418, a decrease of $607,000. After the payment of 5 per cent on the preferred stock and 4 per cent on the common stock the company showed a surplus for the year of $41,550, compared with a surplus of $994,810 in 1904.

The company issued additional common stock to the amount of $7,597,463 to cover the cost of new property and to reimburse the company for construction and equipment purchases prior to 1905. In this connection it is recalled that the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern, in its recent annual report, showed that it had acquired, in 1905, $7,528,700 of the stock of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railway, or practically all the new stock issued by that road in the year. In addition to the issuance of common stock, the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis disposed of $1,000,000 of general mortgage bonds.

Other issues and retirements of bonds brought the net increase in the company's funded debt up to $1,010,000. The net amount charged to road and equipment was $954,000. The report shows that advances to the St. Louis Short Line Division for construction at the close of last year amounted to $962,300 more than the sum realized from the sale of $3,000,000 of bonds issued in connection with the construction of this line. This St. Louis cut-off, which is operated jointly by the Big Four, the Chicago & Eastern Railroad, and the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad, was opened on July 1 of last year.

RUBBER GOODS CO. MEETS.

Increase in the Surplus—Lauterbach Quits as Director.

The annual meeting of the Rubber Goods Manufacturing Company was held yesterday in Jersey City, and the membership of the Board of Directors was reduced from fifteen to nine. These Directors were re-elected: Charles H. Dale, Ernest Hopkinson, Charles A. Hunter, Frank W. Eddy, Arthur L. Kelley, and Samuel P. Colt. The new members chosen were Anthony L. Brady, Lester Leland, and John J. Watson, Jr.

With the exception of Messrs. Hopkinson, Hunter, and Eddy, the members of the new board are also Directors in the United States Rubber Company.

The Directors who retired were Talbot J. Taylor, Edward Lauterbach, Harry Keene, C. J. Butler, M. J. Blanchard, H. O. Smith, E. J. Coughlin, W. J. Courtney, and J. H. Cobb.

Samuel P. Colt, the President of the United States Rubber Company, was elected to the Rubber Goods board some months ago. Mr. Dale and Mr. Kelley were elected in January.

The report of President Dale, submitted at yesterday's meeting, for the fiscal year ended March 31, shows an increase in the surplus over the preceding year of $158,477. The sales of the company were $17,662,453, an increase of $3,106,164. The net profits show an increase of $207,768.

WANT SATURDAY HOLIDAY.

The Stock Exchange Members Petition the Board of Governors.

Whether or not the Stock Exchange will close Saturday was still being debated when the members wound up their business yesterday afternoon and went home.

The Governing Committee met Wednesday and decided to keep open Good Friday and Saturday as well. The decision did not meet with the approbation of numerous members of the Exchange, and yesterday a petition was circulated asking for a holiday on Saturday, at least. There was no meeting of the Governing Committee and the fate of the petition is unsettled.

The Cotton Exchange will be closed to-day, to-morrow, and Monday. The doors of the Sugar and Coffee Exchanges will be shut to-day and to-morrow. The Metal Exchange will have the same vacation period which has been determined upon by the Cotton Exchange.

There will be no European grain markets before Tuesday and no American grain market to-day. The Produce Exchange and the Chicago Board of Trade will be out of business to-day. The London Stock Exchange will be closed to-day, to-morrow, and Monday, while the foreign bourses and the Philadelphia and Pittsburg Exchanges will observe Good Friday.

Whatever the action of the Governing Committee of the Stock Exchange the Consolidated Stock Exchange, and the Petroleum Exchange will remain open.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 12.—The local money market continues strong.

Call loans, 6@10 per cent.; time loans, collateral, 5@6 per cent.; time loans, mercantile paper, 5½ per cent.; Clearing House loans, 6 per cent.; New York funds at par. Clearings, $28,356,240; balances, $2,095,397; Sub-Treasury debit, $59,848.

There was a somewhat better feeling noticeable in the local market at the opening. Amalgamated opened up fractionally at 111½. Bingham gained a fraction, to 39⅝. United Copper sold at 68. Balance of copper shares were strong and generally showed small gains. After the early trading, some realizing orders appeared, and fractional declines were recorded, the market closing at about Wednesday's last figures. There was some trading in American Pneumatic shares, but price changes were within narrow limits. The listing of these shares on the New York Exchange had little or no effect on the stock here.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

To-day is Good Friday, also the 13th of the month, and the Stock Exchange, contrary to custom, remains open.

Everybody laughs at superstition, and most people have a little of it. In any community where personal fortunes are subject to abrupt fluctuations there is bound to be plenty of superstition, and the Wall Street community is no exception to the rule. The coincidence by which Good Friday falls on the 13th day of the month may have no apparent effect upon prices, but it would probably be surprising to know the number of instances in which it will influence individual ventures in the market. In the Wednesday evening letter of one of the best-known Stock Exchange houses in the Street there was this paragraph: "The opening of the Exchange on Friday will probably result to the benefit of brokers, who are thereby enabled to put off borrowing over Sunday for another day, but it is doubted if much business will be transacted. The superstitious element is not willing to carry stocks over Friday, the 13th." The writer would probably repudiate the assertion that he himself was tainted with superstition, but if he hadn't been just a little superstitious himself he never would have thought to embody such an idea in a stock market letter. The sign of "13" is not unlucky for everybody. There are a few mortals who embrace it and find luck where others are afraid to seek it.

***

There is a professional trader in Wall Street, as cool a customer as you would be likely to find in a day's hunt, who believes that there is luck for him in numbers which may be resolved into the elements of 2, 4, and 8. He gets the combination from the date of his birth. There are two other combinations, he says, which will bring luck to those who fall under their spell. One is the combination of 1, 5, and 7, and the other the combination of 3, 6, and 9. Either of these is unlucky for him, just as the combination of 2, 4, and 8 would be unlucky for a man whose ventures should be governed by the combination 1, 5, and 7 or that of 3, 6, and 9. This trader finds luck in 13, because 1 and 3 make four, and 4 is one of the figures in his talisman.

***

As soon as brokers are convinced that the back of the money stringency is really broken, if that is the case, they will begin to encourage speculation. Some of them are now hopeful of a revival in business. They wish, first, to feel sure that money will be accessible for purposes of stock market speculation, and, then to see activity, or, in other words, initiative. There was practically no outside business yesterday. Nobody seriously expected that there would be any. Brokers, as a rule, were too conservative to advise clients to buy stocks on top of so violent a recovery as had occurred on Wednesday, and were for awaiting recessions on which to begin. Uncertainty as to whether the Stock Exchange would remain open on Saturday was a restraint on professional trading. The London Stock Exchange not only will observe Good Friday in the customary manner, but will remain closed until next Tuesday morning, so that for three days to come this is the international market on which securities would be sold on bad news.

***

Traders were afraid to buy stocks on the opening yesterday, arguing that Wednesday's recovery in prices had been too rapid to hold, and that a settling back of prices could be looked for. The bull crowd concentrated itself upon a few stocks, notably Reading, which ran up 2 points, but made no real headway. Reading lost all of its gain in the last hour and closed unchanged. Union Pacific, Amalgamated Copper, the Steel stocks, and several other issues were strong during the greater part of the day, but eased off in the late trading, and closed at fractional declines.

***

The market did very well to hold the greater part of Wednesday's recovery without advancing further.

***

Stocks were supplied just freely enough to discourage headstrong operations on the bull side. The demonstrative buying came chiefly from houses of highly speculative tendencies, such as represent the professional trading element, notably the House of Twelve Partners, and it looked as if they were getting stocks as they bid for them. The total of transactions was about one-third smaller than on Wednesday. A continuation of Wednesday's advance would have weakened the technical position of the market by further reducing the short interest without attracting enough outside or general buying to take the place of its support. Some brokers affirm that the short interest yet remaining is very large—the largest, in fact, that has existed for many months. This may easily be true, but if it were to be run out of the market pell mell the advance in prices would rather estrange than attract conservative buyers, and nothing would be gained. What the real bull interests want is a broad, genuine speculation in which commission houses will take part as soon as money market conditions will permit, and the way to bring about a speculation of that character is to lead up to it gradually. It is necessary, for one thing, to gain the confidence of brokers, and that can be done only by giving them a market in which it will seem safe to trade.

Amalgamated Copper and Union Pacific are expected to dominate the market for a while. They are favorites with the active trading element, not only because of the ease with which large amounts of either stock may be turned, but also because they appeal strongly to bullish sentiment. There is a big market for both stocks, always in eighths, and besides affording the maximum degree of what traders call "action," there is never any danger of the speculation flattening out suddenly, leaving the buyers landed, with no market on which to sell.

***

One of the strongest arguments on the bull side of the market, albeit one that appeals chiefly to the speculative sense, is that there is hardly a commission house in the Street that is not in a position to take on stocks. Not only have their lines been reduced 40 to 60 per cent. since January, but the stocks which they have left are very heavily margined. That is why 30 per cent. call money did not produce any great liquidation. Brokers would be very sanguine as to the immediate future of the stock market if they could be sure of easier money market conditions during the Summer months.

***

It is doubtful if there has been much distribution of American Ice securities on this advance, except to a highly professional trading element attracted by the activity of the stock. The large buying orders have been differently placed each day, giving the impression of miscellaneous activity, but the manipulation has been somewhat too apparent. It was rumored yesterday that the pool had been unloading, which, of course, it would do if it got the opportunity, but there is some question about its having made a market on which stock could be sold freely.

***

Consolidated Gas, which was very strong on Tuesday and Wednesday, turne weak again yesterday and declined 3 points. For several days there has been quiet selling of the stock, apparently for the account of the crowd that was responsible for a recent demonstration against the short interest.

***

There has been less talk about the next Amalgamated Copper dividend than might be expected in view of the fact that the meeting will be held on Thursday of next week. Although the stock of late has been very strong, its movements have given no clue to the dividend. There is an abiding belief that the dividend will be increased some time this year to the rate of 7 per cent., but as to whether it may be expected at this time or later there is no information worth repeating. The stock itself is in negative ground—that is to say, it has recovered a little more than half the decline it suffered from the high point reached in February, and has now a big market around 110. Brokers who watch it believe that the buying recently has been better than the selling. If the stock should get very strong in the next two or three days, rumors of an increase of the dividend next week would doubtless follow.

***

The stocks of banks an trust companies doing a large Wall Street business have been advancing. Such institutions thrive on the kind of money market that has existed in the last three or four months.

BIG GAIN IN EXPORTS.

Farm Products in Eight Months of Fiscal Year Beat 1905 by $132,000,000.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—According to a bulletin issued by the Department of Commerce and Labor, the total value of agricultural products exported from the United States for the eight months of the fiscal year 1906, ended with February, was $700,000,000, as against $670,000,000 in the same period of 1900; $664,000,000 in 1902, and $568,000,000 in 1905, a gain over 1905 of $132,000,000.

The growth in the exports, says the bulletin, is in breadstuffs, cotton, and provisions, the latter term including meat and dairy products. The gain in breadstuffs was $70,000,000, in provisions $33,000,000, and in cotton $30,000,000.

The bulletin says that while agricultural exports are larger in total value than ever before, it does not follow that they form a larger percentage of the grand total of exports.

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 12.—Lasalle Street today heard the report that the recent loan of $3,000,000 to the Illinois Tunnel on tunnel 5 per cent. bonds is to be taken up soon. The amount of the tunnel collateral put up with Kuhn, Loeb & Co. through the Chicago Subway Company, according to President Wheeler of the tunnel company, is $4,000,000. A member of the financing firm is quoted as saying that the bankers have the right to sell the bonds above 95 any time before the loan matures and to market them irrespective of price after the loan matures.

This loan was negotiated last Fall about the time of the slump in Chicago Subway stock, and supposedly was a relatively short-time loan. President Wheeler is out of the city, and information as to the date of maturity of the loan cannot be obtained.

Chicago Subway stock was active again on the local Exchange to-day, buying and selling emanating from New York in a large degree. Sales to noon in the stock were 1,150 shares. The early price range was 55 up to 58 and back to around 55⅝.

Some small attention is being given again by brokers to the stock of Swift & Co., though trades to-day were few around 107½.

THE COTTON MARKET.

GOVERNMENT WEATHER FORECAST FOR THE COTTON STATES.

Mississippi and Louisiana—Showers and cooler Friday; Saturday fair, cooler, fresh to brisk southwest to northwest winds.

Western Texas—Fair Friday; Saturday fair, warmer.

Oklahoma and Indian Territory—Fair, cooler Friday; Saturday fair.

Tennessee—Showers and cooler Friday; Saturday fair, cooler in eastern portion.

With the smaller traders evened up and the larger operators standing pat the session at the Cotton Exchange yesterday was given over to the usual holiday jollification among the brokers. The volume of business hardly exceeded 75,000 bales. The market opened 1 to 4 points under the previous close, with May at 11.20, 18 points off from the high mark of Wednesday; July at 11.17, and October at 10.54. Prices were at once bid up 11 points in May, to 11.31; 6 in July, to 11.23, and 5 in October, to 11.61.

Liverpool was very weak at the opening here, with a decline of 8 points in the spot market and 7 in futures. The market later recovered, closing 3 to 4 points lower for the day. The spot sales there were 10,000 bales, and 2,000 bales were added to Wednesday's sales, making the total 16,000 for that day, instead of 14,000 as previously reported. Liverpool bought 48,000 bales during the week. Southern spot markets were reported firm and at such a premium as to discourage selling in the New York market for delivery in May.

Secretary Hester of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange issued a statement yesterday showing a decrease of 1,292,000 bales in the amount of cotton which came into sight for the seven months ended on March 31, as compared with the corresponding period last year. This was considered bullish.

Estimated receipts for to-day are: Houston, 1,750 to 2,250 bales, against 3,130 last week and 5,018 last year; Galveston, 6,500 to 7,500 bales, against 5,350 last week and 6,981 last year. New Orleans, 6,000 bales, against 3,994 last week and 7,071 last year. Receipts at the thirteen interior towns were 5,135 bales, against 6,920 last week and 15,613 last year. Shipments, 9,844 bales, against 8,521 last week and 14,322 last year. Port receipts were 11,262 bales, against 15,912 last week and 22,733 last year. Since Sept. 1, 6,896,220 bales, against 8,161,781 last year. Exports were 2,800 bales. Since Sept. 1, 5,278,785 bales, against 6,595,394 last year.

Cotton Opinions.

THEODORE PRICE—I believe cotton is going to sell very much higher, irrespective of what I may do or say.

A. O. BROWN & CO.—The indications point to bullish statistics for the week, and leading interests are still identified with the bull side. We believe in buying on declines.

CARPENTER, BAGGOT & CO.—We consider this, indeed, a bullish market, sustained by most bullish conditions.

DICK BROTHERS & CO.—We look for a resumption of bullish activity after the holidays next Tuesday.

MARSHALL, SPADER & CO.—New crop conditions, unless very favorable, will tempt spinners and speculators alike into these positions, where a good-sized short interest already exists.

J. S. BACHE & CO.—The speculative possibilities are decidedly in favor of the bull.

E. B. HUTTON & CO.—In general the market acts very well, and with a little patience cotton purchased around present prices will no doubt show good results.

Following are the opening, highest, lowest, and closing prices:

	Open.	High.	Low.	Clos.	Prev. Close.
January	10.50	10.63	10.61	10.62	10.59
April	11.00	11.17	11.17	11.18	11.14

November	....	....	....	10.58	10.55
December	10.55	10.61	10.55	10.59	10.57

Market closed quiet and steady. Estimated sales, 75,000 bales. New Orleans closed firm at 7@8 points advance; May, 11.39; July, 11.40; October, 10.50, and December, 10.60. New York, New Orleans, and Liverpool will remain closed until next Tuesday.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

WHEAT—The wheat market opened strong and fairly active, chiefly on covering, following bullish cables, lighter receipts, too much moisture in important parts of the crop belt, and a suggestively small movement at primary points, on which country holders were strong in their pretentions. The opening advance was a matter of ⅜c. Later business increased the advance to 1½c, with the market finally steady at a net rise of 1¼@1½c. The slight reaction was just before the close. The Liverpool market for wheat closed (not to reopen till Tuesday morning) at 1 P. M., at an advance of ¼c. Paris wheat and flour closed 5 to 10c higher. Berlin wheat closed ½@1¼ higher. Rye unchanged to ⅜c advance. Budapest wheat 16 higher since Tuesday. The foreign grain markets will remain closed until Tuesday morning. The local cash market closed quiet. No. 2 red, 90c asked in elevator, and 91½c nominal, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 89⅝c nominal, free on board afloat.

CORN—Corn ruled more active and much stronger on speculative account, but was held too strongly for business in the cash property. The cables were good; the foreign as well as the domestic statistics were bullish, the weather was poor, and the country offerings light. Argentine corn exports for the week were 252,000 bushels, and since May 1 the total is 78,813,000 bushels, against 94,832,000 last year, according to Broomhall. On this connection of factors the market, after opening ⅝c higher, increased the advance to ⅝@¾c, and closed steady within ⅛c of the top. Nothing was done for export; the market for cash corn closed firm. No. 2 corn, 58c elevator, and 54¼c free on board, afloat; No. 2 white, 55⅛c, and No. 2 yellow, 55⅛c, all nominal.

BOARD OF ESTIMATE AND APPORTIONMENT.

Public notice is hereby given that at a meeting of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, held March 30, 1906, the following petition was received:

To the Honorable, the Board of Estimate and Apportionment:

1. That your petitioner is a street surface railway corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York, having filed its certificate of incorporation in the office of the Secretary of State of New York on the 29th day of July, 1905, for the purpose of constructing, maintaining, and operating a street surface railway in the Borough of Brooklyn, City of New York.

2. That your petitioner desires to obtain from the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of The City of New York its consent to and a grant of the right, privileges, and franchise to use a portion of Bowne Street, in the Borough of Brooklyn, City of New York, for street railway purposes, and for the construction, maintenance and operation of a single track street surface railway upon and along the surface of said Bowne Street, a description of such proposed railway being as follows: Beginning at a point southeast of Imlay Street, where it will connect with the track of the New York Dock Company, and running southeasterly along Bowne Street to and into the property of J. H. Williams & Co., on the easterly side of Richards Street, the entire length of said road not to exceed nine hundred feet, together with the necessary connections, switches, sidings, turn-outs, turn-tables, cross-overs, and suitable stands necessary for the accommodation and operation of the said railroad by the overhead system of electricity, or other power lawfully employed by connecting railroads, all in the Borough of Brooklyn, City and State of New York.

3. Your petitioner further shows that there is no adequate means of transportation provided between the termini of the proposed railroad, and your petitioner believes there is a public demand for the construction and operation of this proposed railroad, and that such construction and operation will be a public convenience and benefit, the said railroad to be used for freight only.

Wherefore, your petitioner prays that the notice of the time and place when and where this application will be first considered be given, pursuant to provisions of Section 92 of the Railroad Law, and all other laws applicable thereto, and that consent or grant be given in the form of an ordinance subject to the laws and ordinances applicable thereto, and upon terms and conditions to be fixed in accordance with the provisions of the Greater New York Charter.

THE WILLIAMS TERMINAL RAILWAY COMPANY,
By JAMES H. WILLIAMS, Vice President.

Dated City of New York, Borough of Brooklyn, February 23, 1906.

James H. Williams, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is the Vice President of the Williams Terminal Railway Company, the petitioner named in the foregoing petition; that he has read the foregoing petition and knows the contents thereof; that the same is true of his own knowledge, except as to the matters therein stated to be alleged on information and belief, and as to those matters he believes it to be true.

JAMES H. WILLIAMS.

Sworn to before me this 23d day of February, 1906.

A. Y. BRITTON,
Notary Public, Westchester County,
Certificate filed in Kings County.

And the following resolutions were thereupon adopted:

Whereas, the foregoing petition from the Williams Terminal Railway Company, dated February 23, 1906, was presented to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment at a meeting held March 30, 1906;

Resolved, That in pursuance of law this Board sets Friday, the 27th day of April, 1906, at 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon, and Room 16 in the City Hall, Borough of Manhattan, as the time and place when and where such petition shall be first considered, and a public hearing be had thereon, at which citizens shall be entitled to appear and be heard; and be it further

Resolved, That the Secretary is directed to cause such petition and these resolutions to be published for at least fourteen (14) days in two daily newspapers in the City of New York, to be designated by the Mayor, and for at least ten (10) days in the "City Record" immediately prior to such date of public hearing. The expense of such publication to be borne by the petitioner.

JOSEPH HAAG, Secretary.

PROPOSALS.

Office of the Municipal Board,
Manila, P. I., March 15, 1906.

Sealed bids or proposals will be received by the Secretary of the Municipal Board until 11 A. M., September 15, 1906, and thereupon opened, for the purchase of the lease of a hotel site in the north wing of the Luneta Extension, City of Manila. The site is approximately 500 by 600 feet, fronting on the new boulevard on the east, with the Luneta on the south, Manila Bay on the west, and the new commercial centre and works of the port on the north. Detailed information and blank forms of proposal may be obtained at the office of the Secretary of the Municipal Board, Manila, P. I., or from the Chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs, Washington, D. C. Each bid will be accompanied by a certified check for P15,000 ($7,500 United States currency) as a guaranty that the bidder, if awarded the lease, will, after due notification, promptly enter into contract and furnish an acceptable bond in the sum of P20,000 ($10,000 United States currency) for the faithful fulfillment of the conditions of said contract. The right is reserved to reject any or all bids, or to waive any defects.

JOHN M. TUTHER,
Secretary of the Municipal Board.

PROPOSALS FOR CONSTRUCTION.—Depot Quartermaster's Office, 39 Whitehall Street, New York City, March 7, 1906.—Sealed proposals, in triplicate, subject to the usual conditions, will be received here until 3 o'clock P. M. April 14, 1906, and then opened, for constructing Sewage System, Bacterial Sewage Purification Plant, Water Distributing System, and Sinking 10" Tubular Well at new Military Post at Kahauiki, Honolulu, H. T. Plans and specifications may be seen at this office. Blank forms for proposals furnished on application. The right is reserved to reject or accept any or all proposals or any portion thereof. Envelopes containing proposals must be endorsed "Proposals for Construction at Kahauiki, Honolulu, H. T., to be opened at 3 o'clock P. M. April 14, 1906," and addressed to W. H. MILLER, Deputy Quartermaster General, U. S. A., Depot Quartermaster.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Prices Move Irregularly Within Narrow Limits.

Little Feature to the Trading—Gold Hill Copper Improves—Late Leaders Quieter.

The movement of prices in the outside security market was irregular yesterday, and confined to narrow limits. Even United Copper and Chicago Subway, which recently have fluctuated rather widely, were traded in within a range of a point for the former and of ¾ for the latter, their range of prices being 68⅛ to 67⅛ and 55 to 55¾ respectively. Gold Hill Copper was conspicuous for a great increase of activity and an advance from 1⅞ to 2 7-16. Copper Securities sold at 38 to 38⅜. There was a revival of interest in the Mackay Companies shares, but the common and preferred moved in opposite directions, the former rising from 62¼ to 63⅜ and the latter dropping from 73 to 72½. Inter-Met common advanced from 52⅞ to 53⅛, but fell back against to 52⅝; the preferred sold at 89¾@89½. Standard Oil receded from 654 to 652½.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 12.—The professional element was alone active in this market to-day, and it was quite content with making "quick turns," especially in Reading, Erie, Pennsylvania, and United States Steel common. The local traction stocks displayed some strength on commission house buying. Union Traction was notably strong, advancing ⅜, to 63, and closing with that bid. Philadelphia Rapid Transit did not sell above 28, but 28⅛ was bid for it at the close.

Philadelphia Traction was fractionally higher, and Easton Consolidated Electric advanced 2½, to 29, a new high record for it. Cambria Steel was in demand. Lehigh Valley showed some activity, but above 77 an ample supply of stocks was encountered. On a single transaction Philadelphia & Erie rose 1¾ points, while West Jersey & Seashore was up ½. The Stock Exchange will be closed to-morrow.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, April 12.—It was reported in financial circles to-day that certain local banks and trust companies had sent several million dollars to New York to be loaned in Wall Street. Private lenders also are said to have taken advantage of the unusually high rates there to put out large sums of money. It is estimated that upward of $6,000,000 has been forwarded from Baltimore to Wall Street. As a consequence the bond market is flatter than it has been for a year. The only thing to brighten up the trading to-day was a speculative flurry in G. B. S. Brewing Company bonds. The 4s advanced a point, reacted ¼, and the incomes also went higher.

In the stock list Georgia Southern and Florida second preferred sold up ½; Atlantic Coast Line rights rose ¼, to 5¼, for numerous small sums; Atlantic Coast Line of Connecticut rights rose 2 points, to 55; Georgia Southern and Florida second preferred advanced 1 point; Georgia Southern and Florida common was a late feature, jumping 5 points, to 40. Around the close Atlantic Coast Line of Connecticut 5s certificates broke 8¾ per cent. to 110¼ on one sale of 800 shares.

Sales: Bonds, $92,500; shares, stock, 182.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

The block front on the west side of Eighth Avenue, between Thirty-third and Thirty-fourth Streets, bought at auction several weeks ago by the City Investing Company, has been resold by that corporation to a client of the firm of Dennis & Preston. The buyer is an investor who will probably make alterations to the five and six story warehouse on the plot. The property, which is just north of the Pennsylvania Station, has frontages of 197.6 feet on Eighth Avenue and 100 feet on either street. The City Investing Company paid $656,300 for it, and is said to have resold it at a profit of about $65,000.

Estate Sells on Tenth Street.

M. & L. Hess have sold for the estate of Charles W. Iden and for Henry Iden 13, 15, 17, and 19 East Tenth Street, 100 feet west of University Place, old buildings, on plot 97.8 by 94.9, to William J. Patten and James L. Van Sant. This property has been in possession of the Iden family for many years.

West Side Dwellings Change Hands.

The McVickar-Gaillard Realty Company has sold for Lewis Coon 23 West Eighty-ninth Street, a four-story dwelling, on lot 20 by 100, to J. Clarke.

The four-story brick dwelling 23 West Ninety-first Street, which was to have been offered at auction yesterday by Joseph P. Day, was sold at private sale.

The H. Taylor Sherman Company has leased for Julia A. Schermerhorn to a client for a term of fifteen years 67 West Fifty-second Street, adjoining the corner of Sixth Avenue, at an aggregate rental of $60,000.

Thomas P. Fitzsimons has sold for William M. Durkin the three-story brick dwelling 225 West Forty-eighth Street, 18.6 by 55 by 100.

New Residence on Riverside Drive.

C. D. Jackson will build a five-story American basement dwelling at 4 Riverside Drive, just south of Seventy-third Street. It is to be of Colonial design and will occupy a frontage of 37 feet. The cost is estimated at $50,000 by Architects Trowbridge & Livingston.

The Central Park West Realty Company has brought suit against Peter Banner and others to foreclose two mortgages of $150,000 on the St. Urban apartment house at the southwest corner of Central Park West and Eighty-ninth Street, 125.11 by 150.

Upper Fifth Avenue Corner Sold.

Benjamin N. Duke has sold to Benjamin Guggenheim the plot, 27.2 by 120, at the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Seventy-sixth Street, opposite the Temple Emanu-El.

Post & Reese have sold for Richard H. Clarke, 104 East Seventy-third Street, a four-story brownstone-front dwelling, with extension, on lot 17 by 100.5.

Herman Jacoby has sold 112 East Seventieth Street, a four-story dwelling on lot 20 by 100.5.

Corner Sold on the Heights.

Wacht & Braverman have sold, through David Stewart, to William Wolff the plot 99.11 by 125, at the northwest corner of Amsterdam Avenue and 156th Street.

Stern, Simon & Heilbrun have sold for S. Loewenstein 273 West 140th Street, a five-story double flat, 25 by 100, to B. Goldsmith; also, for a Mr. Rosenbaum, 1,780 Madison Avenue, a five-story double flat.

New Seligman Banking House.

Plans have been filed for a new eleven-story bank and office building to be erected by J. & W. Seligman & Co. on the block at William, South William, and Stone Streets. It is to be of the Italian Renaissance type of architecture, with façades of granite at the first story and of limestone above, with an ornamental tower. The main entrance will be on South William Street. The banking offices will occupy the basement and first floor with a mezzanine story. The building is to cost $500,000, according to the estimate of Architects Francis H. Kimball and Julian Clarence Levi.

New Apartments Sold in Harlem.

Samuel G. Hess and B. Klingenstein have bought from Kramer & Rockmore the six-story apartment houses, nearing completion, at 23 East 103d Street and 24 East 104th Street, each 25 by 100.

A. B. Mosher & Co. have resold to Joseph Berkowitz the northeast corner of Lexington Avenue and 123d Street, a five-story triple flat, with stores, 35 by 100.

The northeast corner of Madison Avenue and 128th Street, a plot 100 by 72.6, has been sold to J. J. & L. Liebenthal, who will erect two six-story apartment houses. H. J. Kantrowitz and Daniel Stein were the brokers.

Simon Frank has bought the five-story double flats 2,103 Fifth Avenue, 1,682 Park Avenue, and 302 East Ninety-fifth Street.

A. Cohn is the buyer of 230 East Eighty-third Street and 3 East 112th Street, sold recently through David Goldberg.

Buyers of 100th Street Flats.

Livingston & Perlstein are the buyers of the nine six-story tenements in course of construction on the south side of 100th Street, between First and Second Avenues, each 50 by 100.

O. G. Manss, in conjunction with H. Schumacher & Sons, has sold the property 1,046 Second Avenue.

Nevins & Perelman have sold to Levinson & Zipkin, for improvement, 358 and 360 East 121st Street, two three-story dwellings on plot 36.10 by 100.11.

The property sold recently, through the firm of Leonard J. Carpenter to the Madison Avenue Reformed Church, was the southeast corner of First Avenue and Sixty-seventh Street, not Sixty-first Street, as was reported.

West Side Tenement Buying.

J. Arthur Mandeville has sold for M. Hogan 451 West Thirty-ninth Street, a four-story tenement, 25 by 98.9, to Milton E. Oppenheimer.

The Harlem Realty Exchange, in conjunction with Solomon Kroll, has sold for Schmeidler & Bachrach 530 West Forty-fifth Street.

Peter P. Sherry has resold for John Bowker the five-story tenement 440 West Twenty-sixth Street, on lot 25 by 92. The same broker has leased for Sears & Howell the three-story stable 445 West Nineteenth Street, to J. W. Goddard & Sons for a term of years.

Purchase of Mott Street Tenements.

Pisani Brothers & Co. have sold for a client to Albert E. Lowe 122, 124, and 126 Mott Street, three five-story front and rear tenements on lot 75 by 94.5.

Louis Wolf & Son have sold for F. Grabruys to Dr. Bernard Gordon the six-story tenement 220 Madison Street, 26.1 by 100.

Gross & Elsler have bought from Jennie Wolf the five-story tenement 626 East Fourteenth Street, 38 by 100.3.

John P. Kirwan has leased for the Coddington estate 358 to 364 Bleecker Street, northwest corner of Charles Street, five-story stores and tenements, 96.8 by 75, to D. M. Gallo, for five years, at an aggregate rental of $40,000.

Salinger & Klein, owners of 190, 192, and 194 Waverley Place, deny that those properties have been sold.

Bronx Deals on Third Avenue.

Thomas J. Quinn has bought from the Georgi estate the plot at the northwest corner of Third Avenue and 162d Street. This plot has not changed hands since 1848, when it was sold by Gouverneur Morris.

Joseph Hyman and Morris Simon have sold through Isaac Hyman, as attorney, the northeast corner of Third Avenue and 167th Street, 32 by 104. They have bought, through Mr. Hyman, the plot, 50 by 100, on the west side of Decatur Avenue, 100 feet south of 193th Street.

Third Rail System June 1st.
Greatest Railroad Center in Nassau County. — $118

YOU CANNOT BUY LAND BY THE ACRE ADJOINING FOR WHAT WE ARE SELLING THESE LOTS AT.

EVERY LOT ADVERTISED IS 25 FEET FRONT BY 100 FEET DEEP.

Our Sales Book will prove that we are selling more lots to Investors and Homeseekers right at Mineola than any sub-division or locality advertised in Long Island; that is convincing evidence of the confidence of the Investing public.

Our sales aggregated at Mineola since November 1st, 5 months, $640,000.

TWO NEW SUB-DIVISIONS TO BE PLACED ON MARKET FOR SALE.
1,600 LOTS. GARFIELD PARK AND NASSAU HEIGHTS NO. 3. 1,600 LOTS.

To the readers of this paper: We do not ask you to buy, but at our expense come to the property and look it over; see the improvements we are making; note the surroundings, and see for yourself the big profit in sight.

Every Investor knows a County Seat is a money maker. Every Homeowner knows a County Seat is always a railroad center. Invest your money at County Seats and it always is returned 200-fold.

16 MINUTES TO BROADWAY
PROVED AN ENORMOUS SUCCESS.
THE REASON IS PLAIN.
Third Rail Electric System Already Laid to Property.
FIRST STOP AFTER JAMAICA.

Bordering New York City, right across the street, at Queens County, just escaping the heavy taxes, but first to benefit by railroad improvements. Electric lighting, near railroad station, and trolley direct to New York; FRONTAGE ON FAMOUS MERRICK ROAD, the Fifth Avenue of Long Island. Persuasion or argument is not required to sell valuable building lots at Ormonde Park, the new Bronx. A GOLD FIELD FOR INVESTORS AND HOME-SEEKERS. Come by train or trolley. Judge for yourself. Lots now held at $95 and upward will be worth ten times the price when tunnels are finished. Every lot guaranteed by Title Guarantee & Trust Company. The banner proposition on Long Island, which will never be duplicated in its history.

FLORAL PARK.
20 Minutes From Broadway.
Lot $300. $10 Down & $5 Monthly
With improvements, running water, etc.; no interest or taxes for one year. Title guaranteed. This is without a doubt the most beautiful and attractive piece of property and investment that was ever placed on the market before. Everybody knows John L. Childs, the seed and flower raiser; this property adjoins his handsome estate; it is also right at the depot and trolley. Floral Park has the best railroad service on Long Island, owing to four branch roads running through it. These lots are as good as 100 per cent. investment and could not be bought for less than that in a year from now, and a beautiful home site for any one wishing to build. All the new Penn. R. R. tunnels and improvements go straight to this property. For free tickets, booklets, etc., apply to

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, duly made and entered in the above entitled action, bearing date the 26th day of March, 1906, and entered in the office of the Clerk of the County of New York on March 27th, 1906, I, the undersigned, the Referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction, at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, Nos. 14 and 16 Vesey Street, in the Borough of Manhattan, in the City of New York, on the second day of May, 1906, at 12 o'clock, noon, of that day, by James L. Wells, auctioneer, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows:

All that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land, with the buildings and improvements thereon erected, situate, lying, and being in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, County and State of New York, bounded and described as follows: Beginning at a point on the northerly side of Sixty-ninth Street, distant two hundred and five (205) feet westerly along the same from the corner formed by the intersection of the westerly side of Amsterdam (formerly Tenth) Avenue and the said northerly side of Sixty-ninth Street, and running thence northerly, parallel with the westerly side of Amsterdam Avenue, one hundred (100) feet five (5) inches to the centre line of the block; thence westerly, along the same, sixty (60) feet; thence southerly, again parallel with the westerly side of Amsterdam Avenue, one hundred (100) feet five (5) inches to the northerly side of Sixty-ninth Street, and thence easterly, along the said northerly side of Sixty-ninth Street, sixty (60) feet to the point or place of beginning. Said premises being now known by the street numbers 217, 219, and 221 West Sixty-ninth Street.

Dated New York, April 6, 1906.
FREDERICK S. WAIT, Referee.
AUGUSTUS S. HUTCHINS, Attorney for Plaintiff, No. 69 Wall Street, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York.

The approximate amount of the lien or charge to satisfy which the above described property is to be sold is twenty-three thousand nine hundred and ten and 42-100 ($23,910.42) dollars, with interest thereon from March 15, 1906, together with the plaintiff's costs and allowances, amounting to three hundred and seventeen and 37-100 ($317.37) dollars, with interest from March 26, 1906, together with the expenses of the sale. The approximate amount of the water rates and other liens to be allowed to the purchaser out of the purchase money, or paid by the Referee, is eighteen ($18.00) dollars and interest.

The premises are to be sold subject to agreements in Liber 95, Section 4 of Conveyances, Page 260, and Liber 95, Section 4 of Conveyances, Page 300. Also subject to an encroachment of one and one-half (1½) inches of the westerly wall of the building erected upon the rear of the premises above described on the premises adjoining on the west.

Dated New York, April 6, 1906.

In pursuance of an interlocutory judgment of partition and sale, duly made and entered in the above-entitled action and bearing date the 20th day of March, 1906, I, the undersigned, the referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction, at the Exchange Salesroom, Nos. 14-16 Vesey Street, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 25th day of April, 1906, at 12 o'clock noon on that day, by Joseph P. Day, auctioneer, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows:

All that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land, situate, lying, and being in the northerly side of Fortieth Street, between the First and Second Avenues, in the Nineteenth Ward of the Borough of Manhattan, City, County, and State of New York, and which is known and distinguished on a map by Edward Smith, C. S., by the Number 153, which said map is filed in the office of the Register of the City and County of New York in Tin Case Number 65, the said lot being bounded and described as follows:

Beginning at a point on the northerly side of Fortieth Street, distant two hundred and fifty feet easterly from the northeasterly corner of Second Avenue and Fortieth Street, and running thence northerly and parallel with Second Avenue sixty-seven feet, two and one-half inches; thence southeasterly in a diagonal line to a point distant fifty-six feet and one-half of an inch northerly from the northerly side of Fortieth Street, and two hundred and seventy-five feet easterly from the easterly side of Second Avenue twenty-seven feet four and one-half inches; thence southerly and again parallel with Second Avenue fifty-six feet and one-half of an inch to the northerly side of Fortieth Street, and thence westerly along said northerly side of Fortieth Street twenty-five feet to the point or place of beginning.

Together with all the right, title, and interest in and to the land lying in Fortieth Street, fronting and adjoining said described lot.—Dated New York, April 2d, 1906.

ALDERMAN SURRENDERS ON CHARGE OF BRIBERY

Markert Wrote Woodbury in Behalf of Constituent.

PROMISED TO RETURN FAVOR

Street Cleaning Commissioner Says the Mayor Told Him to Swear Out a Warrant.

Alderman George Markert, who was elected last Fall on the Republican and Municipal Ownership tickets from the Sixtieth Brooklyn District, surrendered himself yesterday morning in the Tombs Court to Detective Flood of the District Attorney's office, having heard that a warrant had been sworn out against him by Street Cleaning Commissioner Woodbury. The charge of bribery, made by Dr. Woodbury, is based on a letter written to him by Alderman Markert two weeks ago for the purpose of obtaining the reinstatement of an Italian laborer who had been discharged from the department. The letter formed part of the affidavits in the case. Here is a verbatim copy:

> I would ask a Favor of you Hon. Commissioner on of ny Voters of ny District. He was Employt as a Street Sweeper and he was taken Sick and the Doctor of the Dept Whates him to Return to work and he was not aple so the have tisgargt him from the Dept. I would ask yo Pleas to give him Work he is a father of 6 childr and a Sick Wife. I have given him shoes for his Children this is a Act of charity to give him employment. I am a Alderman of Committee of Street Cleaning and I will Return the favor true the Board of Aldermen this gentlem is Angelo Angena of No 17 Conesylea st Brooklyn. Pleas let me know by Retr Mail.
> Yours truly with Thanks
>
> Alderman GEORGE MARKERT
> 142 Meserole St.
> Brooklyn
> March 27 1906.

Magistrate Whitman set the examination of the Alderman for April 19 and paroled him meantime in the custody of his counsel, Paul J. Donnelly. Assistant District Attorney Corrigan is prosecuting the case. Dr. Woodbury was not in court. When seen at his office he said:

"I showed this letter to the Mayor and he told me to make a charge against the man."

All other questions put to the Commissioner were referred by him to the District Attorney for answer.

Alderman Markert said yesterday that he was not a member of the special committee appointed by the board to investigate Commissioner Woodbury's department, but that he was a member of the standing committee on street cleaning. He said he had merely tried to help a man in destitute circumstances, and that the only promise he made was that, if any favor was shown by the Commissioner in this matter, he, the Alderman, "would try to return it through the board."

OCEAN TRAVELERS.

Some of the Arrivals on the Kroonland and the Majestic.

Among the passengers who arrived from Antwerp on the Red Star liner Kroonland yesterday were:

Some of those who arrived from Liverpool on the White Star liner Majestic were:

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Baby, Mrs. R. H. B. Bowie, Miss Louisa B. Bowie, Gordon W. Bull, Mrs. A. B. Dixon, Miss A. L. Dixon, W. Eastman, Luigi Errera, William S. Lecky, William Macalister, Mr. James Macconel, Miss McCafferty, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred B. Mole, Miss Mole, Mrs. R. Elliott Palmer, Miss Alice H. Palmer, Herman Fayen, Joseph Garneau, E. Goodman, Andrew Gray, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Hann, J. Henry Scattergood, Bishop I. B. Scott, Albert Shaw, J. Somerville, C. F. Speare, Richard Ware, Miss Theodosia Whitaker, Clarence H. Whitney, Evan Williams, and the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Dinsdale T. Young.

Too Warm for Pier Swindlers Here.

Just before the French liner La Lorraine sailed for Havre yesterday morning, Detective Sergts. Moody, Leeson, and Aitken recognized on the pier an Italian who has attained a measure of notoriety for separating Italian immigrants from their money. When the detectives asked Faranti his business he showed a ticket for Havre, and remarked that it was getting "too hot in America" and that he was going back home.

HONOR MRS. LOWELL.

Woman's League Has Memorial Exercises in Its New Home.

The Woman's Municipal League, which has outgrown its headquarters at 31 Union Square, moved into a new home, 19 East Twenty-sixth Street, one of the old mansions on the north side of Madison Square, yesterday. As a dedication of its new building the league held a memorial meeting in honor of its founder, the late Mrs. Josephine Shaw Lowell.

Miss Grace H. Dodge, Miss Kate Bond, Miss Louisa Lee Schuyler, Miss Isabel C. Barrows, Mrs. William J. Schieffelin, Miss Lillian D. Wald, Dr. Jane E. Robbins, and Mrs. Frederick Nathan were the speakers. Each talked of some one line of work in which Mrs. Lowell had been prominent. Most of the speakers and many women in the audience, either by choice or accident, were dressed entirely in black.

"Mrs. Lowell would undoubtedly have made a mark in literature if she had not devoted her life to public affairs," said Miss Schuyler. "She was bound to make her mark in some way in the world. There is one thing that she never could have been, and that is a self-seeking society woman."

A letter from Seth Low as a representative of the Charity Organization Society was read asking the league if it purposed to erect a memorial to Mrs. Lowell to cooperate with his society, which had the matter under consideration. It was voted to request Mr. Low to place Miss Margaret L. Chandler, the league President, on any memorial committee the organization might appoint.

A NEGRO ASSEMBLY DISTRICT.

Odell Plans to Give Some 3,300 Black Voters to Windolph.

One of the interesting features of the Odell plan of reapportionment for New York County is the establishment of a "black" Assembly district, which, it is expected, will be solidly Republican. To establish such a district it is proposed to take a large section of the Eleventh District with several election districts from the Ninth, Thirteenth, and Twenty-fifth Districts, which contain a large number of negroes.

The present Eleventh District, of which William Dalton is the Tammany leader, and John P. Windolph is the Republican leader, contains approximately 2,200 negro voters, while the election districts which it is proposed to take from the other Assembly districts contain 1,100 more negro voters. By throwing these districts with the present Eleventh, and making a few other changes, it is expected that a new district can be created for Windolph, so that he will be able to overcome the 1,800 Democratic plurality which Dalton usually gets now.

METZ TO AID SCHOOL BOARD.

Says He Will Co-operate in Obtaining Needed Sites Promptly.

Controller Metz has pledged his support to the Board of Education in the matter of acquiring sites for proposed school buildings. Mr. Metz is a former member of the board, and is familiar with the necessity for prompt action in obtaining sites for school buildings. He has written to Secretary Palmer:

"I know from my own experience as a member of your board some years ago how the conscientious efforts of members of the board were often negatived and the city forced to pay exorbitant prices for property which should have been taken if the original suggestion had not been opposed by some official before whom the matter comes after leaving your board.

"I can assure your board that so long as I am in this office I shall personally do what I can to co-operate with your members in every way in supplying adequate grounds for all proposed buildings. I want to avoid as much as possible condemnation proceedings, whenever the city can buy the land at a fair valuation direct from the owners."

HITCH IN BLACKMAIL CASE.

Complainant Must Answer and the Charge Has to Wait.

The bail of Homer C. Hawkins, the timekeeper in the Mott Haven railway yards, who is charged with trying to blackmail his relative, Louis R. Fuller, out of $500, was reduced from $2,500 to $500 by Magistrate Whitman in the Tombs Court yesterday. Mrs. Faxon, mother of the defendant, said that she thought she could obtain security for that amount.

After having denied that he knew the prisoner's relationship to his own father, Dr. Frank Fuller, the complainant, pressed by Lawyer Price, the counsel for Hawkins, admitted that he was informed by Dr. Fuller himself two years ago that young Hawkins was his grandson. He also admitted knowing that Hawkins spent some time at his grandfather's home about a year ago. He objected to revealing facts about himself, which caused Lawyer Price to declare:

"If this young man will not answer questions relating to himself I'll bring Dr. Fuller into court and make him answer them."

This had the effect of making Mr. Fuller's counsel obtain an adjournment until this morning. Magistrate Whitman declared he would resist any attempt to withdraw the charges if the evidence indicated an attempt at blackmail.

ASININE, SAYS THE COURT.

Meaning the New York City Railway's Transfer Regulation.

Having learned from counsel for both sides that Mary Russell, a colored cook, and Thomas E. Halloran, a Ninth Avenue street car conductor, wanted to withdraw the charges of assault they had made against each other after a fight that followed the conductor's refusal to issue a transfer, Justice Olmsted said in Special Sessions yesterday:

"These cases resulting from the company's asinine rule regarding transfers should be tried, but under the circumstances the court is compelled to discharge both defendants.

"The court has learned most of the facts in the case, however, and takes the opportunity to say that the company should issue transfers at any time and at any point where the tracks of the road cross each other. It is my opinion, in fact, that the passengers should be permitted to change from one car to another without any transfer slip being used."

PLACE FOR MURPHY'S COUSIN.

Metz Finds One for the Man McClellan Forced Out.

John J. Murphy, cousin of the Tammany leader, has been appointed by Controller Metz to a place in the auditing bureau of the Finance Department. Murphy recently resigned, under pressure, a secretaryship in the Tenement House Department. The salary of his new place is only $1,500, but the appointment is taken as emphasizing the "regularity" of the Controller in his political affiliations.

When Murphy left the Tenement House Department it was denied that the McClellan-Murphy unpleasantness was responsible for the change, but the fact was widely published that, at the same time, all the followers of the distinctively Murphy district leaders who were employed in the department found it convenient to resign.

VINCENT says:

$15 Suits
Special Value.

A special advantage came to me which allows these $20 suits to go at $15. They are cut in two designs—"English" and "Saxon." The "English" is a three-button, straight front Sack, with vent in center, while the "Saxon" is similar with vents at side seams.

TALK OF A GIANT BANK TO RULE MONEY RATES

CAPITAL MAY BE $100,000,000

Brokers Complain That They Are Forced to Pay High Rates—Want to be Independent.

The Governors of the New York Stock Exchange at their meeting on Wednesday, it was learned yesterday, informally discussed a plan for the control of the local money market by interests identified with the Exchange. Suggestions that were made included the establishment of a new bank to be run in the interest of the Exchange and an alliance with one of the largest of the banks already in operation. The National City Bank was named as the institution best suited for this alliance.

The monetary stringency of the past fortnight is immediately responsible for the discussion. The proposal that a bank with a capital of $50,000,000, or possibly $100,000,000, be founded for the purpose of regulating the money market was first made on the floor of the Exchange last Monday, when money was at 25 per cent. The matter was talked over for several days, and so great was the interest in the proposal that the Governing Committee took up the matter.

The establishment of a new bank or the enlarging of one of the existing banks for the purpose of controlling the money market is still nothing more than a bare suggestion, according to those who discussed the matter yesterday. The fact that brokers last week and this week have paid as high as 30 per cent. for loans at a season when easy money is usually expected gained many supporters for the idea of a bank with enormous capital that would be able to control rates in times like the present. The scheme calls in a general way for the establishment of an institution similar in its aims to the Bank of England, and which will have weight enough to regulate within reasonable limits the rate for money.

Suggest a $50,000,000 Subscription.

Some of those who support the plan are in favor of the Exchange, or at least the members of the Exchange, forming an alliance with the National City Bank. They proposed that the members of the Exchange subscribe, say, $50,000,000, to be added to the $25,000,000 present capital of the City Bank, which would place that institution in a position of such strength that it could go a long way toward preventing advances in the money market to exorbitant rates. The City Bank, according to its officials, never charges more than 6 per cent., and its offerings on the floor in the recent monetary stringency were all at that rate. This fact, with the commanding position occupied by the bank, led to the suggestion that that institution be made the medium through which the "money market control" plan should be put into effect.

The City Bank, however, has not been approached in the matter, and it remains to be seen if the promoters of the movement will be able to obtain from the members of the Exchange as much financial support as they have already received approbation.

Officials of the National City Bank said last night that they had heard of the discussion, but that they did not believe that the matter had taken any definite shape. Vice President Frank A. Vanderlip said:

"The discussion of the plan so far, I am informed, has been entirely informal. No negotiations of any kind have been taken up with the City Bank."

Extorted Highest Rates.

All through the recent stringency in money, which was broken by the importation of $5,000,000 gold on Wednesday by the National City Bank and smaller engagements by other institutions, there have been suggestions that the money market was being manipulated. It was said that banks were profiting by the situation to extort from brokers the highest rates possible. A bank such as is proposed would, it is thought, prevent such a situation in future.

A member of the Governing Committee of the Stock Exchange said last night:

"Though such a project as a Stock Exchange bank has not taken any definite shape, it has been discussed among the brokers. We feel that we are being unjustly treated by the banks.

"To establish a real Stock Exchange bank would be, to my mind, practically an impossibility for this reason: It would be necessary to make discrimination between brokers, on account of their credit, and such discrimination would be an insurmountable obstacle in the way of the Exchange starting a bank.

"Something certainly ought to be done to make such a situation as we saw this week impossible. It has been suggested that an outside institution be formed having close relation with the Stock Exchange and its members, but no official connection. In that case, of course, every broker would have to stand or fall by his credit or lack of it, just as he does with banks entirely outside.

"The solution of the problem, it seems to me, is for the brokers to establish close and permanent relations with existing banks and trust companies. For instance, let a Stock Exchange firm go to a bank and say: 'Now, we are going to do business with you steadily and help you in every way we can. We will pay you a reasonable rate the whole year through and won't take advantage of STATE'S COAL STOLEN.

Governor and Albany Grand Jury to Investigate Charges.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 13.—Somebody has been stealing coal from the State, and the Governor is determined to have an investigation to discover who the thieves are.

The State operates a big heating plant at North Hunk and Lafayette Streets, about a hundred yards from the Capitol, and at that place are stored hundreds of tons of coal. As a matter of fact this heating plant is the greatest place for coal consumption in the city, and also in the State relatively. As the coal "belongs to the State," there is said to be little attention paid to economy. Quantities of this coal have disappeared, and Gov. Higgins has called upon District Attorney Addington to make an investigation. It developed that to-day subpoenas have been issued for sixteen State employes. Such evidence as has been collected will be submitted Tuesday to the Grand Jury.

Democrats are pleased with the developments as they hold the situation to be practically another scandal for the Higgins Administration to carry. Gov. Higgins had this to say about the anthracite episode:

"Several days ago I was informed that coal purchased by the State had been taken from the Capitol heating plant. I made inquiries and yesterday placed such information as I had before the Trustees of public buildings. I submitted to District Attorney Addington such information as I had.

"It cannot be said that the charges have been made against any one in particular. Those who talked with me were not under oath, of course.

"We want the allegations thoroughly investigated."

POLICE GET COAL RIOTERS.

Make Arrests Despite a Constable Who Warns Them Off.

Special to The New York Times.

WILKESBARRE, Penn., April 13.—The State mounted police, while to-day making arrests of men charged with rioting at the Franklin colliery of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company last night, were served with a novel proclamation by Constable John Sunday of Wilkesbarre Township. It said:

"I am the duly elected Constable and peace officer of Wilkesbarre Township, and, without consulting or co-operating with me, you have since yesterday arrested people without warrants where you had not witnessed that they committed any crimes. You are roaming around the streets in my bailiwick like Russian Cossacks, inciting the peaceable residents of said township. You are doing this for the last twenty-four hours. Therefore you are hereby notified that I can control the situation myself and I have not been notified of any disturbance, and if I am notified I will guarantee protection, and if in need of assistance I will call on you.

The police paid no heed to this, but proceeded to arrest Andrew Gulick, Frank Sunday, and George Marmarack, charged with rioting and disorderly conduct. They were all held under bail for trial. While making the arrests one policeman was struck by a stone. Later Gulick got warrants for the arrest of Supt. Zerbe of the Lehigh Valley Company and Sergt. Wilhelm, charging them with perjury and assault.

READY FOR BALLOON FLIGHT.

Dr. Thomas Promises to Outdo To-day at Pittsfield All Records.

LENOX, Mass., April 13.—In the biggest baloon in America, four men will attempt to-morrow to reach Boston or some other point on the Atlantic Coast from an ascent at Pittsfield. The baloon has a capacity of 55,000 cubic feet, and carries a car easily capable of accommodating four persons.

The men who will occupy the car to-morrow are Count Henry de La Vaulx, the French balloonist; Capt. Homer W. Hedges, President of the Aero Club of America; August Post, Treasurer of the club, and Alan R. Hawley, of New York. They arrived here to-night accompanied by a party of fifty, including John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

The start from Pittsfield will be made at 10 o'clock in the morning if weather conditions are favorable. During the trip Mr. Post is to keep a record of the temperature and barometric conditions at the request of Prof. Roche of the Blue Hill Observatory.

Although Dr. Julian P. Thomas, who, with his wife, made an ascension last Wednesday from Pittsfield, Mass., in Count de la Vaulx's balloon l'Orient, will not be in Pittsfield this afternoon, when the Count, with several other members of the Aero Club, make their trip to the clouds, he will carefully watch the record established. Last night he promised to exceed anything achieved by them.

"I have already contracted with Charles Levee, the French aeronaut, to outstrip anything the gentlemen who have planned to make an ascension to-morrow may do," he declared. "If they go high, I will go higher. If they go far, I will go further. The record for height is now held by my wife and myself, and, of course, if nothing more is achieved than was done by us there will be no use in any attempt to excel their record. Mr. Levee tells me, however, that he is willing to undertake to break any record in either the height or length of flight which may be established to-morrow, and, knowing him as I do, I think he is equal to the task."

DYING ON CHURCH STEPS.

Man an Opium Victim, Doctors Say—Good Friday Worshippers Found Him.

An unknown man, supposed by the police to be J. F. Finnegan, was found unconscious on the steps of the Church of the Epiphany, in East Twenty-second Street, near Second Avenue, yesterday afternoon. They hurried him to Bellevue Hospital, where he died soon afterward.

The man was first noticed by persons entering the church to observe Good Friday. He was lying apparently asleep on the steps. Some one notified Patrolman Gelling of the East Twenty-second Street Station, who tried vainly to rouse the man.

At first it was believed at the hospital that the man was suffering from apoplexy, but a more careful investigation showed symptoms of opium poisoning. The man died without regaining consciousness. In one of his pockets was found a letter addressed to J. F. Finnegan, 115 East Thirteenth Street. This is the address of a sawmill, which was closed last night.

CROWDED TRAINS CRASH AT BRIDGE TERMINAL

MOTORMAN MISTOOK SIGNAL

Two Seriously Hurt, Many Slightly Cut—Women Faint in Smash—Bridge Blocked at Rush Hour.

Two crowded elevated railroad trains, in charge of confused motormen, one of whom mistook a signal, crashed into each other at the Brooklyn terminal of the bridge just as the rush hour was ending, about 7 o'clock last evening.

The forward cars of both trains were forced off their trucks, window panes were shattered, and the passengers, many of whom were hanging on to straps, were thrown together in heaps. Luck had it that the accident considerably injured only two men, but many were cut by flying glass.

A dozen women in each train fainted when the cars smashed into each other, and many persons rushed out of the doors and walked along the tracks to a place of safety, regardless of danger from the third rail. For almost two hours traffic on the bridge was confined to two tracks, and the block was so great that persons walking from Manhattan to Brooklyn were able to make the trip afoot through an arcade of cars from one end to the other.

The trains in collision were a Lexington Avenue train of five cars and a Ridgewood train of four cars. Arriving from the Manhattan side, they drew into the station simultaneously, one on each side of the terminal platform, just before going out upon the elevated tracks, which converge there into one. Both stopped to discharge and receive passengers.

The switchman gave a signal, and both motormen put on power and started together. Seeing that a collision was about to occur, both motormen put on the brakes, but before either could stop the trains reached the converging point of the two tracks and crashed together.

The Lexington Avenue motor car was struck in the middle by the Ridgewood motor car and thrown off its trucks and partly upon the tracks adjoining. The Ridgewood car rebounded and also left its trucks and started to fall to adjoining tracks, but was held back by the cars behind it. It leaned over until it was half off and half on the tracks.

Immediately there was great excitement. Men began to yell and women to scream. Women and girls fainted, while others rushed for the doors. Some of them jumped, but others, finding that the real danger had passed, returned to the cars and advised everybody to retire to the cars behind or get on the station. This was happening on both trains when the noise attracted the police, who, without stopping to investigate, called for ambulances from the Brooklyn Hospital.

Surgeons who soon arrived upon the scene found that William R. Converse of 354 Gates Avenue and Frank Arnold of 983 Jamaica Avenue were the only persons who had been seriously injured. Both were bruised and crushed about the face and shoulders. Their injuries were dressed and they were able to go to their homes unattended.

The windows of both the motor cars were smashed and there were bloodstains in several places in both cars, but the physicians were unable to find any one else who was cut seriously enough to demand medical attention.

The twenty or more women who had fainted had all recovered and were removed to other cars or the station platform before the doctors arrived.

A wrecking crew was on the scene in ten minutes, and work was begun righting the wrecked cars. Passengers on both trains were gathered on the platform and got transfer tickets to the trolley lines.

It was almost two hours, however, before the two wrecked cars had been lifted back upon their trucks and pushed out of the way. Then the elevated traffic across the bridge was resumed.

James Colton of 88 Drew Avenue, Union Course, motorman of the Lexington Avenue train, said after the accident that he was sure that the signal given by the switchman was for his train to start. Charles Boppell of 44 Clay Street, Ridgewood, motorman of the Ridgewood train, said he was equally positive that the signal meant for him to go ahead.

The switchman said that there could be no doubt that he had given the signal for the Lexington Avenue train to pull out, and that the mistake had been made by the Ridgewood motorman. He said that tests had been made to put both signals on at once at the station, and that a simultaneous signal had been found impossible.

The switchman said that when he saw the Ridgewood train coming out of the station he tried to throw it over to another track, but that it was too late to do so. The police made no arrests.

A McADOO TUNNEL PURCHASE.

The purchase of real estate at a new point, for the McAdoo tunnel enterprise, was revealed yesterday when Ross A. Mackey took title to the property at the northeast corner of Sixth Avenue and Ninth Street, with frontages of 46 feet on the avenue and 98 feet on the street. Mr. Mackey has taken title to nearly all of the real estate acquired by the McAdoo company both at its downtown terminal at Cortlandt and Church Streets and at Sixth Avenue and Thirty-second Street.

The purchase of this Sixth Avenue corner is said not to be part of any extensive buying campaign at that point. The plot will probably be used for a shaft to facilitate the building of the tunnel and afterward to provide entrances to a station, all of which entrances on this line must be provided through private property and not in the sidewalk space.

This particular corner will be an important point in the McAdoo tunnel system uptown, being the junction of the Sixth Avenue line, the proposed route through Ninth Street to the Bible House, and that down Christopher Street to connect with the tunnel under the Hudson at Morton Street. The sale of the property was negotiated by Horace S. Ely & Co., for Mary T. Grace, as executor. No consideration was stated in the deed.

PRESIDENT HEARS RATE PLANS

Nelson and Mallory Discuss Proposed Amendments with Him.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Aside from some significant conferences, there was no visible sign of progress with the Rate bill to-day. Senator Nelson of Minnesota had a long talk with the President about the Bailey amendment against injunctions, and advised the President not to give his sanction to it as a basis of compromise. The President was accordingly quoted all day as favoring other amendments that have hardly been heard of up to this time.

The first of these is proposed by Senator Mallory of Florida. It provides that when a rate made by the Inter-State Commerce Commission is not compensatory the carrier may go into the Circuit Court and ask for an injunction, but there can be no interlocutory injunction temporarily suspending a rate made by the commission. In other words, there can be an injunction, but only on the merits, and not for the purpose of delay. The Mallory plan is a simple and direct one, and the President was astonished that he had not had his attention called to it before.

Another tentative amendment discussed by the President with Mr. Nelson and reported to be approved by Mr. Roosevelt, was the proposition offered by Senator Simmons of North Carolina. This is in effect a court review somewhat similar to that of the Mallory amendment, only it contains more details and limitations. The carrier must apply to a Circuit Court within fifteen days after the commission's rate is promulgated for an order to restrain the enforcement of the rate. The commission has ten days in which to make answer.

GORDON BELL CAUSES ARREST

Vice President of S. P. C. A. Stops Driver of a Feeble Horse.

Gordon Knox Bell, a Vice President of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, was driving in an automobile with his wife to his home at 58 East Seventy-second Street yesterday afternoon, when he saw a broken-down horse painfully drawing a cart full of coal in Park Avenue, near Seventy-first Street. Israel Dunsky, the owner of the horse and cart, was trying to help the beast up the hill toward Seventy-first Street by pushing at the tailboard.

"That animal is unfit to be worked!" cried Mr. Bell, jumping out of his auto and stopping Dunsky.

"No understand," returned the owner.

"Well, that animal is going to be cured or killed," said Mr. Bell, and he directed Dunsky to drive off Park Avenue into Seventy-first Street near Paul Morton's house. When the horse came to a standstill it dropped from exhaustion. Mrs. Bell telephoned to the society for an agent. Then she got some water and bran and tried to feed the horse, but it was too far gone to eat. Then Samuel Bogen, an agent for the society, arrived.

"I think you ought to shoot the horse," advised Mr. Bell.

"I don't want it shot," remonstrated Dunsky. Bogen killed the animal, however. Dunsky was locked up at the East Sixty-seventh Street Station on a charge of cruelty to animals.

A RAINY EASTER EXPECTED.

Weather Men Look for Lower Temperatures and Showers.

"The weather will be fair Easter Sunday," says the Washington weather man, "except in the Atlantic States generally." That the exception takes New York within its damp prediction is affirmed by the local weather man, who declares that it will begin to cloud up to-day to give warning, will rain to-night to show that it means business, and will continue to shower on Easter Sunday to show that when it begins a thing it keeps it up.

It will also be comforting to know that it will not only rain to-night and to-morrow, but that the brisk winds will shift from the south to the southwest, whereupon Sunday the mercury will fall and light garments will be uncomfortable, even if rain does not fall all Easter Day.

The Washington weather man thinks that it will bring comfort to the heart of New York to know the preliminaries leading up to the predicted coolness and dampness of Easter Sunday in this city. Well, then, the Western storm has moved north-northeastward since Thursday night. It was central last night over Southeast Minnesota, but at least a part of it will get into New York to-day and to-night. It is not expected to leave until after Easter.

TEN DEER ARE POISONED.

Part of Herd in West Orange Killed—State Authorities Investigate.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., April 13.—Ten of a herd of thirty-eight valuable deer which were kept in the fine game preserve of John Dane, Jr., in the St. Cloud section of West Orange, have been poisoned, and the State Fish and Game Commission has taken the matter up.

The deer were found dead at the lodge on Sunday. No analysis has been made as yet to find what poison was used. The animals were of the French fallow and Indian hog species, and were valued at about $2,500.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 13.—The campaign against the loan has had the effect of reducing the amount and lowering the price of issue.

According to the present arrangements the total will not exceed $400,000,000, of which $160,000,000 will be placed in France and a like amount in Russia, while the remaining $80,000,000 will be divided between London, Brussels, Amsterdam, Vienna, Budapest, and Prague.

PARIS, April 13.—Negotiations in regard to the Russian loan are progressing.

It has been practically decided that the issue price shall be about 88.

EXPLOSION MAY COST INVENTOR HIS LIFE

He Was Trying His New Explosive When It Blew Up.

LIKELY TO LOSE HIS SIGHT

Friends Say Government Offered Prof. Wurtenberger $1,000,000 for His Invention, if He Would Perfect It.

While experimenting last night at his laboratory in East Chester, near Mount Vernon, Prof. Frantz Wurtenberger, the inventor of a new explosive said to be twenty times more powerful than dynamite, was probably mortally injured by an explosion. The professor was hurried to the Mount Vernon Hospital, where it was found that his face and arms were terribly burned, and the hair completely burned from his head. The physicians say that if he survives he is likely to lose his sight.

The laboratory, on account of the dangerous experiments conducted there, is located in a desolate place in the salt meadows, two miles from East Chester. The inventor was alone when the explosion occurred, and he raced up and down the room shrieking with pain for fully an hour before medical aid could be obtained.

J. L. Creider, Division Engineer of the New York, Westchester & Boston Railway, was the first person to reach the laboratory. He found the inventor rushing about, calling madly for help. His ears were nearly burned off, while his clothes had been stripped off from the waist up by the force of the explosion.

Mr. Creider ran to the nearest telephone and called up Dr. Van Denberg of Mount Vernon. He also got an ambulance, and after considerable delay the suffering man was taken to the hospital, where Drs. Shipman and Sinnott went to work over him.

Prof. Wurtenberger was conscious, but suffered such agony that he could give no account of the accident. Two months ago he gave a demonstration of his explosive for the United States Government and the officials of the New York, Westchester & Boston Railroad at the railroad's excavations a short distance from his laboratory. At that time about thirty chemists were present, and most of them thought the demonstration most successful.

It is said that the Government officials wanted Prof. Wurtenberger to perfect his invention so as to have the explosive touched off by an electric spark instead of a fuse, and assured him that if he could accomplish this the Government would pay him $1,000,000 for the formula of the explosive. Prof. Wurtenberger is believed to have been working with the electric spark when the accident occurred.

It has been learned that he has been almost constantly in his laboratory since the visit of the Government experts, and from what he recently told his intimate friends it appears that he thought he had discovered a way of setting off the new explosive by means of the spark.

It is generally understood that prominent officials of the New York, Westchester & Boston Railroad were backing the professor in his experiments. These officials were reticent to-night. They said that the explosion was caused by igniting a varnish compound with which the inventor was experimenting by means of an electric spark.

Prof. Wurtenberger, his friends say, realized that the first test of the electric spark might result in his death, but rather than give up his life work he decided to go ahead. These friends declared that he had an idea his explosive would revolutionize the warfare of the world.

BEER AND TECHNOLOGY.

They Get Mixed at Pittsburg, and Carnegie Trustees Are Stirred.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, April 13.—A Pittsburg brewer has become a thorn in the flesh of the Carnegie Technology School Trustees, and unless he changes the name of a brand of new beer, which he has put on the market, the $10,000,000 technological school, Mr. Carnegie's gift to Pittsburg, may change its name.

In the street cars and on the hillsides there has lately been blazoned signs reading "Drink Tech Beer." Around the words, too, there appears a real Scotch plaid, and accompanying both is an explanation that the beverage hereby offered is the acme of scientific beer making.

While it has been considered something of a joke by most of the citizens, the staid Technology School Trustees do not consider it so. They have taken it seriously, and it is understood have consulted Mr. Carnegie about it, and something is about to be done. William McConway, head of the Board of Trustees of the Technology School, held several conferences with the thousand students, and suggested that each and every student write a personal letter to the brewer asking him to change the name of his beer. As a result the brewer is getting more letters than he can read, but he is still making "Tech beer."

ENGLISHMAN A SUICIDE.

George Pryor Shoots Himself—Parents Said to be Wealthy.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., April 13.—The body of George Pryor was found in a road five miles from here this morning.

Pryor came to America from England about five years ago. At that time he said his parents lived in England and were wealthy, but that he had had trouble with them and had left home. He was well educated and refined. He worked at Thompson Ridge until two years ago, when he went to New York, and friends supposed he had become reconciled with his parents and had returned to England.

Last Thursday he came here from New York, and to-day he went out into the country and shot himself. He was about 25 years old.

Three Pigeons from Two Eggs.

Special to The New York Times.

ORANGE, N. J., April 13.—Harry Beatty, a pigeon fancier of Washington, Warren County, recently placed two eggs under one of his homing birds.

One of the eggs was somewhat large, and was evidently double-yolked, for two birds were hatched from it.

The pigeon twins are both active and perfectly formed. One is a trifle larger than the other. Three birds from a sitting of two eggs is a return without precedent in pigeon raising.

ALEXANDER HAS A RELAPSE.

Stricken in Sanitarium, but Was Better Yesterday.

Special to The New York Times.

DEERFIELD, Mass., April 13.—James W. Alexander, ex-President of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, has suffered a relapse in the sanitarium in this town, to which he returned after an operation in New York.

Mr. Alexander has been in feeble health ever since his return, and yesterday he had a severe attack of heart trouble.

The matron of the sanitarium, Mrs. Mulhall, reports that he was better to-day, and that she does not expect a recurrence of the attack.

KING EDWARD IN ACCIDENT.

His Carriage Collides with a Cart—Several Peasants Hurt.

LONDON, Saturday, April 14.—Telegraphing from Corfu, a correspondent of The Standard says:

"A carriage in which were King Edward and Queen Alexandra collided with a cart in which were a number of drunken peasants.

"The royal carriage was not damaged, but several of the peasants were injured. The King ordered the doctor of the British flagship to attend them."

ROOSEVELT WEAK—STONE.

Missouri Senator Will Not Swell the President's Vanity.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 13.—At a banquet held to-night by the Democratic State Press Association, Senator William J. Stone said President Roosevelt's Administration ought not to inspire Democratic adulation.

"Although obtrusive, audacious, and spectacular," he added, "Roosevelt's career, as I view it, has been signalized by weakness, not strength; by vacillation, not steadfastness; by vainglory, not solid worth.

"For whatever he may do that is right give credit. I am neither for him nor against him; I simply take him for what he is. I will support him when he is right, but I shall not court him with blandishments, nor swell his vanity by blowing upon him the incense of flattery."

HANNA COUSINS TO WED.

Miss Claire Hanna to be the Bride of Howard M. Hanna, Jr.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, April 13.—Miss Claire Hanna, daughter of L. C. Hanna and niece of the late Senator Hanna, and Howard M. Hanna, Jr., her cousin and son of H. M. Hanna, are to be married in June. To avoid the Ohio law prohibiting the marriage of first cousins it is probable that the wedding will take place in Thomasville, Ga.

Miss Hanna and her cousin were playmates in childhood and for years have been devoted to each other, though even their families did not suspect an engagement until the young couple broke the news. It is said the match met with parental objection, but both the young folk are of age and wealthy in their own right.

MRS. DEPEW RETURNING?

Reported Aboard the Celtic, Due To-day—Depew Surely Ill, Says Platt.

It was reported yesterday that Mrs. Chauncey M. Depew was one of the passengers on the White Star liner Celtic, which is due to-day. Mrs. Depew has been spending the Winter abroad for the benefit of her health. Senator Depew is at Scarborough-on-the-Hudson.

Senator T. C. Platt, who has been in this city for the last few days on private business, saw reporters at the Hotel Gotham last night and said that he would return to Washington to-day. The Senator said that he had just received a letter from Senator Depew. He added that Senator Depew was a sick man, and would not be able to take his seat in the Senate this session.

ROCKEFELLERS IN SADDLE.

John D., Jr., and Percy A. Riding Horseback to Williamstown, Mass.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., April 13.—John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Percy A. Rockefeller arrived in Lenox last evening on a horseback trip from Tarrytown, N. Y., to Williamstown. The roads are in terrible condition because of the frost coming out of the ground, and their mustangs were tired out when they arrived in Lenox to-night.

The trip is a pleasure jaunt. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., rode over the route last Fall with a companion, and is making another trip for recreation. Both riders were interested in the arrival of Count De Lavaulx and party at the Curtis Hotel to-night, and they may remain over in Pittsfield for the balloon ascension.

PLATT AGAINST THEM ALL.

Had a Candidate for Odell's Place, but Was Scolded Out.

Senator Thomas C. Platt was in New York yesterday. Asked his attitude in the fight to oust ex-Gov. Odell from the chairmanship of the Republican State Committee, he said:

"I know nothing about it except what I have been told and what I have read in the papers. I am told that Gov. Higgins and his friends will call a meeting after the Legislature adjourns with this object in view. I am not a party to the conference and I am not beholden to it. I have no candidate for the place. I did have one in the person of Congressman J. W. Dwight, but I was scolded out of that. As things now stand, I am against every candidate named so far."

BOY UNDER CAR WAS CALM.

"Keep an Eye on Me Ball," He Begged Ambulance Surgeon.

Little Abraham Fineberg, 4 years old, displayed so much courage yesterday afternoon when he lay pinned under a Twenty-third Street Ferry car, at the corner of Eighteenth Street and Avenue A, that Dr. White of Bellevue, who helped to get him out, was moved to exclaim:

"Well, you are the nerviest little chap!"

Abraham, who lives at 276 Avenue A, was playing ball in the street when the car struck him, knocking him down and pinning him under the front part of the running gear. His mother, Mrs. Sadie Fineberg, was among those who ran to his assistance. Dr. White crawled under the car to see how badly the little chap was hurt.

"Say," said Abraham, "keep an eye on me ball. I don't want to lose it."

The boy had a few bruises, but will be out to-day again.

KAISER IS FURIOUS WITH ITALIAN ALLY

EXPECTED AID AT ALGECIRAS

Doesn't Even Send a Telegram of Condolence on the Vesuvius Catastrophe—His People Also Angry.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

VIENNA, April 13.—The German Emperor has sent the following telegram to Count Goluchowski, the Austro-Hungarian Minister for Foreign Affairs:

> At the moment when, with the consent of your most gracious sovereign, I am sending to Count Welsersheimb the Grand Cross of the Order of the Red Eagle in thanks for his successful efforts at Algeciras, I feel impelled to express to you from my heart sincere thanks for your unshakable support of my representatives, the fine deed of a true-hearted ally.
>
> You have proved yourself a brilliant second on the dueling ground, and you may be certain of a similar service in a similar case from me also.
>
> WILLIAM, IMP., REX.

The real addressee of the German Emperor's missive is not Count Goluchowski, but the King of Italy. The German offer of a similar service in a similar case is meant as a threat to Italy that if Austria-Hungary should demand in regard to Macedonia a position analogous to that of France in regard to Morocco Germany would lend a willing hand, repaying Italy for her "treachery" toward German mischief-making at Algeciras.

The faithful pro-German Neue Freie Presse, commenting on the Kaiser's telegram this evening, points out that people in Berlin have no reason to send the same expressions of gratitude to Rome as to Vienna, and actually draws attention to the circumstance that neither the German Emperor nor the Berlin Municipality has sent a telegram of condolence to Italy in connection with the Vesuvius catastrophe, as though Vesuvius were a German machine for chastising a wayward ally.

It will be interesting to observe how the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Office, which has always maintained that the action of Count Welserheimb was in no sense German, but purely Austro-Hungarian action, will defend itself against the humiliating imputation of the German Emperor.

BERLIN, April 13.—It is not Russia only who is on Germany's black books as a result of the Algeciras Conference. Deep resentment is felt toward Italy for the part she took in the conference.

The Neueste Nachrichten to-day calls attention to the "strange silence" in the German press in regard to the calamity caused by the eruption of Vesuvius. It remarks that not a hand is raised in Germany to offer aid to the victims of the eruption, which contrasts strangely with the liberal German contributions for the sufferers from the earthquakes in Calabria. The Neueste Nachrichten adds:

"The silence of the press is significant, and the wires are not, as usual, busy with messages of sympathy from the Kaiser.

"We aided the victims at Courrières liberally, for with France we have no political connections, and France had every reason to oppose us in the Moroccan Conference. Italy, on the other hand, is supposed to be our ally."

There is no doubt that German anger toward Italy is so great as to make it likely that in the near future the present nominal alignment of the powers will be altered. A few days ago the Vossische Zeitung, which is usually a conservative paper, said:

"Italy sent to Algeciras the author of the Franco-Italian rapprochement and furnished an instance which the world will never forget of the most abject abandonment of the sincerity and loyalty which an ally should give. Those days at Algeciras will be remembered, and it is likely that the time will come when it will be well for us to recall how Italy has shown her gratitude for the visit of the Kaiser to Rome, where he was the first European monarch to recognize by a memorable toast in the Quirinal the 'intangibility' of the Italian capital."

At the same time the Vossische Zeitung declared that Russia at Algeciras had rewarded Germany's friendly attitude during the Russo-Japanese war by instructing her delegates to give their cordial support to France.

AN ANGLO-RUSSIAN ENTENTE.

Britain Pushing the Negotiations—Directed Against Germany.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 13.—Great Britain has begun vigorously to press negotiations for an Anglo-Russian entente, with the purpose of completing the triple alliance of Great Britain, France, and Russia against Germany, which has long been the aim of British policy.

The developments at the Algeciras Conference, where Great Britain, France, and Russia acted in unison, and the participation of English bankers in the big Russian loan, furnish a particularly favorable moment, and Great Britain is striking while the iron is hot. Besides, the British Government has recently given Russia proof of its desire to settle outstanding difficulties by inducing English bankers not to take the Persian loan on the ground that it might be regarded as prejudicial to Russian interests.

The sentiment here in favor of the entente has been aided by the declination of Germany to participate in the Russian loan and by publications in Russia hostile to Germany which have been directly inspired from British sources. Count Lamsdorff, and latterly Premier Witte, have favored an Anglo-Russian entente, and its consummation is regarded as practically certain. The pourparlers between the two Governments have thus far only touched questions relating to the delimitation of respective spheres of influence, including the apportioning of railroad and banking concessions in Persia. Generally speaking, Great Britain wants the southern and Russia the northern half of that country.

When the Persian question is settled the questions relating to the Indian frontier, which constitute a source of possible misunderstanding, namely, the Afghan Pamirs and Tibet, will be resolved.

VESUVIUS IS CALMER, AND NAPLES REJOICES

People Thank God After a Hopeful Message from Matteucci.

5,000 REFUGEES IN THE CITY

Six Thousand Men Working with Feverish Activity to Remove the Ashes—King and Queen Depart.

NAPLES, April 13.—No better evidence of the improved condition of affairs in the section affected by the eruption of Mount Vesuvius can be presented than the following telegram from Director Matteucci, sent this evening from the observatory on the mountain:

"Last night and to-day the activity of Vesuvius and the agitation at the surface of the volcano sensibly diminished. Electric activity ceased to-day, and the discharge was less abundant. From the presumed formation of the crater and other indications, and if the news coming to me of the cessation of lava at Boso Trecase is true, I predict with reserve that in two or three days calm will reign."

The publication of this dispatch has brought joy to the people, and to-night's Good Friday services at the churches, which were attended by large congregations, took the form of fervent thanksgiving for danger past.

Prof. Matteucci to-day climbed up Vesuvius to a point a long way above the observatory at the imminent risk of his life, and came to the conclusion that unless the conditions change radically there will be no further discharge of lava at present. He says that it is impossible to determine the quantity of sand in the crater, but as the cone has diminished considerably in height and the showers of cinders thrown out have been transformed into ashes, he believes that the end of the disturbance is near.

One of the handful of men who have braved the terrors of the situation at the observatory returned here this morning and gave an account of an interesting conversation which he had with Prof. Matteucci. The Professor said:

"Very little is known of the volcanic forces, so one can never safely predict what is going to happen. But I think I can with some confidence express the hope, based on my experience here, that the explosive period of the eruption has passed. It is impossible to make a positive statement to this effect, but the probabilities point to the calming down of the volcano. This, however, does not mean that its activity will entirely cease. Until the crater definitely assumes its new shape—that is to say, when the ridges have been smoothed down—there is a possibility of further disturbances.

"For the present the light wind blowing will in all probability carry the ashes in a direction which will leave Naples free from further annoyance of this nature, and, as it is, the ill wind is blowing good to other places, for ashes are the best fertilizer it is possible to use. It is merely a question just now of having too much of a good thing."

Conditions at Naples were so much better to-day that the people were almost incredulous of the tales of terror told by those who had escaped from the towns, villages, and country further within the zone of devastation. The weather was fine, and the wind had shifted so that the clouds of ashes from the volcano, instead of enveloping Naples, were carried in the direction of Caserta. The apprehensions of the populace gave place to a smiling confidence, in which there was no reflection of the terror which had prevailed for the past week.

Not only was the sun shining brightly, but the air was clear of ashes and invigorating, with the result that automobile coats and goggles, the ash-storm costume, were replaced by the usual gay-colored apparel, people drove about in open carriages, and so much color had returned to the surroundings that the grayness of the buildings and ash-covered trees made a pleasant contrast to the sapphire-tinted sea.

The reputation of the Neapolitans for laziness is in striking contrast with the feverish activity displayed everywhere here now. The hours seem too short for what must be done. Nearly six thousand people are employed in clearing the roofs and main thoroughfares of ashes. Gangs of men are engaged in piling the ashes in the middle of the narrow streets.

King Victor Emmanuel and Queen Helena left Naples to-day, and Premier Sonnino and Finance Minister Sallandra, who had been supervising the relief measures, also departed for Rome.

Queen Helena, before leaving Naples, revisited the quarters occupied by the refugees and made large donations to the sufferers. Among her gifts was a quantity of linen of all sorts for which she paid $10,000.

Nearly 5,000 refugees are already housed here, and the number is rapidly increasing. In fact, all the buildings available for the accommodation of the fugitives are crowded, and if many more people seek shelter here it will be necessary to place them in army tents. The municipal and military authorities have already taken steps to accommodate a large number of people in this manner.

Naples is fast forgetting its alarm, but in other quarters there is no escaping from the awful evidences of the volcano's fury. At Bosco Trecase the exhumation of the dead is being carried on by soldiers, who are unable to work more than an hour at a time. Many of the bodies are unrecognizable, while others are but little disfigured. As quickly as possible they are buried in quicklime. None but those engaged in the work of recovering the corpses is permitted in the vicinity.

The Associated Press correspondent traveled to-day in the belt over which ashes continue to fall. This now lies to the north of Naples. At Rome there was sunshine, but twenty miles south a thin veil of smoke made near-by mountains dimly visible and their snow peaks were soiled and sooty. The zone of semi-obscurity began twenty-five miles above Naples. Here there was an uncanny phenomenon. The sun, though shining, was invisible. Its light seemed to come through smoked glass, shedding a sickly glare upon whitened vegetation.

Everything was covered with a thin white powder. Pretty white villas were daubed and dripping with mud, and people were busy on the roofs shoveling off the ashes. The crowds at the stations resembled millers, their clothing covered with powder. The campania presents the appearance of a Dakota prairie after a blizzard, except that everything is gray instead of white. The ashes lie in drifts knee deep. Villas, trees, and churches have been beaten with gray mud on the sides exposed to the volcanic storm.

Ten miles north of Naples the train enters an area of semi-night. Billows of thick smoke roll from the direction of the mountain. The railway telegraph poles become invisible twenty feet away. The train moves with extreme precaution to avoid collision. Breathing is difficult, and the smoke makes the eyes water. This obscurity lasts until a short distance north of Naples, where the sky clears and normal conditions are resumed.

The volcano is hidden behind a thick curtain of smoke, which rises from the crater and then spreads and falls, enveloping a vast circle in semi-darkness. Naples is just beyond this circle.

Vesuvius now belies all popular pictures, which represent the monster clearly outlined against the sky, vomiting smoke and ashes by day and fire by night. To-day not the slightest outline was visible of the crater, crest, or foothills, all being swallowed up in a dense black pall. There is the same obscurity to-night, unrelieved by flashes or reflected light such as are seen during quieter periods.

After the last great eruption, which occurred in 1872, the land covered by cinders did not produce crops for seven years, and the loss averaged $20,000,000 yearly. It is believed that this time it will take ten years to bring the land under cultivation again.

The Duke of the Abruzzi arrived to-day in his motor car. He had passed through the ash belt and was hardly recognizable, being covered with ashes and cinders. He will soon sail on his tour of exploration in Africa.

The theatrical managers of the whole city have decided to give a benefit at the Metropolitan Opera House on Monday afternoon, April 23. The entire receipts will be turned over to the proper authorities for the relief of those who suffered in Italy through the eruption of Vesuvius.

Nearly every player of prominence who happens to be appearing in or near this city on April 23 will be asked to lend his assistance in making the programme attractive. The committee in charge consists of Daniel Frohman, Al. Hayman, Heinrich Conried, and Marc Klaw. Mr. Conried has given the use of the Metropolitan Opera House and its attachés. The sale of seats will open on Monday at the box office of the Opera House.

CASTRO NEEDS A REST.

It Is Understood He Will Resume the Presidency in Three Months.

CARACAS, Tuesday, April 10, via WILLEMSTAD, April 13.—Gen. Castro yesterday transferred the Presidency of Venezuela to Vice President Gomez.

In an address which he made on that occasion Gen. Castro said that his retirement was due to ill-health, but he did not say whether it was temporary or permanent. It is generally understood, however, that his retirement will last about three months. In the course of his remarks Gen. Castro said:

"Our present international position is completely defined and cleared up and leads us to hope that everything will proceed with the utmost harmony on the foundation of mutual respect and consideration for our rights, as universally recognized, and that all pending matters will necessarily be settled by some friendly arrangement or by arbitration, the last resort of civilization.

"The financial situation of Venezuela cannot be more flattering. It is known in Venezuela and abroad that all Venezuela's engagements are religiously carried out."

As a result of Gen. Castro's retirement the Cabinet has resigned.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—President Castro's temporary retirement has no political significance, so far as is known, according to a dispatch received by the State Department to-day from W. W. Russell, Minister to Venezuela.

Mr. Russell's dispatch, dated Caracas, April 10, states that Castro says he is exhausted physically, and desires to take a rest. He is going to La Victoria.

HELPED ARREST HIMSELF.

Hotel Man Lost Policeman, but Gave Himself Up on Smoke Charge.

George W. Sweeney, proprietor of the Victoria Hotel, Broadway and Twenty-seventh Street, and President of the Hotel Men's Association of America, was arrested last evening by Policeman Ahles of the Health squad, on the charge of violating the smoke ordinance. On the policeman's consent, Mr. Sweeney went up to the Marlborough Hotel to get Henry Tierney, his partner in that hotel, to give his bail. He left Ahles waiting for him at Sixth Avenue and Thirtieth Street.

Mr. Sweney came back by way of Seventh Avenue with Mr. Tierney. Consequently Ahles waited in vain for his prisoner to return. Despairing at last of Mr. Sweeney coming back that way, and seeing an automobile in front of the Tenderloin Station, he went in to investigate. He found Mr. Sweney making a prisoner of himself.

"Captain, I am pinched," said the hotel man to Capt. Hodgins.

"For what?" he was asked.

"For smoking."

"Stop your kiddin' now, and tell me," demanded Capt. Hodgins, sitting up straight.

"Sure, for smoking soft coal, and here comes the officer that pinched me." He was bailed out immediately by Mr. Tierney.

Policeman McLaughlin of the Health Squad arrested two others early last night on a smoke charge. Gustav Tall, chief engineer in the W. & J. Sloane Building, at 884 Broadway, was bailed out by Arthur E. Fisher, cashier at the Sloane store. Peter Testera, chief engineer of the Knickerbocker Building, at Fifth Avenue and Fifteenth Street, was bailed out by Joseph J. Rothchild of the Rothchild Company, which owns the building.

In the West Side Court Jacob Rothschild, owner of the Hotel Majestic, at Seventy-second Street and Central Park West, was held in $200 bail for trial on a smoke charge. Edgar C. McCall of 318 West Fifty-seventh Street, Assistant Superintendent of a flax factory at Fifty-seventh Street and Eleventh Avenue, was also held for trial on a similar charge.

When Mr. Rothschild was awaiting arraignment he told the reporters that he had paid $500 to become a member of an association, and was told that in consequence his name would never appear in the newspapers. He could not remember the name of the association.

POISONED AFTER FUNERAL.

Two seven-year-old girls, Bella McClain, whose parents live at 227 India Street, Greenpoint, and Rosie Murphy, whose parents live at 226 India Street, were found unconscious last evening in the apartments of the late Mrs. Annie Reed, at 224 India Street. They were suffering from alcoholism. Mrs. Reed died Wednesday, and the funeral took place yesterday afternoon. The parents of both little ones went to the cemetery, leaving the children in the Reed apartments until their return. It was nearly 6 o'clock when they got back, to find the little girls insensible on the kitchen floor.

A policeman who was called in summoned an ambulance from the Williamsburg Hospital. Drs. Rarick and Doran responded and quickly diagnosed the cases as alcoholic coma. The doctors made every effort to save the lives of the two children, and finally succeeded in resuscitating the Murphy girl, but the McClain child could not be revived. She was hurried to the hospital, where her condition is critical.

HAWKINS TWICE ARRAIGNED.

Fined $15 for Carrying Pistol—Hearing on Blackmail Charge Adjourned.

Homer C. Hawkins, the young man who is charged with attempting to blackmail his relative, Louis R. Fuller, was arraigned in two courts in the Criminal Courts Building yesterday. He was fined $15 in the Court of Special Sessions for carrying concealed weapons and was before Magistrate Whitman in the Tombs Court on the blackmail charge.

The hearing was adjourned on Thursday after Fuller had been asked by counsel for Hawkins and had refused to answer this question: "Where were you born?"

Yesterday A. F. Gotthold, counsel for Fuller, said that as the examination of his client had taken the turn it had he would ask for an adjournment. Magistrate Whitman set down the case for May 8 in the Jefferson Market Court.

RUSSIAN SECRET AGENT IS SHADOWING GORKY

Czar's Spy Crossed on the Same Boat with the Author.

FOLLOWS HIM ABOUT HERE

A trusted agent of the Russian secret police is in this city at present, spending his Government's money, friends of Maxim Gorkey have learned, for the purpose of organizing an effective system of espionage on Gorky and his two fellow-revolutionists who are here to raise funds for the cause of the Russian revolutionists.

The agent in this city is one of the keenest members of the political police force employed by the Russian Government for the purpose of watching the doings of the enemies of the Czar beyond the borders of Russia itself. Until recently he was in charge of the intelligence department maintained by the Russian Government on the shores of Lake Geneva, in Switzerland, where the flower of the Russian intellectuals, under the protection of the Swiss Republic, are at present busy framing a constitution and a form of government for the Russian republic they hope to establish.

The Czar's spy crossed the Atlantic on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, the North German Lloyd steamship that brought Gorky to this country last Tuesday. Though he is a man who has contrived to make himself practically indispensable to the Russian Government, through the valuable services he has rendered, his extensive knowledge of the revolutionists and his resourcefulness, and while he ranks high in the secret political force, he came humbly in the second cabin and under a name different from that under which he was known on the Continent. He has managed to keep his place of residence in this city a secret so far.

Like most of the men in this branch of the service, the agent who came over with Gorky is an accomplished linguist. Besides his native Russian he speaks English, German, and French fluently. He followed the Russian writer during his recent journey through Southern Europe. Then for a while he dropped out of sight, but he took up the trail again when Gorky and his wife left Zürich, and he boarded the Kaiser when they went aboard at Cherbourg.

In this city the Russian spy does not boast his knowledge of Russian. On board the Kaiser he never used that language, though there were other Russians besides him in the second cabin. He mingled freely with the latter, but always used either German or French in talking with them.

Spy Awaited Gorky on the Pier.

Long before Gorky landed, the Russian, who traveled with very light baggage, had managed to get ashore and pass the Custom House officers. He was waiting at the gangway when Gorky came ashore with his wife and his adopted son, and when their carriage drove away the Czar's spy followed in another carriage. Since then he has been seen occasionally about the lobby of the Hotel Belleclaire, and is said even to have entered the apartments of the Russian writer as one in the endless procession of visitors who come and go every day.

It was on Wednesday evening that one of Gorky's friends became suspicious of the Russian spy, who, probably from a sense of security, was led into acts that were indiscreetly bold, and communicated his suspicions to some of the Russian writer's other friends in this city.

On Wednesday afternoon the secret agent, who is described as a man of about 35, of medium height, with a florid complexion and a small blonde moustache, was loitering about the lobby of the Hotel Belleclaire, keeping close to a group of reporters who were waiting to see the Russian author. Later in the day the same man turned up—this time with the bland announcement that he was the correspondent of a German newspaper—at 3 Fifth Avenue, the home of the A Club where, on that evening, Mark Twain and other American friends of the Russian cause, had gathered to launch the auxiliary movement in this country.

Later that night he appeared at a reception given in the honor of Gorky at the home of H. Gaylord Wilshire, 69 West Ninety-third Street. Mr. Wilshire on that evening kept practically open house. Many of his invitations had been sent out by telephone. He wished the Russian author to meet as many people who could be of use to him as possible, and did not personally know all of those bidden. In addition to this he had extended his welcome to reporters, and with many of these he was not personally acquainted.

So when, shortly after Gorky had come, the Russian Secret Agent, with his bland smile and his plausible manner, passed into the reception room, Mr. Wilshire extended his hand in greeting, and said:

"Pardon me, I don't think I have had the privilege of meeting you before."

The stranger gave a name and a pretext for receiving Mr. Wilshire's hospitality that was entirely plausible. He remained there until just before Gorky was about to take his leave. Although he bore himself very well and tactfully, a friend of Gorky and Mr. Wilshire became suspicious and later communicated his suspicions to the host. But by this time the man had already departed. He has been less conspicuous since.

Friends of the Russian author are at a loss to understand why the Czar's Government should subject him to any espionage while in this country, especially as he has made no secret of the purpose of his coming, and as the newspapers from day to day might be depended upon to record the doings of Gorky and the American friends of the Russian revolution.

Asked for a Report on Gorky.

Nevertheless, it was learned yesterday that a man who recently visited Russia and at that time met Gorky, and also came in contact with some Russian diplomats within the last week, has received two letters from one of the latter, attached to the Foreign Department at St. Petersburg, and formerly an attaché of the Russian Embassy at Washington, containing a semi-official request for a report on Gorky's doings in this country. The first of these letters arrived on the steamer that brought Gorky, and the other arrived two days later.

It was pointed out the only good that the Russian Government could do by having Gorky and his fellow-revolutionists watched would be to disclose any effort on their part to purchase arms in this country and have them shipped from an American port for the use of the Russian revolutionists. In that case the United States Government, if informed, would be compelled to step in and prevent the shipment. It is likely that if any such attempt was discovered the Russian revolutionists would be expelled from the United States.

But while such a plan may enter into the schemes of the revolutionists here, it is likely this would be managed in such a roundabout way that the Russian agents would have no opportunity of discovering it by dogging the footsteps of the revolutionists themselves. They are circumspect almost to a fault as a result of the system of espionage they have had to contend with in their own country for many years.

Both Dr. Tchaykoffsky and Ivan Narodny, who are members of the Military Revolutionists' Party in Russia, have been kept here under surveillance by private detectives, presumably in the pay of the Russian Government. Not long ago a peculiar burglary occurred at Avenue, where both these revolutionists live. The rooms of the Russians had been entered, but nothing of value in the house had been disturbed. The revolutionists are in constant communication with the underground movement in Russia, and possess papers and information of the revolutionist plans in Russia that would be of much value to the Czar's Government in its effort to forestall the projected revolution.

Gorky Will Go Back, He Says.

Gorky himself said yesterday that when he left Europe he was in no sense an exile.

"But, while nominally I am at liberty to return to Russia at any time, I have no doubt that I would be arrested and cast into prison the moment I set foot on Russian soil, especially after my utterances in the last few days. I shall not let that deter me, however. When the moment has come to return we will go back and brave the danger. But the time has not yet come."

The Russian author remarked, jokingly, that he had already been the Czar's guest and next-door neighbor, so to speak, when he enjoyed his hospitality in the fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul, in the Russian capital. This fortress is opposite the Winter Palace.

Gorky spent a quiet day at his hotel yesterday, dividing his time between visitors and literary work. One of his callers was Edwin Markham. The Jewish "Bund" had arranged a reception at the Murray Hill Lyceum in his honor last night, but Gorky was indisposed and sent word that he could not attend. He intends to remain indoors for the rest of the week.

> W. D. Haywood and Charles Moyer, County Jail, Caldwell, Idaho:
> Greetings to you, my brother Socialists. Courage! The day of justice and deliverance for the oppressed of all the world is at hand. Ever fraternally yours. MAXIM GORKY.

In order that he might see for himself what manner of man is President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers, Gorky made an appointment yesterday with Mr. Mitchell for this afternoon at 2 o'clock. After the meeting Mr. Mitchell will leave this city for Indianapolis.

DEAD LINE ON MUTINEERS.

The Captain of the Steamer Hilarius Had Been Warned.

The voyage of the Houston liner Hilarius, in yesterday from the Argentine Republic, was one of the most trying a seaman ever experienced. Had it not been for a cool-headed skipper and a faithful crew, nine cattlemen, who signed on at Montevideo, would probably have captured the ship. Their plot was carefully made, and that it was frustrated was due to an American citizen named Nerses, who was working his way home.

The cattlemen, six Italians and three Spaniards, got mutiny in their heads soon after the Hilarius lost sight of the harbor of Montevideo, and as Nerses looked like an Italian and can speak that language fluently, the mutineers thought he was one of themselves and laid bare their scheme to him.

Nerses allowed the mutineers to think that he was in accord with them, and for the rest of the day remained with the plotters, listening to and agreeing with their plans for the morrow. When the sun went down he slipped up to Capt. Marshall's cabin and told him what he had heard.

The skipper called his officers and crew to his quarters, told them what was up, and, after giving each man a pistol and plenty of cartridges, told them exactly what they must do when the cattlemen came forward.

The next morning the mutineers went forward and demanded to see the Captain. The skipper was not long in appearing. Coming on deck he demanded to know the reason of the unexpected visit. The cattlemen would work no more, said Pietro, and added that unless the skipper acquiesced in their demands there would be trouble.

Capt. Marshall looked at the mutineers for a moment, and then, his eyes flashing defiance, stepped forward. In his hand he held a big piece of chalk, and leaning down he drew a line across the deck.

"See this line," he shouted. "It's a dead line, and if any of you men want to cross it, just try it. From this on three of my men—real men, too—will be on hand, and each of them will carry a gun, with orders to shoot the first man that tries to cross."

The cattlemen saw the skipper meant business, and, not caring to find out what kind of marksmen the three men who appeared on deck to do guard duty were, skulked back to their quarters.

There was no further trouble that day. The next day, however, the cattlemen made their second move. They went forward and demanded of the guards that they see the skipper.

"Nothing doing, and you had better get back where you belong, if you don't want to be ventilated," answered the officer in command of the guards, and the cattlement scampered back in quick time. In a few minutes they slipped out of the forecastle, sneaked behind the winches, and fired three shots at the guards. The guards returned the fire, and the cattlemen rushed back to the forecastle. From that time on things were lively on the Hilarius. Not a day passed but there was trouble. The skipper was master of the situation, but day and night there was shooting. Nobody was hit and the Hilarius steamed on her way.

On March 12 the Hilarius was abeam of Bahia, Brazil, and the crew, thoroughly weary of guard duty, suggested to the skipper that he put into that port and turn the mutineers over to the authorities. It meant a long delay, and the skipper said he couldn't do it. Instead, he dropped anchor near the city, and that night, as he had meant they should do, the cattlemen jumped overboard and swam ashore. The Hilarius proceeded on her voyage next day, and that night, for the first time in ten days, the officers and crew got some sleep.

WHY THE ALE DIDN'T COME.

Stranger in the Cellar Drank What He Could and Slept in the Rest.

A customer walked into the saloon of George Sauer at 2,020 Third Avenue yesterday morning.

"I'll have some ale," he said.

"Sure," answered Sauer, reaching for the spigot. He turned on the faucet, but there was no ale forthcoming.

"That's funny," he said, as he looked at the empty glass and then at the spigot. "I'll go downstairs and see what's the trouble." In the cellar he found that the pipes connecting the ale barrels with the spigot had been cut and that there was a pool of ale on the floor an inch deep. Looking over in a corner he saw a man doubled up in it asleep, who, when kicked into sensibility, began to grin.

"Scarsh me," lisped the stranger, and then he turned over to sleep again.

Policeman Shaw of the East 104th Street Station arrested him, and when he had him forcibly revived he said he was Harry Johnson of 2,651 Third Avenue. He was taken to the Harlem Court, helpless but joyous, and when Magistrate Cornell questioned him, all he could say was:

"I'm too full fer utt'rance."

Then he lapsed into sleep again. They took his photograph at Police Headquarters, believing that he intended to rob Sauer's place, but got too drunk to do so. Then they locked him up again for a hearing this morning.

TALK OF A GIANT BANK TO RULE MONEY RATES

dullness and money-plenty times to force the interest rate down to the minimum point. Then, when money gets scarce, you lend us the money at the steady rate and don't take advantage of the temporary tightness to squeeze out of us the highest rate you can get.'

Bankers Squeeze the Brokers.

"The condition of affairs now is such that the bankers squeeze the brokers—their best customers, by the way—to get even for the dull days when they cannot get enough interest to come out even on deposits from out of town. Banks all over the country send money to the New York banks to get 2 per cent. on it. If the money market is dull the New York banks cannot make use of those deposits in the ordinary course of trade. They can't lend it to merchants and they can't discount notes—for money is plentiful.

"The only place they can use it is on the Stock Exchange. We brokers supply a market for money every day in the year—we are the only steady and reliable customers of the banks. Then when a time of stringency comes, what do they do? They run rates up to 25, 50, 70, and 100 per cent. In December it went to 125 per cent. They make money out of us to recoup them for losses that would have been immeasurably greater if we had not been supplying them with a market. The way the money rates are manipulated on the floor of the Exchange is a scandal. Something must be done."

The general question of the utility in this country of a central bank similar to those of Europe has been taken up by the Special Committee on Currency Reform, appointed recently by the Chamber of Commerce. Questions were sent out this week by this committee to bankers throughout the United States. Some of them are as follows:

> Do you believe that a central note issuing bank similar to those in France, Germany, Austria-Hungary, and other countries in Europe with branches in leading cities and with the power to rediscount for National banks and State banking institutions, but not for individuals, would be a better solution of the present currency problem than a plan permitting all banks to issue notes against their resources?
>
> Would a central note issuing bank tend to diminish fluctuations in the rate of interest, to prevent recurring periods of monetary stringency, and to lessen the evils incident to financial crises?
>
> Should such a bank be made the fiscal agent of the Government in receiving Government funds and paying Treasury drafts as are the central note issuing banks of Europe?
>
> Would the operations of such a bank interfere unduly with the business of existing banking institutions, provided it dealt only with banks and not with individuals?

The bankers are asked to reply as promptly as possible.

WHISKERS CAUSE LAWSUIT.

Wigmaker Told Hairdresser Our Fashionable Women Couldn't Abide Them.

His personal objection to whiskers, and his alleged declaration that fashionable women in this city can't abide them when they adorn the chins of hairdressers, may cost William Hepner, a wigmaker, of 1,456 Broadway, $1,000. The trouble has reached the United States District Court, where the wigmaker appeared to undergo examination to determine whether suit for violation of the contract labor law should be begun against him. Commissioner Shields, a firm friend and advocate of whiskers, as everybody knows, presided at the preliminary hearing.

Assistant District Attorney Byrnes says that Hepner imported August Durand, a French hairdresser, from Belfast, Ireland. Hepner says he didn't. The penalty is $1,000.

The suit is based on Durand's testimony, which was given yesterday.

"I have dress ze hair in Ireland a dozen year," said Durand. "I have ze beard, c'est vrai, no more black now, because I am feefty year old. But ze Irish ladies object to ze beard? Non, m'sieur, non. Au contraire," and the little man smiled.

"I should say not. Why, here in New York, ladies, both young and old, rather admire whiskers—even when worn by a man much more than 50 years old. That, however, has nothing to do with the case. Proceed."

"I see ze 'ad' in ze paper," continued the little man more boldly, recognizing a friend in the Commissioner. "It say M'sieur Hepner weesh a hair dresser, French and incomparable, for $16 to $20 a week, and ze large commissions. I write. I get ze place, and I land here March 5.

"M'sieur Hepner turn up hees nose when he see me; feefty year old with whiskers! Helas! he will not employ me."

Durand went on to declare that Hepner told him his whiskers would tickle the necks of his customers, and that he would be a hindrance to his business. The little Frenchman took his whiskers to other hairdressing establishments. He told them he was an expert and that the waves and puffs and ripples he didn't know about weren't worth fixing on a lady's head. No use; his fifty years and whiskers barred him. He said he would have starved if it hadn't been for the French Consul, who took care of him and gave him a ticket to Belfast.

The taking of testimony closed with the cross-examination of Durand, and the suit against Hepner was instituted to recover the penalty.

PEACE HOVERS OVER ZION.

Dowie Disposed to Accept a Money Offer of the Insurgents.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 13. — Prospects for peace between John Alexander Dowie and the rebellious Voliva forces at Zion City assumed a brighter aspect to-day. Both sides appeared willing to compromise.

Dowie is willing to turn over to a Board of Trustees all the property interests in Zion City, but insists that the property must first be transferred back to him, without reservation, by Deacon Alexander Granger. In consideration of this "concession" on the part of the deposed apostle, the insurgent forces under the leadership of Voliva are ready to guarantee to Dowie 5 per cent. of all the property valuation, after all debts have been paid. This would give him, in round numbers, $1,000,000, taking his valuation of the property as a basis. They are also willing that he shall return to Zion City and to occupy Shiloh cottage, but he is not to insist on the excommunication of Voliva.

The peace negotiations took place yesterday in Chicago between the attorneys for Dowie and Voliva. They will be resumed to-morrow morning. To-day Dowie's attorneys filed an instrument in Waukegan formally revoking the power of attorney obtained by Voliva from the First Apostle.

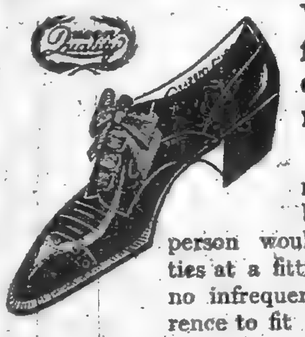
Smart and stylish Easter footwear.

WE ARE prepared for the largest shoe business in our history. Queen Quality low shoes are carried in forty individual New York styles—designed with particular care to meet the most critical exactions.



While the women of New York care as little for the cost of their footwear, as in other cities perhaps, it is remarkable to hear their ethusiastic praise. Our patrons are those to whom price is of less moment than style, comfort and fitting quality.

It is a fact undisputed in commercial circles, "The nimble sixpence is better than the slow shilling." Where a person would ordinarily buy one or two pairs of ties at a fitting, it is no infrequent occurrence to fit four, five or six pairs to one customer, therefore it is good judgment to produce in large quantities—sell at close margins, in greater volume.

HOUSE AFTER ROW CUTS SPEECH OUT OF RECORD

CALLED MEAN BY GOLDFOGLE

Immigrant Girl's Case Cause of a Fierce General Quarrel Which the Speaker Ends with a Joke.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—There was a bitter discussion in the House to-day, in which charges of improper conduct were made against two members, Bennet of New York and Hopkins of Kentucky. Hopkins got the worst of it, for the House voted by 165 to 91 to expunge a speech of his from The Record; but charges of deceit were made against Bennet, and Mr. Williams, the minority leader, declared that the House ought to consider a motion for expulsion. In the course of the debate Williams practically gave the lie to Dalzell.

Hopkins and Bennet, who are on opposite sides of the immigration question, have for some time been firing speeches at each other, which have grown warmer all the time. During Hopkins's last speech Bennet sought to have him called to order for unparliamentary language because he had said that Bennet's statements were not true. The incident apparently irritated Hopkins, who under leave to print extended his remarks in The Record. In his speech, which was delivered Tuesday and printed with its extensions to-day, Hopkins charges Bennet with having concealed from the House the facts in the case of Fannie Diner and intimates that he is in the employ of the steamship companies.

Fannie Diner was an immigrant from Russia, who was detained by the immigration authorities at New York. Bennet championed a bill to let her in. The charge against him is that he induced the House to consider this bill by concealing the fact that the girl was an idiot, and thus properly barred by the immigration officers.

Mr. Gardner of Massachusetts started the fuss by moving the expunging from The Record of so much of Hopkins's speech as reflected on Bennet.

Mr. Goldfogle of New York, who was also reflected upon in Hopkins's printed speech, declared that the Kentuckian had taken advantage of the leave to print to insert in The Record remarks about him which were "unqualifiedly false." "It was the meanest speech I ever heard," he declared, unmindful of the Speaker's gavel rapping him to order. "While the gentleman from Kentucky endeavored to frame his remarks to show that he was opposed only to the admission of undesirable aliens, yet any one reading his speech might readily observe that there ran through it the spirit of a bigot and a Know-Nothing."

Mr. James of Kentucky promptly called Goldfogle to order, and demanded that his words be taken down. The Speaker admonished the New York man sharply. Mr. Goldfogle apologized for the words he had used, and then proceeded:

"I have looked up the statistics. They show that the illiteracy in the gentleman's district (Mr. Hopkins's) was over 17 per cent. He stated to me, however, that the percentage was not now so great. In other words, the percentage was 17 per cent. when the gentleman was School Commissioner in Kentucky, but since he came to Congress the percentage of illiteracy in his district has decreased."

The House laughed at this. Then Mr. Williams of Mississippi took the floor.

"So far," said he, "from this House being called upon to consider a resolution to expunge certain remarks by the gentleman from Kentucky, it ought to be called upon to consider a resolution to expel the gentleman from New York (Mr. Bennet) for having acted in bad faith with his colleagues on this floor. A good deal of legislation on this floor takes place on honor. The question is, Was or was not this House deceived? There are two forms of deception, affirmative and negative. The gentleman from New York before the committee said this girl was an idiot, and when the bill came before the House and he was asked to explain it, by silence, which is the worst form of deception, he did not communicate this fact to this House."

"How do you know he knew she was an idiot?" demanded Gardner.

"By his own testimony before the committee," responded Williams.

Hopkins withdrew his remarks about Goldfogle, saying that they were in jest and he was sorry Goldfogle did not like them, but he stood by all he had said about Bennet. He wanted to reiterate his opinion of Bennet.

Leader Payne and Mr. Dalzell immediately objected, but Hopkins obtained the floor on a motion. He said the Diner girl shrank from the light, indicating that she had been kept in a dungeon; that there were deep sores on her legs, showing that she had been shackled; that instead of hands she had claws, and that the only way she could eat her food was by jamming her face into a dish.

These were the facts suppressed by Bennet, he said, and he tried again to get on record his opinion of the New Yorker, but Payne and Dalzell bounced up again with objections and headed him off. Dalzell, then, in a vehement speech, charged Williams with insinuating a charge he had not the courage to make openly.

"I do not think," said Williams, "that the gentleman from Pennsylvania should utter a falsehood upon the floor of this House."

There was an uproar immediately, and Payne, Dalzell, and Gen. Keifer all called him to order and demanded that his words be taken down. Things looked stormy, but the Speaker came to the rescue with a joke.

"Why," he said, "everybody has been out of order for the past forty minutes."

The laugh that greeted this brought about a better feeling, and ended the debate. The previous question was moved, and Gardner's resolution carried.

INQUIRY IN TOWNSHEND CASE.

Jury Is to Decide Regarding the Sanity of the Marquis.

LONDON, Saturday, April 14.—According to The Daily Mail, Mr. Justice Vaughan Williams of the Court of Appeal has decided to order a public inquiry before a jury into the condition of the health of Marquis Townshend.

An extraordinary amount of interest has been aroused in England by the case of Marquis Townshend, who succeeded his father in the title in 1899, when he was 33 years old, and who last year married Miss Gladys Ethel Sutherst, who is said to be the most beautiful woman in the United Kingdom. She is the daughter of Thomas Sutherst, a barrister and financier.

Lord Townshend owns 20,000 acres. Two months ago the statement was published that he was being deprived of his liberty by his wife and her father on the ground that he was of unsound mind. The Dowager Marchioness Townshend asserted that her son was not insane, and made strenuous efforts to obtain his freedom.

The Sutherst family asserted that the Marquis was perfectly rational except with regard to a friend whom he had known for sixteen years, and who, the Marquis said, had helped to save his estate.

Prof. Richards to Lecture in Berlin.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 13.—Notice has been received at Harvard that Prof. William Theodore Richards of the department of physical chemistry has been designated by the German Government as the Harvard visiting professor at the University of Berlin for the academic year 1906-07. The term of Prof. Richards will fall in the second semester. Prof. Richards is a native of Germantown, Penn. He has been a member of the Harvard Faculty since 1889.

A Cure for Locomotor Ataxia?

LONDON, Saturday, April 14.—The Express this morning says that Le Grand Norton Denslow, an American doctor residing in London, has discovered a cure for locomotor ataxia. He already, says The Express, has effected a number of wonderful recoveries. Dr. Denslow is not ready to make public the details of his discovery, but when he is ready he will take the medical profession into his confidence.

DATE FOR HAGUE MEETING.

United States Suggests Any Time After Next Sept. 20.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—A step toward an agreement upon a date for the second Hague Conference was made to-day, when Secretary Root informed the Russian Government that the convenience of the United States would be served by the selection of any date later than next Sept. 20.

This date was mentioned because it is calculated that it will give time for delegates to the Pan-American Conference at Rio to reach The Hague. It is expected that several officials will be charged to represent their Governments at both conferences. Secretary Root expects to have completed his South American trip, and to be back in Washington by the middle of September.

The greatest satisfaction is expressed at the readiness with which the Russian Government accepted the suggestion of the State Department that a later date than July be chosen for the conference at The Hague.

MANY RUSSIANS STARVING.

Peasants Absolutely Without Bread—Hunger Typhus Appears.

KHARKOFF, April 13.—The famine among the peasants in Riazan, Kasan, Simbirsk, and Tula Provinces has assumed an acute phase.

The grain has all gone, and among the peasants, who are absolutely without bread, hunger typhus has appeared. The mortality is especially great among the children.

Several famine committees are issuing appeals for funds to rescue the starving. In these appeals they state that 30 cents will preserve the life of a child for a week and 90 cents that of an adult.

WITTE WRITES TO PRESIDENT.

Consul General Watts Arrives from St. Petersburg with the Letter.

Ethelbert Watts, United States Consul General at St. Petersburg, was a passenger on the Hamburg-American liner Pennsylvania, which arrived from Hamburg yesterday. He said that he was the bearer of a letter from Count Witte to President Roosevelt.

Among the steamer's steerage passengers were 1,600 men, all registered as unmarried, and nearly all of them Russians, who said they had served as soldiers in the war against Japan. The total number of steerage passengers was 2,728.

BOTH FOOD AND MEDICINE.

We like best to call Scott's Emulsion a food-medicine. It is a term that aptly describes the character and action of our Emulsion. More than a medicine—more than a food, yet combining the vital principles of both. It is for this reason that Scott's Emulsion has a distinct and special value in all wasting diseases. There is nothing better to remedy the troubles of imperfect growth and delicate health in children. The action of Scott's Emulsion is just as effective in treating weakness and wasting in adults.

SOME FACTS

Worth Thinking Over.

A STORE FOR MEN.
Main Floor, Just Inside the Elm Place Door.

WE HAVE, FOR SOMEWHAT OVER A YEAR now, had a complete STORE FOR MEN as separate and distinct from the rest of the Store as though it were in another establisment. It is on the main floor and has a separate entrance at Elm Place. It is as convenient as a store can be. Its convenience has been widely appreciated by men who do not like to go through the aisles of a woman's store to find what they want.

But it is THE EXCELLENCE OF THE CLOTHING and not the excellence of the Store which is the important fact.

It is THE EXCELLENCE OF THE CLOTHING which almost without an exception is bringing back here this season the men who bought Clothes here last season.

It is THE EXCELLENCE OF THE CLOTHING on which we base our claim to your interest.

Loeser Clothes for men are better than any other Clothes which you can buy in Brooklyn for the same prices. Not that we have tried to cut prices down, but that we have raised the standards of style and workmanship.

The idea has been to build up a men's Clothing business which shall be permanent because of the PERMANENT SATISFACTION which Loeser Clothing gives.

WE UNDERTAKE, when you come to this STORE FOR MEN, to fit you exactly in a Suit or Overcoat of a pattern and fabric that will please you. We will fit you perfectly, whether you are short or stout or of regular build.

WE UNDERTAKE to satisfy you also as to the correct style of the Suit or Coat you choose—and you will note many distinctive features which are our own and not to be duplicated in ready-for-service Clothing.

WE UNDERTAKE also to guarantee that the Suit you buy, no matter what the price you pay, WILL HOLD ITS SHAPE AND STYLE until it is worn out.

This is the basis on which we are doing the men's Clothing business.

Business Sack Suits	$12.50 to $35
Prince Albert Frock Coats and Waistcoats	$20 to $32
Cutaway Frock Coats and Waistcoats	$15 to $25
Top Coats & Overcoats	$12.50 to $30
Long Overcoats, rainproofed	$10 to $23
Separate Trousers	$3.75 to $7
Separate Waistcoats	$3 to $6.50

Main Floor, Elm Place.

Men's Easter Neckwear.

FROM STORE OPENING UNTIL 6 O'CLOCK to-day the Hats will be flying out—and flying in—for our milliners are working like bees. Paris suggestions keep on coming and to-day there will be new styles—hats not seen yet, even here. There is time for careful choosing; time for alert, attentive Loeser service that will help you find easily and unhurriedly just the Hat you have in mind. Whether it be in simple conservative style, or artistically big and graceful, or pert and up-tilted, or striking, or dashing, or dignified—IT WILL BE HERE—and more than likely it will be among the scores of distinctive Paris-Loeser Hats between ten and twenty dollars.

Simply Trimmed Hats, $5 to $9.75.

We've kept some of the very prettiest for those who had to leave their buying till the half holiday. Every one of these distinctive Hats is trimmed in our own workroom with Loeser skill and knack. Every one bears the Loeser name and shows it in style and prettiness. Shapes are the newest and trimmings are of best materials. All the sheer new straws are represented, and there is a color combination to match every Easter frock. $5 to $9.75.

Between $1.50 and $5 are scores of Hats in such good shapes that many women are buying them for knockabout and rainy day wear.

Second Floor.

APRIL 1906

EASTER MEANS A NEW HAT.

If it's to go with that new frock-coat, of course it must be a silk hat. The crown this season should be high, with more bell than last year's—1¾ inch cloth band and "flat-set"—that is, little curve to the brim. You can be sure of both the style and the quality if you buy of us.

Our derbies also deserve the attention of men who are particular about this most popular hat. They are light, "self-conforming" (do not have to be fitted to your head), and are in distinctly fashionable shapes. Our name in them is a guarantee of their quality.

We have some beautiful specimens of canes. Straight Malacca and Partridge, and the Opera Crook, are proving most popular this Spring.

In gloves we have only what is correct and best.

URGE MATTHEW FLEMING FOR INSURANCE HEAD

He Is the Choice of Mr. Hughes and Armstrong Committee.

HAD ACTIVE PART IN INQUIRY

His Name Has Been Presented to Gov. Higgins as Pre-eminently Qualified to Succeed Hendricks.

Persistent efforts are being made by the men who are behind insurance reform in this State to induce Matthew C. Fleming, assistant counsel for the Armstrong Investigating Committee, to allow his name to be considered for the Superintendency of the Insurance Department. Mr. Fleming is indeed the first choice of Charles E. Hughes, Senators Armstrong and Tully, and the other members of the committee, and although there is a distinct effort to avoid anything like playing politics now as there was during the investigation, it is learned that their influence with Gov. Higgins has been cast strongly in Mr. Fleming's favor.

The appointment of a Superintendent to succeed Francis Hendricks, who has held over since the expiration of his term last Winter, has been delayed for the double reason that men thought capable of the important work to be done are not easily found at $7,500 a year, and because it was desired to have the new insurance legislation on the statute books before the choice should be made. Now, with the prospect of the passage of the last insurance bills within a week, the question looms up large, and it is said by men close to Gov. Higgins that if Mr. Fleming will consent to serve there will be small question of his appointment.

The principal objections thus far have been voiced by Mr. Fleming himself. His law practice is such that the acceptance of the post would involve considerable financial sacrifice, and at the same time a radical change of base. Mr. Fleming, it is understood, has also evinced some hesitation about undertaking the work, on the ground that he is not an insurance man and had no practical knowledge of the business until he took up his work for the Armstrong Committee.

Why They Favor Fleming.

The men who are urging him for the place, however, are disposed to think that in some respects this may be an advantage, for the reason that his service as one of the counsel for the Armstrong Committee has put him in thorough sympathy with the purposes of the new laws and has given him a minute understanding of the policies upon which those laws are based, as developed by the investigation. The first great task of the new Superintendent of Insurance will be to supervise the reorganization of the life insurance business of this State, in conformity to the legislation, and it is recognized that qualifications which Mr. Fleming peculiarly possesses are essential to the task.

Among the earliest important duties will be the supervision of the elections of Nov. 15 next, when entire new Boards of Trustees are to be chosen for the four mutual companies in New York, the Mutual Life, New York Life, Mutual Reserve Life, and the Security Mutual Life Association of Binghamton. It has not been generally known that the law governing these elections has been amended so that the Inspectors of Election are to be appointed by the State Superintendent of Insurance, and this will place him in the position of a referee as between the organizations of policy holders on the one side and the administrations of the companies seeking re-election on the other.

In connection with this, it is learned that the administration of one large company organized on a stock basis would not oppose the appointment of Mr. Fleming, and that he would be distinctly persona grata to the men who are now working in the interests of the policy holders' organizations. It is believed that there would not be substantial opposition to him from other insurance quarters, where there is a frank recognition that the companies, whatever the results of next Fall's election, must conform to an entirely new code of insurance law, and can do so with less injury to their own interests under the supervision of a man who is mindful of the importance of the changes involved.

Helped Hughes in Gas Inquiry.

Mr. Fleming is a member of the law firm of Dexter, Osborne & Fleming, at 71 Broadway. He was several years ago an assistant in the Corporation Counsel's office, and then returned to private practice until he was chosen as assistant to Charles E. Hughes in the gas investigation of a year ago. Throughout the gas investigation he was Mr. Hughes's chief lieutenant, and when the senior counsel for the gas investigating committee was chosen to undertake the probing of the insurance companies for the Armstrong Committee, he made it a condition of his acceptance that Mr. Fleming be chosen as his assistant.

Mr. Fleming served through the insurance investigation with no less success than in the gas investigation. He dug up the facts regarding the supply department of the Mutual Life, among other things, and was directly responsible for the disclosures of the way in which vouchers in that department were being manipulated so as to cover up the real purpose of the payments that Fields made.

He traced the vouchers from the supply department up to the auditing department and then prepared lists of unexplained payments, which furnished the basis for many pointed questions by his senior associate to the different officers and Trustees of the Mutual, who were under examination.

Recently Mr. Fleming has undertaken to assist District Attorney Jerome in connection with his work on the insurance situation, but not as a regular member of Mr. Jerome's staff, so that it is not expected that that connection will stand in the way provided his other objections are disposed of. He is a Princeton graduate of the middle eighties and a member of the University and other clubs.

NON-POLICY HOLDERS VOTED.

Elected Officers Who Controlled Northwestern Mutual Life.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., April 13.—At to-day's examination of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company by the special Legislative Investigating Committee the records of the company for its election in 1904 were produced, showing that a majority of the persons who voted proxies were not policy holders of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company, the result being that non-policy holders actually elected the officers who controlled the company's business.

Documentary evidence also was produced tending to show that Mrs. Henry L. Palmer, wife of the President of the company, was a frequent investor in loans on policies of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company, and that on one of these loans, negotiated in 1889, but still running in 1905, she obtained 8 per cent. interest. During a portion of the time Mrs. Palmer was obtaining this interest rate policy loans were being made by the company itself at 6 per cent.

OHIO OUSTER PROCEEDINGS.

State Demands Judgment by Default Against the New York Life.

AKRON, Ohio, April 13.—The Circuit Court of Summit County to-day heard arguments of Prosecutor Hagelberger in an action to oust the New York Life and Mutual Life Insurance Companies from the State of Ohio.

The State made a motion, which is still under argument, that judgment be given against the New York Life in default, because it had failed to file answer or file a demurrer to the suit within the time required by law.

Another motion was argued asking the Circuit Judges to compel both companies to answer thirty-two interrogatories which deal with money illegally expended, money contributed to campaign funds, and several others relating to recent disclosures in the New York hearings.

BREWER DEFENDS HIS ACTS.

Denies Charges of Mismanagement in Washington Life Insurance Co.

William A. Brewer, Jr., formerly President of the Washington Life Insurance Company of New York, made a statement yesterday at the home of his son-in-law in South Orange, in which he defended himself and his son, Graham H. Brewer, against allegations which have resulted in action on the part of District Attorney Jerome of New York.

Although 71 years old and gray-haired, Mr. Brewer is to-day erect and strong. "They have killed McCall and made Alexander and McCurdy ill, and now, I suppose, because I am strong and healthy, I must be the next," declared the former insurance man. He was discussing the fact that District Attorney Jerome had started another investigation after the troubles of the company had apparently been ended, the company reorganized, and the capital stock increased $500,000 through the instrumentality of Harry Payne Whitney, Levi P. Morton, and Thomas F. Ryan.

Examiner Vanderpoel's report to the New York State Insurance Department that a surplus of $800,000 had been wiped out by extravagance was directed to the attention of Mr. Brewer. Mr. Brewer replied that all expenditures for salaries were made by vote of the Executive Committee and Directors. Expenditures for agency management were made under a different arrangement, Mr. Brewer said.

"The big companies," he added, "were paying big commissions to agents for new business, and the Washington Life was compelled to do the same in order to hold its agents and get business."

In regard to the allegation that has been made in the examiner's report that the combined salaries of Mr. Brewer and his son, Graham H. Brewer, had been increased to $45,000, Mr. Brewer said that the statements were wholly untrue. He added:

"My salary as President of the Washington Life was $25,000, and when I completed my twenty-fifth year in that capacity the Executive Committee increased it $5,000, making it $30,000. So I had nothing to do with any increase. When E. A. French died, my son Graham H. Brewer was chosen to succeed him as Vice President at the salary of $14,500 that had been paid to Mr. French.

"My son was formerly Secretary at a salary of $7,500, and he continued as Secretary when elected Vice President, although he no longer received the $7,500 salary for the Secretaryship. It will be seen that instead of an increase there was really a decrease in salaries. All these matters were regulated by the Executive Committee and Directors of the company."

FIELDS STILL INVISIBLE.

Mutual Officials Say They Think His Homecoming a "Plant."

An official of the Mutual Life Insurance Company said flatly yesterday that he did not believe that Andrew C. Fields was at his Dobbs Ferry home, inasmuch as the representatives of the company who have been looking for him have been absolutely unable to get as much as a glimpse of his coat tails. In the offices of the Mutual the impression prevails, of which THE TIMES told yesterday morning, that the entire homecoming of Fields was an elaborate "plant," arranged for the purpose of drawing the fire of persons interested in his past movements.

Henry T. Velte, Fields's counsel, denied emphatically yesterday that such was the case, saying that Fields was at Dobbs Ferry, and had been there ever since his announced return.

"Mr. Fields," said Mr. Velte, "is a very sick man, and his physician will not allow him to see anybody. At the proper time he will reply to the charges that have been made, but that will not be until the complaint has been served in the suit that the Mutual Life is bringing."

ROBBERS USED A CAB.

Thus Escaped Arrest After a West Side Hold-Up.

Thomas Wamsley of 404 West Fifty-fourth Street was arraigned before Magistrate Barlow in the West Side Court yesterday morning on a charge of assault and robbery and held in $1,500 bail for examination to-day.

He was arrested by Policeman Bohan of the West Forty-seventh Street Station after a chase early yesterday morning, during which he endeavored to escape by jumping on a surface car.

James Cullen, whose home is in Florida, was walking through Fifty-fourth Street early yesterday morning. When near Seventh Avenue three men held him up and stole his $75 gold watch. Two of the highwaymen, he says, jumped into a cab and were driven away. The third man ran up Seventh Avenue. He followed, shouting for the police.

Bohan heard the shouts and joined in the chase. Near Fifty-fifth Street the fugitive jumped on a street car north bound on Seventh Avenue and endeavored to get away. Bohan shouted and blew his whistle for help. The motorman heard the call and stopped the car. As the man was jumping off Bohan arrived and arrested him.

Standard Oil Advances Prices.

LIMA, Ohio, April 13.—Crude oil was advanced for all fields save Kentucky and Kansas by the Standard Oil Company to-day. The change adds 3 cents a barrel to the Eastern and 2 cents to the Western products. Continued drains of over a half million barrels monthly from the gross stocks are the cause.

CRACK CRUISER BRINGS WORLD'S TARGET RECORD

The Pennsylvania Scored 17 Bull's-Eyes in 90 Seconds.

MADE WITH SIX-INCH GUNS

Warship Sailed from New York After the Visit of Prince Louis and Returned Yesterday.

The new armored cruiser Pennsylvania, which came in yesterday and anchored off Tompkinsville, brought in a new and enviable record to her credit—the six-inch gun target record of the world. She made the record in the recent target practice of the Atlantic Fleet in West Indian waters. Seventeen shots, each one a bull's eye, in ninety seconds is the record of this splendid ship. The score was made on the last day of the target competition, which was a week ago to-day.

The record was made by the second division of the six-inch battery, commanded by Lieut. J. R. Brady, and the effect of the wonderful result was everywhere apparent among the men, all those on shore leave telling all the other jackies not connected with the Pennsylvania what an eye the men who man the Pennsylvania's six-inch guns have.

In the complement of men on board of the Pennsylvania there is no man more popular than Mail Orderly Charles Welmuth, whose record of thirty-five years' faithful service in the navy has made him the arbiter of nearly all disputes on board the crack cruiser since she went into commission a year ago. Yesterday Welmuth was one of the first men to get on shore leave, and as soon as he landed in Manhattan he told the reporters what had happened on the Pennsylvania since she sailed away from New York at the end of Prince Louis of Battenberg's visit to this city.

"When we left Hampton Roads in January," said Welmuth, "our orders were to look for the dry dock Dewey, which at that time had not been heard from in many days. We didn't find any dry dock, and after failing to pick up the Dewey or her convoys by wireless, we headed for Culebra, off which place we arrived on the morning of Jan. 28.

"From Culebra we went to St. Vincent, where the big volcano was smoking and muttering, and from the way things looked then I was convinced that trouble was about due. Sure enough, two days after we left we heard she had blown up.

"From St. Vincent we steamed to Guantanamo, where we participated in the athletic games of the fleet, and when they were over we went to Cape Cruz, where the target practice took place. You know all about what happened there, how the Pennsylvania's six-inch men smashed all records to smithereens, making seventeen bull's-eyes in a little over a minute. That's shooting some, isn't it?"

The Pennsylvania brought twelve sailors from other ships, who are ill with typhoid fever. They were transferred to the United States Marine Hospital.

KRANICH & BACH PIANOS

This Easter exhibition is mostly in Circassian Walnut—the reigning vogue in furniture and decorative art in the most costly modern mansions.

Circassian Walnut has come to stay, too. We recognized its beauty years ago—anticipated that its unusual beauties of grain and figure, marking and coloring would bring it into lasting favor. So now we show the handsomest collection of CIRCASSIAN WALNUT GRANDS and CIRCASSIAN WALNUT UPRIGHTS ever offered anywhere. And whether or not you buy we'd like you to see them—a Fine Arts Exhibit, too beautiful to miss. We show Mahogany, Rosewood, Ebony, Oak and other encasings, too.

All of them contain not only the Kranich & Bach famous action, frame and sounding board but all the other structural features which make the Kranich & Bach Piano supreme among high grade pianos for tone quality, economy and durability.

In all the world no other makers give so much piano value at a price so fair. The terms of our make our Piano the most easily and conveniently purchased of all high grade pianos,

¶ Also in stock a few slightly used Grands, Uprights, and Squares, such as Chickering, Hardman, etc., which will be sold at extremely low figures.

TILLMAN FILES CHARGES AGAINST B. F. BARNES

Opposes Appointment of Secretary Who Ejected Mrs. Morris.

ACCUSES HIM OF FALSEHOOD

Senator Says White House Official Is Not Worthy to be Postmaster of Washington.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Senator Tillman to-day filed his charges against Benjamin F. Barnes, the White House Assistant Secretary, who had Mrs. Minor Morris dragged from the executive offices and taken to a police station and whom the President has nominated for Postmaster of Washington. The charges are four in number and are as follows:

"That Mr. Barnes is lacking in gentlemanly and manly consideration for ladies, which caused him to abuse his authority so far as to order the expulsion from the executive offices of Mrs. Minor Morris on Jan. 4, 1906, without any justification or good reason therefor.

"That having issued the order, he stood by and saw it executed in a most brutal and outrageous manner without interference, compelling the policemen to drag and finally, with the aid of a negro employed at the White House, to carry her, with the negro holding her by the ankles and with her limbs exposed, the entire distance from the executive offices at the western end of the White House to the eastern exit, where she was thrust into a cab and sent to the House of Detention, by which brutal treatment her life was endangered and health seriously impaired from shock and injuries received.

"That after this tyrannical and outrageous abuse of his authority he lodged charges of insanity against Mrs. Morris and compelled her to remain in prison for more than four hours, thus adding insult to injury and producing in the public mind impressions derogatory to both her reputation and her mental condition.

"That he made a statement to the press which was full of falsehoods and which proves him to be lacking in that integrity and high character which a high Government official should have."

Senator Tillman will conduct the examination of witnesses before the committee, and has given the sub-committee the names of the witnesses he wishes to have called. The list includes Walter F. Clark of The New York Sun, R. H. Hazard of The New York Tribune, Irving Norwood of The Washington Star, J. H. Price of The Washington Times, H. C. Biggs of The New York World, E. E. Payne of The Associated Press, and Jules Guthridge, Washington representative of Henry Clews & Co. of New York. The newspaper men named were present, and accompanied the police from the executive office under the White House to the east entrance, where Mrs. Morris was bodily thrown into a cab. Mr. Barnes will be present at the hearings, and will be represented by counsel.

The sub-committee has come to the understanding that, unless the charges are sustained by the evidence given, it will submit a favorable report on the nomination. The burden of proof is put on Senator Tillman.

It is said that Barnes will place before the committee the Secret Service report.

MORE GUARDS NEEDED.

Sheriff Hayes Says Number of Prisoners Handled Increases Yearly.

Sheriff Hayes received yesterday from Daniel J. Kelly, one of the six prison guards attached to his office, the quarterly report of the prisoners transferred from the Tombs to the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court, General Sessions, the Bond Bureau, the District Attorney's office, and the various State institutions. The total number was 5,587, all transferred by the six guards and Deputy Sheriffs.

The Sheriff said there had been a steady increase in the number of prisoners transferred since 1900, and that unless the number of guards was increased civil business would suffer. Deputy Sheriffs had to be detailed to help the guards handle criminal prisoners, to the detriment of the execution of civil processes. The increase is attributed largely to the rapid increase in population.

At least three additional guards are needed at once, the Sheriff said. The Judges of General Sessions have referred more than once to the necessity for the increase.

IMMIGRANTS THEIR PREY.

On the arrival of the 9 o'clock boat yesterday morning from Ellis Island a number of Italian immigrants started for the Battery Place station of the elevated road. Petty swindlers who loiter about the Barge Office accosted those immigrants who were unaccompanied, and escorted them to the elevated platform. There one of the swindlers sold elevated tickets at 25 cents each.

Thomas Johnson, a negro platform man, witnessed the sale of several tickets and struck the salesman. The swindlers ran down the stairs and escaped before the arrival of the one policeman now detailed to the Barge Office. Formerly several patrolmen were assigned to keep petty crooks from preying on the immigrants, but Commissioner Bingham cut down the detail.

MAY SMOKE ON THE FRONT.

Jury Says Man Who Fell from Platform Was Rightfully There.

It has been decided by a jury before Justice Gildersleeve in the Supreme Court, that a man may smoke on the front platform of a horse car, and that if he is thrown off and injured the company must pay damages.

August Keffman, a cigar manufacturer, was smoking on the front platform of a Dry Dock car on the night of Nov. 9 last. The car lurched and he fell to the street. His leg was broken and he was laid up three months. When he got about again he found that the injured leg was two inches shorter than the other.

John Bouvier, the company's lawyer, said that Kleffman should have been inside, as the car was not crowded.

After ten minutes' deliberation the jury returned a verdict of $3,000 for the plaintiff.

Fight on Fire Insurance Bill.

ALBANY, April 13.—The A. E. Smith bill, which is aimed at the fire insurance combination, was put over to Monday in the Assembly to-day. The fire insurance companies are fighting this bill vigorously, and Smith is equally energetic in having it enacted.

RAILROAD OFFICIALS DREW COAL DIVIDENDS

Stock in Companies Held in Names of Wives and Daughters.

GOT PROFITS AT INTERVALS

BALTIMORE, April 13.—The Inter-State Commerce Commission met here to-day to continue its investigation into the alleged community of interests between railroads and the coal and oil business of the country. A number of witnesses had been summoned to appear before the commission, and their testimony was taken to-day. Among the witnesses were Third Vice President Potter and Superintendent of Transportation Arthur Hale of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and General Supt. Fitzgerald of the Western Maryland Railroad.

The chief point brought out during the examination of Supt. Hale was an admission in answer to several questions by Attorney William A. Glasgow for the commission, that coal is taken out of the mines by a company owned by the Baltimore & Ohio Road, transported over a railroad owned by the Baltimore & Ohio and distributed to retailers by companies in which the Baltimore & Ohio is interested, either by direct ownership or indirect stock ownership or other control. The witness said he owned fifty shares of the Consolidation Coal Company's stock and 100 shares in the Fairmount Coal Company, all of which he bought in the open market.

Capt. Alfred Hicks of Pittsburg, President of the Allegheny Steel Company and of the Interstate Steel Company, and also President or Treasurer of several coal companies, testified that Vice President George L. Potter of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company formerly held 300 shares in the Belmont Coal Company, but sold it two months ago to the witness.

The witness said that General Manager W. W. Atterbury and Vice President Thayer, Robert Pitcairn, and Second Vice President Joseph Wood of the Pennsylvania Railroad were other officials who had held stock in one or more of these companies. Capt. Hicks testified that he had paid dividends to these gentlemen at intervals—as much as he thought proper. "We did not have a very thorough system of bookkeeping," he said.

"Did these people pay anything for their stock?" asked Mr. Glasgow.

"Some of them," said Capt. Hicks.

Former General Superintendent of Motive Power F. D. Casanave was another coal stockholder, the witness said. He held stock in the Belmont and Avenmore Companies. Some of the stock in these companies was held in the names of the wives and daughters of the men mentioned, the witness said.

Logan Bullitt, President of the Red Rock Coal Company, with which the Baltimore & Ohio has recently been in litigation, was present, and assisted the counsel for the Government in the examination of witnesses. The inquiry will be resumed to-morrow.

CENTRAL'S GRADE CROSSINGS.

Compromise Bill Puts All the Expense on the Company.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 13.—The Assembly to-day passed the most important bill of the session relative to grade crossings. It is the work of the Railroad Commission and represents a compromise on the much-talked-of Oglesby bill, which would have seriously interfered with the plans of the New York Central for the electrification of its White Plains Branch and its Yonkers Branch on the Putnam Division.

Oglesby charged that under the present law the people would be obliged to pay by far the greater part of the cost of the New York Central's improvements. This charge the railroad met with the declaration that if the bill was enacted it would cease its improvements, tariffs would not be reduced, and the expected boom in Westchester real estate might fail of development. This brought the real estate companies to Albany in droves. They protested against the measure, and the compromise bill was framed. It went through the House to-day. It provides that before any railroad shall increase the number of its tracks or widen its roadway or right of way, or change its motive power, it shall file with the Board of Railroad Commissioners plans showing in detail each highway to be crossed. The commission will thereupon order a public hearing to determine whether the proposed changes increase the danger to the public. The commission may, if the evidence warrants, refuse permission to cross at grade and order the tracks elevated. An appeal may be taken from the decision to the Appellate Division and Court of Appeals. The entire expense of crossing changes shall be paid by the railroad.

COUPLE CAME HERE TO WED.

Their Parents May Not Have Witnessed the Hager-Trowbridge Wedding.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 13.—Word was received in this city this afternoon of the marriage of Miss Dorothy Q. Trowbridge, daughter of Mrs. E. Hayes Trowbridge of 310 Temple Street, to Robert Hager, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hager, formerly of Hagerstown, Md., but now of New York. They were married in New York last Saturday in the presence of a few intimate friends by the Rev. Thomas R. Bridges of South Church, New York.

Mrs. Hager is a graduate of Briar Cliff School. Hager is a graduate of Phillips Academy, Andover, and a member of the class of 1908 at Yale. Mr. and Mrs. Hager have left for a wedding trip in the South.

The Rev. Mr. Bridges said last night that he had married the couple on the day named at his home. There were a few friends present. Asked if the parents of Miss Trowbridge were at the wedding he thought he had better not answer. To the question as to whether he thought the marriage was without their knowledge he laughed and said:

"Oh, now I can't reply to that. Put your imagination to work. The formal announcement is enough."

INSURANCE BILLS NOW LAW.

Higgins Signs Two of the Reform Measures Passed Yesterday.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 13.—Gov. Higgins to-day signed two of the insurance bills passed yesterday by the Legislature. They are the ones forbidding companies to give rebates and relating to the holding of real property by life insurance companies.

Three of the investigating committee's measures have now become statute law. The first bill signed legislated out of office the Trustees of mutual life insurance companies.

When the "big bill," generally amending the insurance law, which passed the Assembly yesterday, was handed down in the Senate to-day, Senator Armstrong had it substituted for the identical Senate bill on the order of third reading. Any amendments made by the Senate must be concurred in by the Assembly before becoming effective.

Except for the Anti-Perjury bill, originally passed by the Assembly, since amended by the Senate, and which must return to the Assembly for concurrence, and excepting the possibility that the Senate may amend the general bill, the Assembly has finished its work upon the insurance legislation.

HINT OF MORTGAGE TAX VETO.

Senator Lewis Says in Senate Higgins Will Disapprove Repeal Bill.

ALBANY, April 13.—When the Committee on Taxation reported to the Senate to-day Senator Tully's bill, which would permit building, savings, and loan associations to make mortgage investments within a radius of fifty miles from the principal offices, there was an interchange between Senators Lewis, Malby, and Page, occasioned by the fact that the title of the bill showed it to be an amendment to the mortgage tax law.

"It is well known," said Senator Lewis, "that the Senator from the Nineteenth [Page] does not expect to have his Recording Tax bill signed by the Governor."

Senator Page suggested that all these things were affording him much amusement.

"The Senator will have amusement enough," retorted Senator Malby, "before this proposition is done with."

Higgins Goes to Olean.

ALBANY, April 13.—Gov. Higgins left to-night for his home in Olean. He will return on Monday morning. The Governor said to-day that he had given those interested in the Mortgage Tax bill now pending before him until Monday to file briefs on the bill.

have flown into a passion, and committed acts of violence, at one time throwing an inkstand at a man in an uptown flat, for which she was compelled to move out, and at another getting angry at a dressmaker and knocking her down. The defense will be that Barnes knew of Mrs. Morris's temper, and decided to take no chances. It is also expected that Secretary Loeb will be a witness, and take full responsibility for the order to Barnes to have the woman removed.

Senator Tillman declares that, no matter what the defense may be, he intends to prove his case, and will give the committee and the country the benefit of the truth in the matter.

SMOOT HEARING CLOSED.

Defense Ended and Date for Vote on Case May Be Fixed Next Week.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—The final argument in the investigation of protests against Senator Reed Smoot being permitted to retain his seat was made to-day before the Senate Committee on Elections by A. S. Worthington, counsel for the Utah Senator. For the first time since the proceedings were begun three years ago Mrs. Smoot attended the session.

Witnesses who attempted to testify concerning the Endowment House ceremonies were characterized by Worthington as disreputable. He closed at noon. It is expected a date for a vote on the case will be fixed some day next week.

BOWLES URGES SHIP SUBSIDY.

Says It Would Be a Practical Insurance to Our Foreign Trade.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—The House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries to-day concluded its hearings on the Ship Subsidy bill.

At the hearing this morning Francis T. Bowles of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company, ex-Chief Constructor of the Navy, recited many reasons why the United States should adopt some policy which would rehabilitate its merchant marine. At present he said it was depending on English and German ships to carry its commerce. In case of war between these two nations this commerce would be left without means of transportation. In case of war between the United States and a foreign nation this same situation would result, and the United States would be at still greater disadvantage by not having merchantmen to press into the service as auxiliaries. The navy to-day, he said, had not men enough to man its ships. Whenever a new ship was put in commission it was manned by placing out of commission some older ship.

As a pure matter of business and as a practical insurance to our foreign trade, the Government should aid its merchant marine.

SINGLE-TAXERS DINE.

Prof. Giddings Says Interborough, Uncurbed, Could Cause Economic Slavery

The Manhattan Single Tax Club held its twentieth annual celebration of the birth of Thomas Jefferson with a dinner at the Hotel Victoria last night. Some forty persons were present. Edward Pollock acted as toastmaster.

Prof. Franklin H. Giddings of Columbia spoke on "The Economic Foundation of Liberty." The speaker had a severe cold. He said, in part:

"I think the Democracy believed in by Thomas Jefferson and Henry George calls for the exercise of police powers, as exemplified by the Board of Health and the Tenement House Commission, sparingly as regards the individual. Should the State police powers be restricted in the case of artificial individuals such as corporations? I do not believe that it should.

"If the State creates creatures which are not natural individuals it should restrict them. Such an artificial individual as the Interborough Company could reduce us all to a condition of economic slavery. If the necessity of strictly controlling the powers of the artificial personalities is understood there will never be in America under these conditions such a thing as a bureaucratic Socialist.

"Society will insist on a social control and the merging of all things in the State, and we can do this without committing ourselves to a coercive bureaucratic organization. Your philosophy must include a declaration of what you will do about such an organization as the social problem."

William H. Berry, State Treasurer of Pennsylvania, spoke on "Opportunity."

Frank Stephens of Philadelphia spoke on "Our Duty as Democrats." Henry George, Jr., was the last speaker. His

4 YEARS, $575,000 FINE FOR GREENE AND GAYNOR

Judge Speer Denounces Honest Graft in Imposing Sentence.

DANGER IN LAW'S DELAY

Lesson to Public Plunderers Needed—May Escape Fine by Swearing They Lack Means.

SAVANNAH, Ga., April 13.—Benjamin D. Greene and John F. Gaynor were sentenced by Judge Speer in the Federal Court to-day to serve four years in the Federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., and to pay each a fine of $575,794.90, the amount they are charged with having embezzled.

Upon one indictment the sentence was to two years, and upon each of the other indictments four years, but the court directed that the sentences might all be served concurrently, which reduced the term to four years, with the allowance of three months off of each year for good behavior. The fine need not be paid, if, on completing the sentence, the prisoners make affidavit that they are not possessed of more than $20. In lieu of paying the fine they then may serve thirty days longer.

Counsel for the prisoners announce that an appeal will be taken. An order of court grants ten days for the filing of a bill of exceptions upon which a motion for a new trial will be predicated.

Judge Speer, in sentencing the prisoners, after saying that the most painful judicial duty is the imposition of a sentence to penal servitude, particularly so when those convicted are men of fine intelligence and men of affairs, continued in part:

"For your personal suffering, merited as it is, you have my earnest sympathy. To some, no doubt, who are imbued with the belief that all they can get from the Government is honest graft, your conviction may excite indignation, astonishment, and perhaps not a little alarm. It seems indeed that the public should awaken to the prevalence of this dangerous incination. The magnificent contributions from the National Treasury made by Congress for the welfare of the people, * * * all imperatively call for a lesson in thunder tones to faithless, conniving, unprincipled representatives of the Government and the unscrupulous contractors or other persons who would conspire to plunder the public treasury.

"Nor should the lesson of our Government's conduct in this great case go unheeded. No necessary expense has been spared, no necessary exertion avoided. To bring to the bar of public justice those charged with the spoliation of the treasury, the Supreme Court of the United States and the Privy Council of England, the loftiest tribunals of the English-speaking races, have contributed their solemn judgments.

"It will be well for our Governmental authorities to reflect that unless the obstructive construction placed upon our removal statutes, which delayed this case so long, shall be avoided as recommended by the President and the Attorney General, it will be wholly impossible to have speedy trial of criminal cases, and the greater the crime and the more powerful and richer the culprit, the greater will be the difficulty in bringing him to trial. If the Government must take its witnesses to each district in which persons indicted jointly for conspiracy or other joint crime, may seek refuge and be compelled to ignore the efficacy of the indictment and to make out the case anew, it will amount to a paralysis in the administration of criminal justice."

"Believing that it is the uncertainty and not the severity of punishment which deters criminals, I will attempt to approximate in measuring your term that imposed by his brother officers upon Carter, the late engineer officer, without whose aid and connivance the crimes in this case would have been impossible.

"I recognize that you have been in jail for more than a year; that both of you are elderly men; that both of you are educated men, accustomed to a life of comparative luxury, and to the comforts of home. My sentence to you, therefore, is far more severe than a much greater sentence if imposed upon those who commit offenses which demonstrate by their savagery that they are brutes without reason."

Judge Speer concluded by pointing out that good behavior could reduce the sentence to three years each instead of four, and hoped that for the rest of their lives the prisoners would recall the Psalmist's quotation, "A little that a righteous hath is better than the riches of many wicked."

NEW B. & O. ISSUE.

Directors Authorize Output of $27,750,000 for Improvements.

The Directors of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, at a meeting held in this city yesterday, authorized the issue of $27,750,000 of additional common stock, to be sold to the stockholders at par. The proceeds of the issue are to be used for the payment of construction and improvements which are now under way, or which are contemplated by the company, and for the purchase of equipment. The additional capital, it is stated, is required by the company in order to handle to the best advantage its growing business, and to make possible more advantageous and economical operation of its lines.

The new stock is to be allotted to the holders of the company's common and preferred stock to the extent of 15 per cent. of their holdings, as registered on the company's books on April 27. Payment is to be made in three installments—20 per cent. on May 25, 40 per cent. on July 16, and 40 per cent. on Sept. 17. Interest will be allowed at the rate of 5 per cent. after Sept. 1, 1906, from the date on which the installments are paid. This arrangement, in effect, secures for the subscribers to the company's stock the full 5 per cent. dividend now paid on the company's common stock from the date of subscription.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad has outstanding at present $124,558,000 common stock and $59,[illegible]13,800 of preferred stock. Within the past five years the common stock has been increased, exclusive of the present new stock issue, by nearly $80,000,000. In 1901 the issue of common stock was raised from $45,000,000 to $60,000,000 to provide for the conversion of $15,000,000 of debenture bonds, and in that same year the stockholders subscribed at par for a further issue of $22,537,200 of common stock.

The stock was again increased in 1902, when the stockholders again subscribed at par to $42,316.86 0common. There has been no increase in the common stock issue between 1902 and the present time.

MASONS PLAN MEMORIAL FOR GOV. TOMPKINS

Belated Honor to be Bestowed Upon a Patriot Long Dead.

HE DIED UNDER A CLOUD

Was Five Times Governor and Twice Vice President—Monument to Stand in City Hall Park.

In an obscure vault in the churchyard of St. Mark's, with a small, weather-beaten slab of stone to indicate his last resting place, lie the remains of the man who was most conspicuous in the State in the early years of the last century, and who, although at one time a National figure, died at last in poverty and under the blight of accusations which wrecked his life.

The shadow is now lifted from his name, but it is almost forgotten except to students of history and the members of an organization by whom it is cherished. True, a public square was named after him. Few, however, are aware of this.

This man, Daniel D. Tompkins, was five times Governor of the State of New York and twice Vice President of the United States. Through his endeavors slavery was abolished in this State. He was one of the most active figures in the war of 1812. It has been said in his behalf that he personally did more in the warfare on the Canadian border than the entire Federal Government.

It remained for one man, Judge Frank Hurd Robinson of Hornellsville, the present Grand Master of the Masonic order in the State of New York, to start the movement which will result in erecting a memorial to Gov. Tompkins in City Hall Park. Gov. Tompkins was Secretary of the Grand Lodge of the State from 1802 to 1804, and later Grand Master of the organization.

The beautiful model of the memorial is now on exhibition in the Masonic Temple, at Sixth Avenue and Twenty-third Street. It represents Gov. Tompkins seated in a large chair. The figure will be of bronze, resting on a white marble pedestal, with figures in relief on the sides. It will be twenty feet high. The pedestal will rest on a broad marble platform with curved walls at the sides and marble benches within. The pedestal will also be engraved with sentences indicating the patriot's services as Governor, Vice President, and Grand Master of Masons.

Gov. Tompkins was the son of Jonathan G. Tompkins, a Revolutionary soldier, and was born at Fox Meadows, (now Scarsdale,) in Westchester County, on June 21, 1774. He entered Columbia University, and was graduated in 1795. Two years later, upon his admission to the bar, he began to take an active interest in politics, and was a delegate to the State Constitutional Convention in 1801. He was elected to the Assembly that year, and was at once recognized as one of the Republican leaders in the State.

It was soon seen that his activities were fitted for a wider sphere, and in 1804 he was elected to Congress. He never attended the National body, however, for he resigned on July 2, before the next session, to take his seat as Associate Justice on the Supreme Court bench, a place having been made vacant by the election of James Kent to the Chief Justiceship.

He continued on the bench until June 9, 1807, when he resigned to oppose Morgan Lewis for the Governorship. He was elected by a majority of 4,000. The young Governor found himself in accord with the Legislature in the support of Jefferson's Administration. So happy were these relations and so dear was he to the hearts of the people that he was easily continued as Governor in 1809 and 1811.

In 1812 Gov. Tompkins, in his official capacity, performed an act unique in the history of the State. The United States Bank of Philadelphia had become defunct, and it was planned to establish the Bank of North America in New York City to succeed it. The Governor was opposed to this scheme, and under the powers then vested in him by the Constitution, he prorogued the Legislature to prevent its fulfillment. This was the single instance in which such power was exercised in this State.

This act excited the hostility of the Legislature, and when it reconvened the charter of the bank was immediately approved. The common people admired the Governor's boldness, but the enmity incurred among the legislators was felt at the succeeding election, and the Governor's majority was reduced in 1813 from 10,000 to 4,000.

Gov. Tompkins gave no outward sign that he was worried by this hostility, and his active patriotism in the war with Great Britain impressed the Nation. He put the militia early in the field, and his efforts along the Canadian border attracted wide attention. The banks of New York refused to lend money on the security of United States Treasury notes without the Governor's indorsement. He unhesitatingly pledged his personal and official credit right and left, and advanced the money to keep up the Military Academy at West Point, to continue the recruiting service in Connecticut, and to pay for the manufacture of arms at Springfield.

The Governor's energy in this direction went to the length of buying weapons from private citizens. These arms were delivered at the arsenal in New York City, and in a short time 40,000 militiamen were armed for the defense of New York, Plattsburg, Sackett's Harbor, and Buffalo.

At this time President Madison invited Gov. Tompkins to enter his Cabinet as Secretary of State, in the place of James Monroe, who had become Secretary of War, but the Governor declined, saying that he could accomplish more as Governor of New York. He was re-elected in 1815.

In April, 1816, Gov. Tompkins was nominated for the Vice Presidency and elected, with 183 Electoral votes out of a total of 217. Before resigning as Governor, on Jan. 28, 1817, he performed one of the most significant acts of his political career. In a message to the Legislature he recommended that a day be fixed for the abolition of slavery in the State. The Legislature acted at once, and set July 4, 1827, as emancipation day.

He was re-elected Vice President in 1820, with 215 votes out of 228 to his credit. He was again proposed for Governor in the same year. His popularity had waned in the State, however, and enemies, unable to understand his accounts in the war of 1812, made charges of dishonesty against him.

The shock of these accusations was so great that the patriot's mind gave way, and he became the victim of a settled melancholy which he was unable to shake off. In desperation he sought refuge in dissipations which hastened his end. He retired to Staten Island, and died there, almost in want, on June 11, 1825.

Tardy justice was done in the matter of the war funds, and the State paid a considerable amount to his family.

The only previous effort in the direction of erecting a memorial to him was made a few years ago by the Daughters of the Revolution, who placed a monument at his birthplace.

Gov. Tompkins was a member of a Masonic lodge which met at Point Pleasant. The money for the memorial which is to find place in City Hall Park was contributed to the treasury of the Grand Lodge by the individual lodges in the State. Grand Secretary Ehlers said yesterday that credit for the enterprise was due to Judge Robinson.

Gov. Tompkins was one of the founders of the New York Historical Society, a corporator of the city schools, and a Regent of the State University.

MONEY AT NORMAL RATES.

Further Gold Imports to the Amount of $10,000,000 Are Predicted.

Fears of a possible return of monetary stringency yesterday, owing to the fact that loans made on Friday carry over until Monday, were not realized. On the contrary call money lent at only normal rates yesterday in marked contrast with the stringency which prevailed early in the week. The highest loan of the day was made at 6½ per cent., and from that the rate declined to 3 per cent. The average for the day was about 4 per cent., and that was the rate that prevailed at the close. Time money showed practically no change, 6 per cent. being quoted for the shorter periods and 5½ to 6 per cent. for loans running from four to six months.

Foreign exchange, which advanced very sharply when money eased off on Wednesday, showed some reaction yesterday. Demand sterling at the opening of the day sold up to 4.8515, but from that figure declined steadily to 4.8485. The market closed easy, at the low rate of the day.

As matters stood yesterday no further engagements of gold could be arranged, but the prediction was made in well-informed quarters that the gold which has already arrived on the present movement by no means marks the end of our gold imports. One estimate, made in a quarter more than usually well informed, placed the probable further gold imports at not less than $10,000,000. Such a large increase in New York's supply of cash, it is believed in banking circles, would aid very materially in reducing present interest rates to the level usual at this time of the year.

Standing call loans were very generally renewed yesterday morning at 6 per cent. or less. Some of the large banking houses made a point of notifying early in the day those who were borrowing from them that their loans would be renewed at the 6 per cent. rate.

ROCK ISLAND'S PURCHASE.

'Frisco System Has Acquired All Colorado Southern Rights.

Official announcement was made yesterday of the interest acquired by the Rock Island-'Frisco system in the Colorado Southern, New Orleans & Pacific, the new line from New Orleans to Houston and in the so-called Yoakum lines in Texas, forming the connecting link between Forth Worth and Dallas and Houston and Galveston. This statement officially confirms the issuance of $7,500,000 five-year notes by the St. Louis & San Francisco to finance the New Orleans-Houston line, which was announced in THE TIMES on April 1.

The St. Louis & San Francisco, it developed, instead of merely entering into a traffic agreement with the Colorado Southern, New Orleans & Pacific, has acquired all the rights of that company. The Rock Island Company has also acquired a half interest in the Trinity & Brazos Valley Railway, which will form the connecting link between the present terminus of the Rock Island lines at Fort Worth and Dallas and Galveston and Houston.

These new acquisitions of the Rock Island-'Frisco system round out their lines in the Gulf territory, and will, it is expected, add largely to the traffic of the two systems controlled by the Rock Island Company.

Jury in Fitzgerald Suit Locked Up.

The suit of Morris C. Menges against Gen. Louis Fitzgerald for $1,000,000 went to the jury at 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. When the jury had not agreed at a late hour in the afternoon, Justice Sutherland ordered them locked up in the Hotel Clarendon for the night. The suit is based on an agreement that Mr. Menges alleges Gen. Fitzgerald made with him, and by which, he says, Gen. Fitzgerald agreed to give him $1,000,000 for information which enabled Gen. Fitzgerald and a syndicate to purchase the Western Railway of Maryland.

The rather surprising defeat of the New York National League team yesterday at the hands of the Philadelphia team, after McGraw's men had what appeared to be a winning lead at the close of the eighth inning, puts the world's champions tied with the Quakers for fourth place, with the Boston, Chicago, and Pittsburg teams in the lead and on even terms. Brooklyn was fairly outplayed by the Bostons, Chicago gave "Ned" Hanlon's Cincinnati team another bad beating, but at St. Louis the ex-champion Pittsburgs were unable to play on account of rain.

QUAKERS' LIVELY FINISH.

Tie New York in Ninth Inning and Beat Them in Tenth.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 13.—During a fit of temporary generosity to-day the Philadelphias handed the game over to the New York champions for a couple of innings, and then just to show the 10,041 spectators what they can do they tied the score in the ninth inning, and then batted out a victory in the tenth, capturing the second game of the series by the score of 5 to 4. Errors of omission and commission, plentifully distributed, were responsible for New York scoring, as with perfect fielding the champions would have been shut out and there would have been no need of even playing the full nine innings.

Frank Sparks, who might well lay claim to the honors as a hard luck pitcher, was working to-day, and so was his luck. It came in the shape of poor support, and finally resulted in the little pitcher being removed from the game by Manager Duffy, when with proper fielding he would have landed an easy victory.

McGinnity, the "Iron Man," was hit hard from start to finish. His delivery was solved at most opportune times. Manager McGraw kept him in the box the entire game, however, and in the ninth and tenth innings he was hit for two doubles and three singles, which with two wild pitches gave the home team a well-earned victory.

The local players outbatted the champions, but their work in the field was in poor contrast to that of the Giants. All four of the home team's errors were made on chances which should have been easy, and three of the four figured in the run getting. The errors of omission, however, were the direct cause of the New Yorks taking the lead in the eighth inning, when they scored two runs after the side should have been retired with a blank. At other times the fielding of the Philadelphias was spectacular, and several plays were deserving of the applause received.

It was not until the third inning that the first run was scored, and that was credited to the local team. Dooin started off with a single and Sparks sacrificed. On Thomas's out by Devlin to McGann, Dooin reached third. He scored shortly afterward on Gleason's safe hit. The New Yorks tied the game in the fifth. Gleason fumbled Mertes's grounder, while Dahlen placed a good hit into left field. Devlin made a good sacrifice, and on Gilbert's ground hit to Bransfield Mertes scored. It was a close decision, and the local Captain vigorously protested.

Philadelphia also scored in the fifth. After Doolin had been caught out by Donlin, Dooin hit for two bases to right field. Sparks was easily thrown out at first by Gilbert, but Thomas made a good hit to left, on which Dooin tallied. The champions assumed the lead for the first time in the sixth on Donlin's single, his steal to second, and the fumbling by Doolin of Devlin's ground ball. In the eighth inning the New Yorks increased their lead by good batting of McGann, Mertes, Dahlen, and Devlin.

In the ninth the local men tied the score on Sentelle's one base hit, Titus's double, which tallied Sentelle, and on a wild pitch Titus reached third, and on Bransfield's double he crossed the plate. The winning run was scored by Thomas, who got first on a safe hit. A wild pitch put him on second. On Gleason's out Thomas went to third, and he scored on Sentelle's single. The score:

BROOKLYN AGAIN BEATEN.

Failure to Bat and Costly Errors Give Tenney's Team Game by 7 to 4.

The Brooklyn team did not play nearly so well against the Bostons at Washington Park yesterday as it did on the opening day, and the result was another defeat, the score being 7 to 4. Besides being deficient at the bat, Donovan's men committed a number of inexcusable errors and of a damaging character. On the other hand, Boston played an almost perfect fielding game, batted safely and freely, and derived a great advantage from Pfeffer's excellent pitching.

Barring the first inning, the Brooklyns were almost at the mercy of the ex-Chicagoan. Pfeffer never showed to better advantage since his connection with the National League, for, besides striking out nine men, he made a batting average of .500 and fielded his position admirably. Stricklett had one damaging inning, the second. Five single hits were made off his delivery in that inning, but hardly one could be called clean-cut. With the aid of a fumble by Lewis and Bergen's bad throw, four runs were the result.

Two dropped fly balls were also charged against the Brooklyns, one by McCarthy costing his team two runs, while Maloney's fumble of Strobel's fast hit in the sixth inning came as a great surprise. Both balls should have been easily caught, but in each instance they were badly misjudged. Gessler's work at first base was one of the special features of the game, and he excelled at the bat for Brooklyn, being credited with a three-base hit in the first inning and a double in the last inning. Alperman, a new recruit from the Davenport (Iowa) Club of the Three I League, played second base for the local team in place of Hummel, who has left for his home in Bloomsburg, Penn., on account of the dangerous illness of his mother, and proved himself a clever fielder.

The Bostons started their run getting in the second ... made the fourth run in the third on a base on balls, a steal, and Lewis's safe hit. The score:

CHICAGO, 5; CINCINNATI, 1.

CINCINNATI, April 13.—Two errors, each followed by a home run, were responsible for four of the five runs scored by Chicago in to-day's game. Wicker was steadier than Harper and never was in danger of defeat. The support accorded him was perfect, it being the second errorless game played by the Chicagos in two days. The score:

AMERICANS READY TO PLAY.

Greater New Yorks Will Meet Ex-Champion Bostons To-day.

The American League will begin its sixth championship season to-day, the Eastern clubs only being scheduled to play. In the West the first games will not be contested until next Tuesday. At American League Park, where the Greater New Yorks will meet the Bostons to-day and Monday, arrangements to celebrate the opening have been prepared on a rather elaborate scale. The grand stand and clubhouse will be handsomely decorated with vari-colored bunting and the flags of all nations, and, in addition to the usual parade of the players across the field, a number of other interesting features have been provided. A special musical programme will be given by the Old Guard Band.

John Montgomery Ward, the Giants' old Captain and one of the best players of his day, has accepted the invitation of the club officials to throw the ball that will mark the beginning of the game upon the field. The Subway station at 167th Street is now open, and patrons of the game will now be landed within one short block of the entrance gate. The two teams will play as follows:

COLUMBIA WINS AND LOSES.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 13.—Columbia defeated Johns Hopkins in a well-played game this morning by a score of 5 to 1. Only seven innings were contested, as Columbia later crossed bats with the Baltimore Eastern League team, by which the New York lads were shut out, 22 to 0. The game between the two 'Varsity teams was a pitchers' contest, with Campbell of Hopkins and Kreuger of Columbia at their best. Score by innings:

Turf and Field Club Meeting.

A meeting of the Board of Governors of the Turf and Field Club was held at the office of the club in the Windsor Arcade yesterday with Perry Belmont presiding, and Governors Brayton Ives, F. R. Hitchcock, R. B. Van Cortlandt, and R. T. Wilson, Jr., present. The following were elected members: D. L. Hough, Effingham Laurence, Newbold Morris, Eugene Gallatin, G. A. G. Sage, John C. King, Rowland Smith, Ellery O. Anderson, William Iselin, and Frederick Johnson.

Baseball Pass for President Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—A handsome, gold-mounted pass to all American League baseball games throughout the country was presented to President Roosevelt to-day by President Ban Johnson of the American League. Mr. Johnson was introduced to the President by Henry L. West, a Commissioner of the District of Columbia. The two Presidents had a pleasant chat about out-of-door sports in general and baseball in particular. In thanking Mr. Johnson for the courtesy extended to him, President Roosevelt promised to avail himself, if possible, of the opportunity to witness one or more of the games played by American League teams in Washington.

BAILEY FUNERAL TO-DAY.

150 Carriages Engaged for the Services for the Circus King.

The funeral of the late James A. Bailey, the Circus King, who died at his country home, The Knolls, will be held at Mount Vernon at 2 o'clock this afternoon. It promises to be the biggest funeral ever held there. One hundred and fifty carriages have been engaged to convey those who attend from Mount Vernon to Woodlawn Cemetery.

There was such a universal desire on the part of the performers and other attaches of the circus to see their dead chief for the last time that Mrs. Bailey yielded to their wishes, and they will leave the Grand Central Station on the 11:03 A. M. train, and proceed to the house in a body. After viewing the remains the performers will return to the city. The business staff will leave the Grand Central Station at 1:05 P. M.

Nearly a carload of flowers have been received at the Bailey home. The business staff sent a huge anchor, and the women performers sent a floral gift. The midgets, the giant, and other freaks who knew Mr. Bailey for years also sent offerings.

Although no definite announcement has been made, it is said that Mrs. Bailey would like her brother, Joseph Terry McCaddon, of Mount Vernon, to act as manager of the circus in the future.

WAVE FELLS ATHLETES AND FIVE ARE INJURED

Great Sea Washes Over Ship with Olympic Team Aboard.

MITCHEL AND HILLMAN OUT?

Two Possible Winners May Not Be Able to Compete in the Games at Athens.

GIBRALTAR, April 13.—The North German Lloyd steamer Barbarossa, which left New York on April 3 for Naples, having on board the American team of athletes to compete in the Olympic games at Athens, Greece, arrived here to-day and reported all on board well.

A private cablegram from Gibraltar received at the New York Athletic Clubhouse yesterday announced the injury en route of five of the members of the American team and the possible disability of two of them. The mishap was met with on the second day out from New York, and resulted from the striking of the ship by a huge wave, which narrowly escaped washing the five men overboard and threw them all to the deck. James S. Mitchel, the weight thrower, had his left shoulder dislocated, and Harry L. Hillman, the hurdler and runner, had his knee lacerated, while three others were more or less bruised by the force of the concussion. These were Harvey Cohn, the distance runner; H. W. Kerrigan, the high jumper, and M. J. Sheridan, the discus thrower and all-around champion. F. A. Bornemann, the diver, was also in the crash, but escaped injury. It is feared that Mitchel and Hillman may be unable to compete in the games.

The six men were on the forward deck at the time, and totally unprepared for the heavy blow that struck the ship. Every one of them was thrown from his feet and only good fortune prevented them being hurled against or over the rail. Mitchel fell very heavily, landing on his arm, and Hillman on his knee. The others escaped by fortunately falling so that they were merely shocked. An examination revealed the fact that Mitchel's shoulder had been dislocated and Hillman's knee ligaments badly twisted.

The latter injury, if it does not put Hillman out of the game entirely, will certainly affect his running adversely. It will put him out of the contest in the 440-yard race, which is one of the hardest the men will have to face, and in which he was the best man of the squad, and will handicap him in hurdles, where he was not expected to have so hard a contest. As to Mitchel, while he may be able to put the shot, even with an injured left shoulder, it will certainly affect his throwing of a weight for height, in which the left arm plays as important a part as the right.

The effect of the loss of these two men on the general chances of the team would be serious. Halswell, the English champion, and Cornwallis, the Oxford runner, are both better than 50 seconds in the quarter mile, and many considered that they could beat Hillman if the latter was even slightly off color. Neither Shick nor Moulton is good for better than 50 seconds, and probably both would be beaten by the Englishmen. It may be necessary to put Lightbody in the race, since he is the fastest man in the squad with the exception of Hillman, but this might affect his running in the longer distances.

In the hurdles no doubt Friend and Leavitt can take care of their competitors without missing Hillman, though it would be safer to have him in the race, while in the shot Sheridan and Sullivan no doubt can do as well as Mitchel, but neither of these men is nearly his equal in the heavier weights, where he was considered to have a certainty of winning. These two men, in fact, were the two above all others who seemed most sure to win first places, a fact that illustrates the particularly hard luck in which the team is playing.

All six of the men who were in the accident are in fact the strongest men in each of their respective events.

MOURNING FOR SLOOP ALYCE.

Yachting friends of Harry A. Jackson, Jr., Chairman of the New York Athletic Club's Yachting Committee and Secretary of the Handicap Yacht Class, were shocked yesterday to receive in the mail post cards bearing, in deep mourning border, the following inscription:

> SOLD,
> Suddenly, on April 8, 1906, at her late moorings at Travers Island, the ALYCE, beloved sweetheart of Harry A. Jackson, Jr.
> PLEASE OMIT FLOWERS.

The Alyce was entered in a half dozen important races in the coming season, and was expected to cut quite a figure in the cruising events. She was in fine shape, and N. H. French of New Rochelle, who visited her at her moorings, fell in love with her and offered so advantageous a price for her that the bargain was made. Jackson will buy a twenty-five-foot sloop, probably a sister ship to Babs, bought by C. W. King. Mr. French will probably race the Alyce in her engagements.

Hopkins's Yawl to be Launched To-day

At 4 o'clock this afternoon the new auxiliary yawl which has been building from designs by Henry J. Gielow for George B. Hopkins of the New York Yacht Club at Jacob's Yard, City Island, will leave the ways and take her maiden plunge. She will be christened Sieglinde, and will fly the private signal of her owner cruising on the Sound during the coming Summer. Work on her will be rushed, and she will be ready for delivery by May 10, to go into commission at once.

While an auxiliary, the craft is really intended for sailing potentially. She carries an unusually large sail plan for her inches, and will be able to make good speed under full spread of canvas. Her 40 horse power Standard engine will drive her eight miles an hour if necessary.

With an over all length of 94 feet, she is 64 feet 8 inches on the water line, has a 20-foot beam, and draws 9 feet 4 inches. She is a flush deck keel boat, with trunk cabin that affords liberal accommodations within her.

The boat will give a good account of herself.

PARADE AND HORSE SHOW.

Big Entry List for Annual Road Drivers' Event on May 5.

The seventh annual parade and horse show of the Road Drivers' Association will be held on Saturday, May 5. The route of the parade will be from 110th Street and Seventh Avenue, thence to 155th Street to the Viaduct, to the Speedway, where the parade will be reviewed by the public officials at the clubhouse grand stand. Nathan L. Ely, the Grand Marshal, expects at least 500 entries in line, and invitations have been extended to all owners of horses to take part in the parade.

One of the most important features of the annual event will be the horse show, for which exhibitors must be members of a recognized horse association. Horses will be judged on general appearance, soundness, manners, and action. Three rosettes will be awarded in each class. Thirteen classes will be included in the six divisions, the classes being as follows: Trotters—Horses to one-man speed wagons and teams to one or two man wagons. Trotting roadsters—Horses to runabouts and teams to surreys or traps. Pacers—Horses to one-man speed wagons, teams to one or two man wagons. Pacing roadsters—Horses to runabouts. Short-tail horses—Special, open for novelty hitches to appropriate vehicles permitted on the Speedway, horses to runabouts, teams to runabouts, and horses to spider phaeton or trap. Ladies' classes—Horses to runabouts and teams to spider phaeton or suitable vehicles permitted on the Speedway. All the show horses will be assigned positions in the parade, and all entries close Monday, April 23.

Daimler Won Hill-Climbing Test.

An interesting hill climbing contest was held yesterday at Viaduct Hill, at Claremont, between an English Daimler, Pope Toledo, and Pope Hartford. The test, which was for a wager of $100 made by J. E. De Mar and F. E. Spencer, was witnessed by a big crowd of autoists, and was won by the English Daimler in 0:33 2-5. The Pope Toledo was second, in 0:53, and the Pope Hartford third, 0:08 4-5 behind the Toledo. H. N. Harding, who drove the Daimler, made five trials and won easily from the two American machines. Judd, the professional chauffeur for the Pope Manufacturing Company, handled the two Pope automobiles.

HOPPE AND CURE WIN IN BILLIARD TOURNEY

Sutton in Night Contest Makes Meeting's High Run.

MORNINGSTAR EASILY BEATEN

Record Attendance Marks the Day's Play in the Madison Square Garden Concert Hall.

The French billiard expert, Louis Cure, and the youthful champion, William F. Hoppe, yesterday were the winners in the continuation of the international championship tournament in the Madison Square Garden Concert Hall. It fell to George Sutton, the American, to count the record run of the tournament at the eighteen-inch balk line, two counts in balk, by putting together 168 by deft and careful nursing. Despite this large portion of his score, Sutton met his first defeat at the hands of Cure, who likewise scored his first victory, by 500 to 427. The big run alone saved Sutton from an overwhelming defeat, as at the time he made it he was 224 behind Cure.

Hoppe easily won over Ora Morningstar in the matinée contest by 500 to 207, which is the widest margin of the meeting. The averages were not high, but the playing was so diversified as to please the large gathering of spectators at both matches. Because of his defeat last night Sutton, who had recently been talked of as a favorite for the championship, drops down to third or fourth place, while Cure may now be able to get the smallest portion of the prize money.

There was a freakishness about the manner in which the ivory globes rolled during the evening contest that certainly entitled them to a premier position among the circus curiosities in another portion of the building. Sutton labored with the spheres, prodding them with his cue, and could accomplish nothing. The Frenchman Cure played the clown to the rouge and the blanco, and in response the carroms came trippingly as if in merry bursts of laughter. Under Cure's touch, which was better and steadier than in any of his previous contests, the balls began to roll out the carroms upon his fourth turn at the table.

He only added 10 to his string then, but that was more due to carelessness than anything else, and the following inning proved remunerative for a total of 85 before he retired. Two innings later the Frenchman coaxed the balls into close range, and with great rapidity counted an even hundred. It was a varied assortment in which the balk line actually played an important part. This was because Cure established a line position during the middle section of the run, and by a Schaeferesque nurse he bridged the open table billiards at the beginning and end of the run with better and more brilliant cue manipulation than he had previously shown.

This big run brought Cure up to a total of 205, while Sutton had only been successful in counting 66. Sutton could not obtain the close position of the ivories for the nurse, and the balls kept breaking so badly for him that he wore o most woebegone expression of countenance as he sat in his chair watching Cure make the carroms that would not come to him. When Cure backed up his big cluster with 76, 44, and 46, bringing his total up to 371, as against the 76 of Sutton's string, the chances of his even approaching the French player at the finish appeared remote.

But even in billiard matches misfortune does not follow a player like a Nemesis and the rebellious spheres ceased from playing Sutton bad tricks when he chalked his cue for his twelfth turn. He came near to getting the line nurse during this inning, by which he was enabled to add 52 to his string and turn his first hundred mark. Easier rolling of the balls produced 21 for him on his next turn, and then Sutton carefully calculated his shots, and the third inning following this small but clever bit Sutton attained the line nurse, and swinging his cue with the perfection of a pendulum stroke, he counted 168, making the record run of the tournament by surpassing Slosson's 153. Sutton held the balls very close during his delicate and deft manipulation. Once he lost them at the 145th count, but he brought them together again, and it was a difficult single-cushion shot in which he smeared the cue ball with heavy reverse english to prevent the three from spreading away from the corner that he missed and terminated the best single inning that the tournament has produced.

Such a remarkable effort called forth prolonged applause, especialy as upon the marker showing the scores it was seen that Sutton had jumped to within striking distance of Cure, the tally stading 394 to 324. By the most persistent of billards Cure was unable to break away from the close proximinty at which Sutton held him for a number of innings. The Frenchman was unable to get the balls rolling properly and the poor showin gfor five innings was only relieved upon the American getting a nurse, which he combined with the dead ball drive until he had put together 60 carroms for his twenty-second turn.

Cure retaliated with 58, and as he held the balls under perfect command of his willow wand he threatened to finish, but an untimely freezing of the globes in a line along the end rail forced him to respot and he missed. Sutton valiantly endeavored to install another run in his string, but the ivories were rebellious again, and 19 was the best he could do. Right at the beginning of Cure's last turn he solved a facer with the balls lined on the rail and the cue ball so far out that he could not reach it for a massé. He drove his cue ball in a double V across the table, first taking the white and then the red. It was a daringly brilliant shot, and it made things smooth for him to the end of his string, he gaining the victotry by 73 points. The summary:

Cure—1 5 5 10 85 0 1 100 76 44 46 1 2 5 1 14 0 12 9 4 0 59 22. Total—500 points. Average—21 17-23. High runs—100, 85, and 59.

Sutton—6 0 6 13 2 4 7 31 1 9 0 52 21 2 5 168 8 2 19 0 0 60 19. Total—427 points. Average—18 13-23. High runs—168, 60, and 52.

Referee—Edward McLaughlin.

Long before beginning the afternoon game the popularity of the young champion, William F. Hoppe, was to be seen in the line that extended from the box office westward to the corner of Madison Square. It was composed of bankers, brokers, and clubmen, who were taking advantage of the Good Friday half-holiday to witness the matinée. Hoppe did not disappoint them, for he was at the pinnacle of his game, which depends for carroms upon daring and surety of execution, and, while he was unable to steadily put together his runs, he still defeated Ora Morningstar by the score of 500 points to 207. His method made it well-nigh impossible for him to finish with a record average, and the best he could do was 19 6-23.

The young holder of the world's eighteen-inch balk line, one count in balk, who began twelve years ago to dally with the cue and pool balls in the backroom of his father's barber's shop at Cornwall-on-Hudson, was at all stages the master of the match against Morningstar. His remarkable ball-to-ball billiards showing a daring and proficient execution, caused his second turn at the table to [illegible] before he missed on a two-cush[illegible] During this run, and for that ma[illegible] along through the contest, Hoppe [illegible]enced repeated lining-up of [illegible] globes. It was in counting th[illegible] Hoppe negotiated two of his [illegible] which the cue ball caught the white as it rebounded from the cushion.

Hoppe played wrong shots and so unevenly after this good bit of work that his next nine turns at the green plateau only produced a total of 78 carroms. Morningstar also was shooting badly, but he managed to get in a run of 37 on his ninth inning, which contained a number of carromic gems. The best was a three-cushion drive which sent both object balls rolling and finally brought them all together in one of the corners. Nearly all of Hoppe's runs during this period of lapse were caused by the three ivory spheres getting on a line with the cue ball at either end.

Hoppe counted the best put together cluster of carroms, a scintillating array of 105, in his twelfth inning. There were line ups galore in it, but by dexterity of cue handling the champion made them serve the purpose of showing his skill and ability at hard propositions and as a piquant sauce for the more trustworthy ball to ball and cushion shots. He played more steadily for four innings following this good run, adding consecutively 3, 84, 38, and 58 to his string and turning into his last hundred points at his sixteenth inning. It took him the next ten innings to finish the match. The summary:

Hoppe—0, 23, 13, 1, 6, 3, 0, 18, 3, 0, 29, 105, 3, 84, 38, 58, 0, 4, 1, 4, 1, 50, 1, 2, 9, 10. Total—500 points. Average—19 6-26. High runs—105, 93, and 58.

Morningstar—0, 0, 1, 5, 6, 11, 1, 2, 37, 0, 22, 17, 6, 15, 11, 2, 0, 22, 4, 8, 1, 25, 3, 0, 8, 2. Total—207 points. Average—7 25-26. High runs—37, 25, and 22. Referee—Edward McLaughlin.

The schedule of matches for to-day will bring together Schaefer and Sutton in the matinée contest, and in the evening Hoppe will meet Slosson, his recent veteran challenger for the 18.1 championship.

CHALLENGE FOR HOPPE.

Champion and Schaefer May Play in Metropolitan Opera House.

William F. Hoppe, the youngest billiard champion that the game has ever known, yesterday afternoon accepted a challenge from the old holder of billiard honors, Jacob Schaefer. The latter wished to challenge after the present tournament is over, either for Hoppe's holding of the 18.1 title or for the 18.2 honors, which he may yet annex. Hoppe would not agree to so consider a challenge, as the rules allow him a period of sixty days in which to make known his reply to a challenge and the naming of the date and place of contest. Schaefer wishes to contest immediately at the end of the present tournament, or at least within two weeks.

After some talk upon the matter Hoppe agreed to meet Schaefer in a five nights' match at either 18.1 or 18.2, but not for the championship title or emblem, the match possibly to be held in the Metropolitan Opera House. In the event of the match not being played there it is probable that it will be held in one of the large halls in Brooklyn, as the backer of Schaefer for the match hails from that borough. The general details of the contest between the boy and the veteran will not be decided until after the present tournament is over.

MILLER RIDES FIVE WINNERS.

Has a Mount in Every Race at Benning—Finishes Third Once.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—While the card offered by the Washington Jockey Club as a Good Friday attraction at Benning was not particularly inviting, the races developed good sport, and the large crowd present was pleased. Five favorites and a strong second choice finished first in the six races.

The real feature was the riding of Jockey Miller. He had a mount in every event, winning the last five races and finishing third in the first. When he landed Sailor Boy two lengths in front of Peter Paul in the sixth the spectators cheered him heartily, and he was cordially congratulated when he rode back to the stand to weigh in.

The handicap at a mile, which was offered as the sixth event, was the best race of the afternoon. Speculation on it was heavy, as good prices were obtainable against all of the starters. The Daly entry, Sailor Boy and Amberjack, finally went to the post a bare favorite over Royal Window in the odds for the place. At the rise of the barrier Miller took Sailor Boy out to the front, and he was in no danger afterward, finishing, eased up, two lengths in front of Peter Paul. All of the other races were won in hollow fashion. Summary:

FIRST RACE.—Selling, for three-year-olds and upward; five and a half furlongs, Columbia course. Monte Carlo, 97 pounds, (Diggins,) 3½ to 1 and 9 to 5, won; Cassandra, 90, (J. Johnson,) 15 to 1 and 6 to 1, second; Hyperion, 110, (Miller,) 7 to 1, third. Time—1:09 2-5. Blue Coat, Chieftain, Pat Dunphy, Nil, Loricate, Plantagenet, Fire Escape, Gentian, Edgely, Arietta, and Baby Willie also ran.

SECOND RACE.—For two-year-old fillies and geldings, maidens and winners of only one race; half a mile, old course. Lady Vera, 102 pounds, (Miller,) 7 to 20 and out, won; Mary Custis, 99, (T. Burns,) 3 to 1 and 4 to 5, second; Manana, 99, (Treubel,) 6 to 1, third. Time—0:51. Moccasin also ran.

THIRD RACE.—For colts, maiden two-year-olds and winners of only one race; four and a half furlongs, old course. Tileing, 102 pounds, (Miller,) 4 to 1 and 11 to 20, won; Campaigner, 105, (McDaniel,) 2 to 5 and out, second; Rye Boy, 102, (Treubel,) 100 to 1, third. Time—0:58 3-5. Glimmer and Lork Pike also ran.

FOURTH RACE.—Selling, for three-year-olds and upward; seven furlongs, Columbia course. Pacon, 100 pounds, (Miller,) 2 to 1 and 4 to 5, won; Parkville, 112, (Diggins,) 5 to 1 and 2 to 1, second; Echodale, 112, Keyes, 10 to 1, third. Time—1:30 2-5. Samuel H. Harris, Edict, Tomcod, and Dixie Andrews also ran.

FIFTH RACE.—For maidens three years old; seven furlongs, Columbia course. Riggs, 103 pounds, (Miller,) 3 to 5 and out, won; Adonis, 103, (Treubel,) 3 to 1 and 9 to 5, second; Tarlac, 106, (P. Walsh,) 15 to 1, third. Time—1:31. Radical, Contractor, and Waterway also ran.

SIXTH RACE.—Handicap, for three-year-olds and upward; one mile, Columbia course. Sailor Boy, 114 pounds, (Miller,) 8½ to 1 and 6 to 5, won; Peter Paul, 118, (McDaniel,) 7 to 1 and 2¼ to 1, second; Royal Window, 100, (Treubel,) 3½ to 1, third. Time—1:48 2-5. Amberjack, Bill Curtis, Winchester, Northville, and Old Guard also ran.

Benning Entries for To-day.

AUTOISTS INDIGNANT OVER L'HOMMEDIEU BILL

Say That Amendments in Good Roads Interests Are Lacking.

OPPOSITION NOW AROUSED

Should the Bill Pass Assembly, Efforts Will Be Made to Secure the Governor's Veto.

Automobilists were considerably perturbed yesterday upon learning that the L'Hommedieu bill, which recently passed the Senate at Albany and is now in the Assembly, does not contain some of the most important amendments suggested by the automobilists during the hearing at Albany about two weeks ago. President O. A. Quayle of the New York State Automobile Association informed President Dave Hennen Morris of the Automobile Club of America and Charles T. Terry, counsel of the National Association of Automobile Manufacturers, of these discrepancies yesterday over the long-distance telephone.

It is claimed by the automobile representatives who attended the hearing that the amendments were agreed to by Senator L'Hommedieu, and by the failure to place them in the bill the automobile clubs now contend that they are relieved of all obligation, and unless the changes can be made they will do all in their power to defeat the bill. Should it pass the Assembly in its present shape, influence will be brought to bear upon Gov. Higgins to veto the bill.

The chief contention that the autoists make is that the provision to use the money collected by fines for the improvement and maintenance of the highways has not been placed in the bill. A year ago, when it was proposed to tax automobiles, owners of cars did not object to a reasonable tax, but they insisted that the money collected for that purpose should be devoted solely for good-road purposes. Not only the annual tax, but the fines collected were to be used for this purpose.

The representatives of the State Association, the Automobile Club of America, and the National Association of Automobile Manufacturers all insisted upon this provision in the interests of good roads. Charles T. Terry, who argued the point for the automobile manufacturers, was surprised to learn yesterday that no effort had been made to change the original form of the bill in this respect. He said that no time would be lost in ascertaining why the amendments had not been incorporated in the bill, and unless the required changes could be made every effort would be put forth to defeat the bill.

The bill provides for a registration fee of $2, which will be paid when the car is registered and the number secured. This fee will only be paid once—that is, a car once registered will not have to pay another fee as long as it is in use by the original owner. In addition, however, an annual fee or tax will be imposed of $1 for every 500 pounds or fraction thereof in weight. At present automobilists only pay a registration fee. There has been a growing tendency within recent years that, owing to the severe road usage by motor cars, a tax should be imposed according to weight. The propriety of this has been recognized by automobile clubs throughout the State, but they very justly claimed that if taxed for the wear and tear of the roads the money so paid should go into a general good roads fund for repairs and maintenance.

FAST MOVES FOR THE CARTER.

The fastest trial of the Spring for the Carter Handicap, to be run Monday as the feature of the opening of the Aqueduct Spring meeting, was worked yesterday at the Jamaica track by Alex. Shields's five-year-old horse Ormonde's Right, winner of the stakes a year ago, the horse finishing six furlongs, or one furlong less than the Carter Handicap distance, in 1:13¾. Other trials at other tracks were in the main at the full distance of the Carter, but Ormonde's Right had the fastest move to his credit for the day or the entire training season. The work is to be the final gallop for the Shields horse.

The finishing trials for the Carter Handicap by the three most-fancied horses trained on the Gravesend race course also were held yesterday morning, when Roseben, Whimsical, and Belmere galloped against the watch under ideal conditions over the Brooklyn Jockey Club's track. Jacquin, stable mate to Roseben, also worked in company with the big sprinter, and though soundly beaten by his workmate, still is figured as a starter in the first important race of the New York season on Monday at the Aqueduct track.

The fastest trial of the morning at Gravesend went to the credit of the three-year-old filly Whimsical, owned and trained by T. J. Gaynor, her move being made over the full seven furlongs in 1:27¾, or a full second faster than Roseben's trial.

Whimsical had up about 100 pounds, or very close to the weight she is to carry on Monday. Roseben and Jacquin, trained by F. Weir, made their seven furlongs move hanging together for the first half mile at a pace that was faster than Whimsical carried, Roseben then shaking off Jacquin and finishing well off before his mate. Roseben was ridden by Lucien Lyne, who will have the mount in the Carter Handicap.

Belmere, trained by Fred Burlew, worked three-quarters of a mile handily in 1:15½, while Green Room, another Carter entry from the Burlew stable, went three-quarters in 1:16½. Other horses that worked at fair speed at Gravesend were Proper, three furlongs in 0:38; Clark Griffith, six furlongs in 1:16; Demund, one of Fred Burlew's two-year-olds, a quarter in 0:23½; Dixie Jane, another Burlew two-year-old, three furlongs in 0:37¾; Edna Jackson, a half mile in 0:49, and the rejuvenated First Water, a half mile in 0:50½.

At Sheepshead Bay the most prominent stable to figure in the morning work was that of A. J. Joyner, with Cairngorm and Tradition, both of which are declared out of the Carter Handicap, doing six furlongs in 1:23, while Woolwich, Blandy, and Oaklawn did a similar move in about the same notch. David Gideon's Astronomer worked a half mile in 0:55, and the Russian horse, Flis, trained by Frank Frisbie, was sent five furlongs in 1:07. The James R. Keene horses had an easy day, as the morning previous Trainer James Rowe varied the routine of his training by sending the more prominent horses to walk on the road, winding up at the Brighton track, where they galloped. Other work of merit at Jamaica was a half mile by the sprinter Diamond in 0:47½ and seven furlongs by Go Between and Jack Dolan in 1:30.

Automobile Notes of Interest.

The members of the Long Island Automobile Club will hold an informal run to-morrow to Garden City, starting from the clubhouse, 360 Cumberland Street, at 10:30 o'clock. A number of informal runs have been arranged for the coming weeks. Chairman Clinton B. Parker of the Runs and Tours Committee is arranging plans for the second economy run, which will be held early in the season.

Several entries have been received for the hill-climbing contest at Wilkesbarre, Penn., on May 10. Eight events have been arranged, one being for automobile trucks. Six events are for stock cars ranging in price from $1,000 to $8,000. Entries close with W. J. Morgan, 116 Nassau Street, on May 8. The hill is about a mile long and has a 22 per cent. grade.

Ernest Keeler has been selected by the Olds Motor Works to drive the Oldsmobile car that is now being built for the Vanderbilt Cup race. The car will have six cylinders, and will be completed in time to be thoroughly tried out before the elimination trials on Sept. 22.

Among the buyers of Lozier cars during the past week were A. Krower and Charles Kaye of this city and Henry L. Hotchkiss of New Haven. Millard F. Smith, who has had a Lozier limousine since last September, has secured a forty horse power Lozier touring car. The Lozier car is showing much popularity, when it is considered that this is but its second year on the market.

A notable feature of the automobile trade this Spring is the briskness of the demand for electric carriages. The Electric Vehicle Company is very busy supplying orders for Columbia runabouts and victoria-phaetons, especially the latter, which may be classed as one of the most popular of light automobiles.

After May 1 the Hartford Suspension Company will be located in its new building, at Broadway and Eighty-eighth Street, and the factory will be moved from Hudson Street to the corner of Clarkson and West Streets.

Yale Oarsmen Watch Harvard Crews.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 13.—Captain R. C. Morse and Coach Kennedy of the Yale 'Varsity crew spent the afternoon as guests of Capt. Filley of the Harvard crew in a launch on the Charles River, where they watched the daily practice of the Crimson oarsmen. Both Yale men expressed the opinion that the Harvard crew showed unusual form at this early stage of the practice season. The crew ceased work to-day for the Easter vacation.

Trotter Anzella Going to Russia.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, April 13.—O. G. Kent of this city has sold his trotter Anzella, 2:06¾, and a four-year-old McKerron filly to Frank Caton, the Russian trainer, for $3,250. The deal was closed yesterday, and the pair will be shipped to St. Petersburg, where the mare will be raced this season.

Oldsmobile Challenges Again

The Oldsmobile Raises the Limit

1,000

The scope of the recent Oldsmobile challenge for a public hill-climbing contest was unfortunately limited.

The car directly challenged by the Oldsmobile, or any other car costing $1,000 more than the price—$2,250—of the Oldsmobile Palace Touring Car, is hereby invited to enter the contest under the following conditions:

That the Oldsmobile Palace Touring Car, costing $2,250, and all other cars entering, shall carry its full quota of passengers, and be inspected by the Technical Committee of the American Automobile Association to see that all cars are equipped with stock gears as regularly sold to the public, and that the judges of the contest shall be the Automobile Editors of the New York daily papers, and the exact performance of each car shall be published.

THE PRESIDENT TO THE GERMANS.

Mr. ROOSEVELT made on Thursday an address to a group of German veterans, most of whom are American citizens. What he had to say to the Americans of German birth in the party is what he has said often, and always rightly, mutatis mutandis, to Americans of various provenance, enforcing the sentiment of "unflinching loyalty to our common country." It was a happy coincidence that this was said, on this occasion, in the presence also of German officers and of the German Ambassador.

What he had to say as to the relations of Germany and the United States, of the "many and close ties that unite" us, and of the "object of our statesmanship to knit the two nations ever closer together," was also well said. In view of the rumors that have attained circulation recently it was eminently what is known in diplomacy as a "correct" utterance. We cannot regard his remarks as to the specific subject of the Algeciras Conference as equally fortunate. His statement that the "outcome of this conference" "has secured equitable dealing as among the foreign Powers who have commercial relations with Morocco" varies slightly from the facts in this that such "equitable dealing" was fully secured by the agreement between France and Great Britain, Spain, and Italy, and neither needed nor has received additional security from the conference. The statement of the President is one that may be read by the Foreign Ministers of the four nations just mentioned with some surprise and possibly not without some sense of annoyance. It was hardly required for the general friendly effect of the little address, and might with advantage have been omitted. The President concluded:

> In particular it may not be out of place for me to say that I hope and believe that the conference has resulted and will result in rendering continually more friendly the relations between the mighty Empire of Germany and the mighty Republic of France; for it is my hope and wish, as it must be the hope and wish of every sincere well-wisher of humankind, that these friendly relations may not only continue unbroken, but may ever grow in strength.

The sentiment is commendable; the hope is natural; the belief is, at least, extremely sanguine.

BANKING, CREDIT, AND SPECULATION.

Compared with a year ago the loans and discounts of Clearing House institutions have decreased $99,004,142, or, roughly, double the decrease of reserves by $50,705,395. This does not support the view of those who have advanced the proposition that excessive stock-market speculation was the cause of the credit strain. If the cash had not decreased the supply of accommodation would have been ample. The decrease of cash is not due to local causes, but to demands from out of town for the most legitimate of uses, namely, money for the planting season, and the reinforcement of country bank reserves as required by a swelling volume of business. No one would contest the proposition that it is wholesome to check excessive speculation, either in commodities or securities. It is better to abort South Sea bubbles than to explode them.

On the other hand, liquidation for the sake of liquidation is about as reasonable as a surgical operation for the sake of the operation, instead of for its results. An operation where there is no disease is an absurdity. The United States is the only country in the world which plants and harvests its crops by stock-market liquidation, and we are now applying the same painful and costly process to check a boom whose speculative qualities are matter of varying estimate. Mr. HEPBURN lends the weight of his opinion against those who have viewed with alarm an inordinate increase in security prices. He is quoted as saying that Wall Street security prices are warranted by the volume of business and the earnings therefrom. But Mr. HEPBURN accompanies this cheering view by a warning against speculation throughout the country in mines and real estate. That concerns us because the speculation elsewhere is supported by funds which this centre has been accustomed to rely upon. It is the withdrawal of those funds and the unaccustomed retention of them which check optimism fostered by other conditions. It is the sins of others which are being visited upon this money market. The operation is upon the wrong patient, or for the wrong disease, and we are asked to look cheerful because liquidation is so wholesome. We would rather consult another school of currency doctors.

THE SOLE EXCEPTION.

Justice BREWER has not yet eliminated from his decision in the Michigan railway tax case all that is condemnatory of the manner in which Congress is proposing to settle the railway rate question. The excellent Justice left in his decision the passage in which he declares that "there is no abdication of the legislative function" when the Legislature enacts a "specific rule for fixing a rate of taxation, by which rule the rate is mathematically deduced from the facts." That, according to the decision, "is a direct legislative determination of the rate," although the rate is not declared by the Legislature. That method is not the one used in the Hepburn bill. As the proposal stands, the Inter-State Commerce Commission is authorized to fix a rate which is right "in its judgment," not in the judgment of Congress.

From this it takes no Sherlock Holmes to deduce what the court is likely to think about Congress's abdication of the legislative function in not proceeding as in the Michigan precedent. It is because Congress is proposing to authorize the Commission to do what Congress itself cannot do, and omits to attempt, that a right of revision is necessary. For if Congress can constitutionally authorize the Commission to regulate rates in the manner now proposed, it follows that the Supreme Court cannot interfere with what the Commission does. The Supreme Court never alters what Congress does within its constitutional authority. The more certainly the Hepburn bill is constitutional the more certainly the Commission needs checking by superior or coordinate authority. There is no reason why the Commission should be the sole exception in our Governmental system to moderation and justice through checks and balances.

THE TRUTH ABOUT IT.

With the intimation that "it's no one's business how I know," a nameless friend sends us the following list of National campaign expenses since 1892:

DEMOCRATIC FUNDS.

1896—Silver interests	$500,000
Popular contributions	200,000—	$700,000
1900—Silver interests	100,000
Popular contributions	300,000
Financial leaders	200,000—	$600,000
1904—Popular contributions	500,000
Financial leaders	400,000—	$900,000
1903-4—Hearst pre-campaign expenses		$1,200,000

REPUBLICAN FUNDS.

1892		$3,000,000
1896—Protected interests	$3,000,000
Financial leaders	3,000,000—	$6,000,000
1900—Protected interests	3,000,000
Financial leaders	3,000,000—	$6,000,000
1904—Protected interests	4,000,000
Financial leaders	7,000,000—	$11,000,000

Despite its unfortunate anonymity we accept this table as being more circumstantial and at least as trustworthy as that contained in The Washington Post's eulogistic and likewise anonymous article concerning the committee and its Republican Chairman who received the insurance companies' contributions in 1904. For purposes of comparison we again reproduce The Post's compact table:

1904—Roosevelt fund	$1,900,000
1904—Parker fund	1,900,000
1900—McKinley fund	4,000,000
1900—Bryan fund	275,000
1896—McKinley fund	6,000,000
1896—Bryan fund	275,000

We think, on the whole, that the table containing the larger Republican figures is the more dependable. For is it not reasonable to suppose that if the Republican National fund has dwindled from $6,000,000 to $1,900,000 in three successive campaigns, there would not now be that universal hush and silence in the "stand-pat" Congress whenever Mr. PERRY BELMONT'S bill for publicity of campaign contributions and expenditures is spoken of for its consideration? Surely there would be nothing to conceal. But perhaps, noting in The Post's account the ratio of decrease since 1896, Republican Congressmen have deemed it wiser and safer to wait until 1908, when the fund shall have died of its own shrinkage.

WOODEN SHOES.

The debate upon the lower prices abroad than at home of products under the tariff throws a new light upon the singular demand for a duty of 125 per cent. upon wooden shoes. It was apparent that the prohibitory rate upon the foreign product could not be designed to cheapen prices to Americans, and it is proof of the insidious plot that the proposal was not made by natives.

The petitioners were those who had experienced abroad the delight of that un-American sort of footgear, and they proposed to give their former compatriots the blessing of a "dumping" of cheap product at the expense of Americans, who were to be compelled to pay an unnecessarily high price in order that there might be an overflow of a product not much appreciated here. That is the manner in which we extend the blessings of protection on such products as watches and iron and steel products, and if on them why not on wooden shoes, and on everything, in fact. It is a roundabout way of providing a bounty upon exports, but it is a wonderful stimulator of home industry at the expense of home buyers.

GREENE AND GAYNOR.

The conviction and sentence of GREENE and GAYNOR concludes one of the most tedious, persistent, and important prosecutions the United States Government ever undertook. That a criminal who once gets away with half a million dollars of swag can nevertheless be brought to justice is a most gratifying, although to many it will unfortunately be a surprising, showing. The Judge promised that his sentence would be as lenient as his duty would permit. He seems to have kept his promise. The fine of $575,000 is a complete disgorgement of the stolen money. The imprisonment for four years will furnish to the prisoners, and to those who may be tempted to imitate their crime, a wholesome opportunity for meditation. The sentence is not vindictive, but it is exemplary.

We are not likely to see a renewal of this particular form of swindle. Our main safeguard against it has been the honor of the officers of the Corps of Engineers. In the case of CARTER this safeguard, for almost if not quite the first time in the history of the corps, broke down. If there be any present member of it who needs to be strengthened against the temptation to which CARTER succumbed, the memory of CARTER'S case will reinforce his weakened sense of honor.

BRITISH MARRIAGES.

The decline in Great Britain's marriages, as detailed in the official statistics of 1904 and cabled to The Sun, furnishes a Liberal argument. While the marriages of spinsters decreased from 63.1 to 50.9 per thousand in slightly over two decades, the mean annual remarriage rate for widows dropped from 21.1 per thousand to 12.5 per thousand. Widowers showed the same disproportionate decrease compared with bachelors, the latter being from 61.7 to 52.8, the former 65.8 to 38. This means that not only are the young British men unwilling to assume the expense of a household, but that with rising standards of living and comparative hard times men who have once undertaken the burden become much more reluctant to resume it. Altogether there has been a fall in the marriage rate in Great Britain of 19 per cent. in thirty-five years.

THE PUPIL VERSUS THE CLASS.

Two interesting testimonials to the value of Dr. SHEARER'S letters in THE TIMES on the general subject of teaching the individual pupil what he or she is able to learn were noted in our columns yesterday. One was the announcement of the intention of the Adelphi Academy, in Brooklyn, an old and successful private school, to adopt some of the chief suggestions of Dr. SHEARER, the other was the letter of Prof. CHARLES S. HARTWELL of the Boys' High School, Brooklyn, calling attention to the "wide possibilities" opened up for our New York schools by the Doctor's last two articles. Obviously the matter is one that claims and is receiving the careful study of those responsible for school administration.

Dr. SHEARER'S discussion may be said to have covered three points—the need of giving each scholar as good an education as is practicable, the defects in the present methods in meeting that need, and suggestions of improved methods. As to the first there is no dispute whatever. As to the second there is naturally difference of opinion. Dr. SHEARER'S comments were based on inspection of some of our schools as well as on official reports. They were modestly put forward. They may not be entirely correct, but their general purport is unquestionably in harmony with the observations of many connected with the schools and of many parents and others interested in the schools. The chief importance of the discussion centres in the suggestions for improvement. As we have already said, we cannot claim fitness to pass upon these. They strike us, so far as we can foresee their operation, as sensible, and the evidence as to their use in the schools of which Dr. SHEARER is Superintendent confirms that impression. At least they present a subject for impartial and competent discussion, and we are confident they will lead to that. The opinion expressed by President ELIOT is one that is shared by multitudes of students of our system:

> We have reaped now in the public school system all the benefits of system and uniformity, and it is high time to superinduce in the American school the opposite benefits of flexibility and variety.

The question is, How shall we attain these benefits?

"THEY DO NOT CRINGE."

MAXIM GORKY has been able to make a novel reply to the inquiry addressed to all distinguished visitors. He paid the conventional compliment to our skyscrapers, but he found something which interested him more. In the very bodily attitude of the street throngs he found expression of the spirit of America. "They stand erect and do not cringe. They look so happy, so conscious of their rights. I hope we shall see faces like that in Russia before long, but we don't see them now," said he in yesterday's TIMES. It was because GORKY came from Russia that he paid us a compliment which had escaped the observation of visitors from other nations. If others failed to make the contrast it was because for them it did not exist. The observation must be credited to Russia's unhappy state rather than to GORKY'S acuteness.

He nevertheless has made his point, and he will make few which will advantage more the cause which is the object of his visit and of his utterances. When the street crowds look like a procession of mourners sympathy with the sorrowing and suffering multitude overlays ancient and still surviving regard for a dynasty and Government responsible for maladministration.

It is well that the Rapid Transit Board has obtained thus early the services of a well-paid expert to devise a scheme for ventilating and refrigerating the Subway. Last Summer's theory that the Subway would remain cooler than the surface became rapidly untenable as the season progressed. There is urgent necessity not only for ventilation but for cold air to overcome the volumes of heat produced by the use of electricity.

Plans which contemplate connecting by pneumatic service all Post Office stations south of 125th Street, extending the postal tube system by 18.61 miles, to a total of 25.46 miles in Manhattan, at a cost under revocable contracts of $1,161,000, became practically realizable by agreement in the House on Thursday on the tube provision of the Post Office Appropriation bill. This means speed and efficiency for our postal service. The Wall Street Station, Produce Exchange—at its new site—the Times Square Station, Station C, and the station transmitting foreign mails will be equipped with the new tubes.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Libraries and Manners. Mayor DEMPSEY of Cincinnati has the best of rights, as an individual, to hold any opinion he pleases as to the propriety of the acceptance of gifts from Mr. CARNEGIE by cities not only solvent but prosperous, but he might easily learn something as to the ordinary courtesies of life from the retired ironmaster, and certainly he should have remembered that while engaged as an official in accepting a Carnegie library it did not become him to criticise the giver of it. If his antagonism to this particular form of philanthropy is as intense as his remarks about it indicate, the thing for him to have done was first to do his best to persuade his fellow-citizens not to ask for a building which they were perfectly able to build at their own expense, and, second, having failed in this effort, to abstain from any participation in the dedicatory ceremonies. So doing, he would have been commended by a considerable number, though apparently a small minority, of the country's population. But he did attend the ceremonies, and he did make a speech, from which he omitted any mention of the donor's name, and when questioned afterward he lectured at length and very adversely on the size of Mr. CARNEGIE'S fortune, the way he obtained it, and the uses to which he is putting it as compared with other things he might have done with the money. Cincinnati had decided that the maintenance of its self-respect was compatible with the acceptance of a Carnegie library—which had not at all been forced upon it, by the way—and that fact should have had some effect in moderating the language of Mayor DEMPSEY. And then it might well have occurred to him that, so far as the acquisition of Mr. CARNEGIE'S fortune was concerned, the whole American people had very deliberately passed and perpetuated tariff laws which made the building up of Carnegie fortunes possible, and, for a Carnegie, easy. Here was another argument, if not for silence, at least for a diversion of criticism from one individual to a very great number of them, acting in their associated capacities. And from any point of view, it is extremely hard to transmute Mr. CARNEGIE into an oppressor, impossible to deny that he is doing his sagacious best to use his millions for the public advantage, and necessary to admit that he is doing on a large scale what by common consent has always been called "good."

An Appeal for Reform. Dr. CALVIN THOMAS of Columbia delivered, as President of the Modern Language Association, an address on "The Amelioration of Our Spelling," which has now been reprinted as its third circular by the Simplified Spelling Board. It serves the purposes of the organization extremely well, for it is marked by a moderation of statement and a strength of argument that cannot fail to impress everybody into whose hands it falls, and it may accomplish something in the way of weakening the not altogether unreasonable, and not at all unnatural, antagonism to a change of spelling which exists in so many quarters. The existence and quality of this antagonism Dr. THOMAS fully recognizes, and he wisely as well as kindly refrains from scolding those who entertain it. He says that if the matter concerned only adults who have already learned to spell he would not consider "reform" worth the trouble it will cost. But he says that the labors of the children of this and future generations must be considered, and there he finds a sufficient argument for doing, and doing at once, whatever is practicable toward reducing the difficulties and removing the absurdities of our orthography. By such action he believes that the time now devoted to learning to spell could be lessened, not at once, but in the course of a few generations, by at least a year—which is certainly worth saving. But though Dr. THOMAS is gentle, he does not admit too much. He says: "When I speak of progress I mean first of all that the intellectual battle, so far as there ever was any, has been completely won. The various arguments which used to be advanced by the supporters of the conventional spelling—by arguments I mean reasons based on knowledge, or the appearance of knowledge, and meant to convince the intellect of thinking men—have been completely riddled to pieces. There is simply nothing left of them. The schematic argument from the supposed importance of distinguishing homonyms, the etymological argument, the historical argument, the literary argument, have all been passed in review by distinguished scholars and men of letters—men who by no twist of the imagination could be accused of indifference toward aught that is noble or precious in our inheritance—and have been shown to have little or nothing in them." The historical argument, the one most often brought forward, is certainly the weakest that can be made against reformed spelling. The present forms teach at least as much error as truth, and in hundreds and hundreds of cases they preserve only the mistakes of pedantic ignorance.

A Bad Bill Passes the Senate. Obstinately ignoring all expert and enlightened advice, the State Senate has passed by a majority of 32 to 12 the abominable Hinman bill, regulating and thereby legalizing the practice of osteopathy. The doctors argued in vain against this assault upon the dignity of the medical profession, this attack upon the public safety. A hundred good reasons why the bill should not pass and a hundred better ones why it should be defeated were presented by men of knowledge and authority, but the Senate has preferred to believe the osteopathists and to grant them practically all they asked. Perhaps the Assembly will do the same thing, and perhaps the Governor will sign the bill! The outlook is discouraging and humiliating.

SMALL TALK OF WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—A nice old man from Ohio with his tidy wife were in the reserved gallery of the Senate yesterday when Senators Foraker and Tillman were having their hot colloquy over the tariff and the Rate bill.

After listening for two hours the old lady pulled the old man's sleeve and told him it was time to go.

"They'll be doin' this for an hour more," she said, "and it's all alike."

"I know it," whispered the old fellow, "but it's a fine fight and I want to see how it comes out."

"We'll be late to dinner."

"Never mind. They'll vote in a few minutes and I want to see which of those two gamecocks gits licked."

The old man's next seat neighbor explained to him that there would not be a vote for a month, and that nobody would ever know which had the best of the argument.

"You don't mean to say they don't settle a fight like that and say who wins? That ain't fair," and he reluctantly picked up his hat and coat and prepared to follow the old lady out.

ARRESTED FOR TRIMMING TREES

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The tree planting by our friends of the Ethical Culture School shows a good civic spirit, but who is to care for the trees when the busybody neighbor and the intelligent Magistrate can accomplish a result like this, reported in The Bronx Record and Times:

> Herman Ruf, of 1,965 Clinton Avenue, planted one or two trees in front of his house a few years ago, and since then he has taken great pride in them.
>
> Saturday afternoon he thought the time of year had come when a little pruning would improve their appearance. While he was trimming them he was arrested, and Sunday was arraigned before Magistrate Breen in the Westchester Court on a charge of pruning trees without a permit.
>
> After listening to a lecture from the court he was discharged, but was told that in future he must not prune trees, even if he planted them himself, when the trees are on the public sidewalk.

New York, April 9, 1906.

ARBORETUM.

Restoring Washington Relics.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Through the interest created by Bishop Potter's open letter in THE TIMES about the Washington arms and the aid of John Alexander, Esq., in Malmesbury, Wiltshire, England, the stone escutcheon removed by a tenant farmer from Garsdon Manor House, the home of Sir Lawrence Washington, has been found, and measures are being taken to restore the stone to its proper station at Garsdon Manor at Malmesbury.

At Garsdon there is a Washington memorial school, and in the Garsdon church Sir Lawrence and his wife were buried. A memorial tablet erected in the church fell into ruin and neglect fifty years ago. An effort is being made to restore those stones to their places and to add carvings where pieces have been lost.

Bishop Potter needs a subscription for this purpose, and Malmesbury people are aiding him. They ask some interest and aid from America to raise the sum needed for the repairs, restorations, and replacing of the memorial.

ETHELYN EMERY HUTTON.

Still Need for Subway Ventilation.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In reading your recent article on the proposed improvement in ventilating and cooling of the Subway, I notice you state that analysis has shown that there is little or no difference between the Subway air and street air. If that is true, will you kindly explain for us unscientific people just why the Subway air smells bad, and why do we get a headache in a fifteen-minute ride.

Subway stations take air on the level of a man's feet. The street dirt, the pulverized filth of the gutters, and foul, heavy air are naturally drawn into the stations and are there mixed with the grime and grease afloat in the heat and confinement.

Pass your hand over the posts, side walls, or interior of cars six feet above the floor (where the people do not clean it off with their clothes) and your hand will be covered, not with dust, but with grease. Do this and you will know why the air is foul in spite of a certificate of good character.

No doubt analysis would show that the air in a glue factory contained oxygen, still, nobody goes for bracing air to the glue factory.

Vaccination and Small Pox.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Germany, the vaccinists tell us, has stamped out smallpox by compulsory vaccination. Will they explain why so many German steamers arrive with smallpox on board? Also, why it was necessary to vaccinate the purser of the Wuerzburg, though he had been twice vaccinated in the past six months? What has become of the old claim that vaccination gave continuous protection? The death of Dr. Stanton in Philadelphia from smallpox after repeated vaccinations during a twelvemonth ought to at least modify some of the pro-vaccination claims.

A. C. PLEYDELL.

No Petit Larceny in England.

From The London Chronicle.

America still distinguishes between grand and petit larceny, as may be gathered from the warrant charging Mr. Perkins, ex-Vice President of the New York Life Insurance Company, with the former. In England the distinction, which has existed since Edward I.'s time, was abolished in 1827, and again—to make sure, presumably—in the larceny act of 1861. If the property stolen did not exceed 12 pence in value, it was petit larceny, and the punishment was whipping or imprisonment; if the property was valued at more than 12 pence the larceny was grand, and the offense capital. In America to-day the valuation boundary between the two kinds of larceny varies from State to State, the manner of the theft also being taken into account in some instances. In New York the limit is $25.

Ghastly.

From The Chicago Inter Ocean.

With William Jennings Bryan gaining strength daily in Congress as a conservative leader of the Democracy, the only thing that Judge Parker can do is to stand aghast.

NEAR SPECIAL BOND LIMIT.

Aldermen Have Voted $1,680,141 Already—Annual Limit is $2,000,000.

Since the meeting of the Board of Aldermen last Tuesday there has been an investigation of the amount of special revenue bonds authorized by that body since the first of the year. As a result it has been discovered the city is close to its $2,000,000 limit of these bonds for the year, unless the Board of Estimate should decline to approve many of the issues voted by the Aldermen.

Special revenue bonds are supposed to be issued for emergency uses only. They are for purposes which are not covered in the budget and which have arisen since it was made up. The Aldermen this year have approved special revenue bonds to the amount of $1,680,141.42 out of the annual $2,000,000 limit allowed by law and the Board of Estimate has approved approximately $600,000 of the issues.

Among those approved by both bodies are $238,000 for asphalt pavement repairs in Manhattan, $40,000 for the Department of Corrections to rebuild structures destroyed by fire, $80,000 for the Board of Education, and $105,000 for the parks in Brooklyn and Queens. The Board of Estimate also approved $40,000 for the Hall of Records, $27,000 for the Bureau of Buildings, $10,000 for two automobiles for the Manhattan Borough President, and $10,000 for wiring the Criminal Courts building, all of which were left over from the previous Board of Aldermen.

Among the appropriations held up for the present by the Board of Estimate, after having been approved by the Aldermen, are $326,000 for the Police Department, $62,000 for the Brooklyn Bureau of Buildings, $10,000 for the investigation of the Street Cleaning Department, and $400,000 for the parks of Manhattan, Bronx, and Richmond.

New College Fraternity Organized.

CHICAGO, April 13.—Representatives of eight Western universities met here today and organized a new Greek letter college fraternity, to be composed of those who have acquitted themselves creditably in oratory and debate at intercollegiate contests. It is the purpose to make the society National in character. E. E. McDermott was appointed Chairman of the committee to draft the by-laws and constitution and select a name for the fraternity.

Misuse of Letter Boxes in Flats.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Referring to the complaints from some of your correspondents respecting letter boxes in flathouses, I desire that you will use your influence in assisting in obliterating a positive nuisance relating to letter boxes in the vestibules in apartment houses, studios, &c., in this city, namely, the placing of circulars, cards, and other printed matter in them and interfering with the reception of legal mail matter in them. I have just received the following letter from Mr. Willcox, Postmaster, in reply to my inquiry of the law on the subject. He says:

"In reply to your favor 8th inst. I beg leave to say that the crowding of letter boxes with circulars and printed matter by other than letter carriers is not a violation of the Federal statutes, but is of a State ordinance, and this annoyance to which you refer should be reported to the local authorities."

Who are the proper officials to submit the subject to, so that proceedings may be taken to put a stop to this annoyance? B. S. O.

A Transfer Wrinkle.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

What possible reason can there be why transfers given by the conductors of trolley lines are good at nearly every crossing except Astor Place, Eighth, Houston, and Spring Streets, at which points you must ask for your transfer from a man standing on the sidewalk—the conductors refusing to give them for these corners? Why this absurd regulation? Such an annoyance to the passengers, especially ladies, and a useless expense to the Metropolitan Railroad Company.

The other day the man standing on the Astor Place corner refused me a transfer because he did not see me alight from the Broadway car and declared I was not on it, and so I was compelled to pay double fare for one single through trip. Is not this regulation annoying, useless, and simply absurd? P. D. W.

Twirly Whirly.

From The Philadelphia Public Ledger.

The revolutionist had arrived and been cordially greeted.

"Why are you here?" the reporters asked.

"Well," replied the visitor, "a revolutionist must revolve, you know, and the aristocrats over there kept cluttering up my orbit."

A Judge's Advice.

From J. P.'s Weekly of London.

Recently a retired Judge was asked what was the most prominent conviction that remained with him after his long judicial experience, and he is said to have replied, "That every means should be tried for the settlement of a dispute before it be taken to the law courts."

Killed by a Beer Barrel.

From The London Express.

While crossing the yard of a brewery at Manchester Mrs. Geoffrey Grime was killed by the explosion of a beer barrel, which was being cleaned with steam and from which the bung had not been extracted. The barrel was projected with great force, and struck Mrs. Grime at a distance of thirty-five yards.

A RECOLLECTION.

(With Apologies to an Old Favorite.)

I remember, I remember the flat where I was born,
The little window where the sun came peeping in at morn;
Until the maid of all work pulled down the window shade
And shut out all the sunshine for fear the rug would fade.

I remember, I remember the gas lamp in the hall
That sometimes burned till 12 o'clock and sometimes not at all;
'Twas just a little flicker in all that waste of gloom,
Like some one with a candle illuminating Doom.

I remember, I remember that things both great and small
Were made to fold up into some recess in the wall;
The bathtub was in sections, and when the bath was o'er
It folded up and fitted a panel in the door.

I remember, I remember the meters everywhere,
A meter for the sunshine, a meter for the air,
For heat and gas and water, in every sink and tub,
We had the metric system for everything but grub.

I remember, I remember the furniture we had,
A grand piano that became a folding bed for Dad;
The sofa was a clothes press, the daven- [illegible] trunk,
The [illegible] clock was a swindle that col- [illegible] into a bunk.

I [illegible] I remember I sat on Mother's [illegible]
There [illegible] nook or cranny that she co[illegible] for me;
And [illegible] member we moved soon after tha[illegible]
Our la[illegible] would not let us have chil- dr[illegible] flat.

HIDING OF CORRUPTION CAN'T CURE IT—FOLK

No Secret Remedy for It Is Known, Says Governor.

THE PEOPLE NOW ARE AWAKE

An Unprecedented Political Revival in Which Mere Party Names No Longer Count.

KANSAS CITY, April 13.—Five hundred Missouri editors attended a banquet to-night given by the Missouri State Democratic Press Association to commemorate the birthday anniversary of Thomas Jefferson. The principal speakers were Gov. Joseph W. Folk, United States Senator William J. Stone, Congressman Charles A. Towne of New York, and Charles W. Knapp of The St. Louis Republic. All the speakers made a plea for party harmony in this State, and all predicted that at the next election Missouri would again be found in the Democratic column.

Gov. Folk in the course of his remarks said:

"Whenever the people cease to rule anywhere and gangs and bosses govern instead, then special privileges and corruption which springs from special privileges as a necessary consequence follow. Jefferson announced the cardinal doctrine of true democracy when he declared for 'equal rights to all; special privileges to none.' This maxim expresses every essential element of true democracy. It embraces every essential element of good government.

"There is no secret remedy known for corruption. It cannot be cured by hiding it. When it is known the people can be trusted to apply the remedy swiftly and surely. The people are awake now and as long as they keep awake there will be only white lights ahead for popular government. The developments of the last few years should inspire optimism, not pessimism, as to the future. The punishment of rascals is not going to cause the overthrow of the Republic.

"If things had gone on in the old way when bribery was considered conventional and when graft became so common as not to cause comment, when special privileges were considered right, then it would be only a question of time before our Nation would have gone as other republics have gone during the flight of time through the ages. Now things are different. The old-fashioned ideas of honesty are being applied to the new-fashioned business. The command 'Thou shalt not steal' has again become binding.

"An unprecedented political revival is going on in the United States to-day on this subject. The next few years will be distinguished as the time in which the reign of the special privilege is brought to an end and the doctrine of equal rights fixed in National policies and in the conscience of mankind. The spirit of reform comes from reflection, and reflection comes from knowledge of evils and desire to correct them. There are some who are appalled by the exposures of official venality and private depravity and are disposed to exclaim in a spirit of dismay, 'O tempora, O mores!' To my mind the most hopeful sign of the continuance of government by the people is these very exposures.

"The time has come when the people will no longer respond to mere party names. Parties must stand for something and mean something, must be a positive force, not a mere negative quantity. It is a very good rule to follow, to ascertain on which side the enemies of the people and of representative government are fighting, and then get on the other side and oppose them. One may rest assured that he cannot be far from right."

Congressman Towne, who spoke briefly, made the following appeal:

"Let us have Jefferson's faith in the people, his sense of obligation to the welfare of the whole citizenship, his opposition to class rule, his conception of the dangers of special privilege, and the sacredness of honestly acquired private property. In this spirit may the great party he founded offer a shelter at the present crisis in our industrial history from the tyranny of privilege on the one hand and the unsounded perils of Socialism on the other."

LAW ON CAR TRANSFERS.

Tickets Must Be Given at Any Time on Demand.

"If the man paid his fare he was entitled to a transfer at any time he asked for it, at any time during the trip, no matter what the rules of the company are."

This was the decision of Magistrate Whitman, in the Tombs Court this afternoon, in the case of John Fallon, 45 years old, of 160 West 114th Street, whose arrest was caused by Samuel Croll, conductor of a Madison Avenue car, in front of the Tombs Prison, in a row over a transfer. Fallon was discharged.

In view of the stories printed in the newspapers yesterday about the transfer case, which was tried on Thursday in the Court of Special Sessions, the Justices of that court yesterday called the attention of counsel of the New York City Railway Company, as well as all the lawyers of the court, to the law relating to street car transfers. Section 104 of the Railroad act relating to that matter says:

"Every such corporation (street car) shall, upon demand and without extra charge, give to each passenger paying one single fare a transfer, entitling such passenger to one continuous trip to any point or portion of any railroad embraced in such contract. For every refusal to comply with the requirements of this section the company so refusing shall forfeit $50 to the aggrieved party."

DOUBLE SALE OF PICTURES.

A double sale at the American Art Galleries last evening of original drawings of artists and illustrators and Japanese oil paintings and water colors brought in a total of $2,837.50. The drawings collected by the late W. Lewis Fraser went for low prices, many of them not more than the cost of the frames. They ranged from $3 up, with a total of $797 for seventy-three pictures and a framed collection of autographs of artists contributing to the Fellow Craft Club exhibition. This last went to W. A. Gramer for $30.

E. A. Abbey's sketch of Charles Coghlan as "Charles Surface" brought the highest price of the lot, going to G. H. Buck for $80. A "Street Scene in Spain," by William M. Chase, went to E. F. Church, Jr., for $14. Frederic Remington's "Charge on the Sun Pole" went to P. A. Perry for $27.50. William Mitchell paid $36 for J. Pennell's "Gloucester Cathedral," and Henry Wolf $20 for "Good-Bye," by A. B. Frost. A portrait of Robert Richard Randall, by Kenyon Cox, went for $12. Those were the higher prices.

Oils by H. Yoshida brought the highest prices among the paintings. "A Passing Shower" went to H. S. Hopkins for $140, and F. Reid paid $100 for "Dusk in May." The "Little Japanese Widow," by Mitsutani, a large and interesting picture, brought $90, and George C. Bracket paid the highest price for a water color—$60 for a picture of the Japanese sacred mountain Fuji as the first morning light strikes it. Five different water colors by H. Yoshida and Miss F. Yoshida were bid in by Otto Bernet as agent for David Warfield. The total returns for the paintings was $2,040.50.

BOTH KILLED SUPERSTITION

> Morituri te salutamus!
> Let the devil rise and damn us.
> Let the clouds of doubt importune
> On us every black misfortune.
> Let the ladder fall and break us.
> Let the winner's luck forsake us.
> Let the skull and crossbones keep us
> In a shadow black and deep as
> These umbrella apparitions.
> Let these things arise and curse man,
> For his lot could not be worse than > Bowing to vague superstitions.
> —Ode to the XIII. Club.

The Great Unterrified, officially known as The Thirteen Club, met last night—the 13th, a Friday, and Good Friday, at that—at the Hotel Westminster, Irving Place and Sixteenth Street.

The dining hall was as ghoulish as ingenuity could make it. As of yore, there were thirteen at each table, and of tables there were thirteen. At each candles burned in thirteen skulls. Umbrellas painted with skulls and crossbones overshadowed the Great Unterrified, while a painted skeleton on crêpe dangled idly before a draughty window. The only addition to the usual decorations was a sign over the thirteen-runged ladder at the entrance. It read:

"This ladder knocked out one man. Next."

At the February dinner it fell mysteriously and struck a diner who was just entering, badly bruising his skull and necessitating the immediate use of stimulants.

An additional reason for the dinner last night was the anniversary of the birth of Thomas Jefferson. The wide gulf between superstition and Jefferson was bridged by the theme of address:

"What present-day superstition would Jefferson have combatted?"

The guest of honor was Edwin Markham. While the candles guttered in the skulls and the wax flowed through the eyes, he arose in the dim light to address the Thirteen Club. In part he said:

"Jefferson was the great destroyer of political superstition. It is common to deny the truth of his great statement that all men are born equal. Of course, men are not equal in natural rights. Their heads may not be on the same level, but their feet are certainly on the same floor. The real Jefferson doctrine is that we must maintain an equality of opportunity for all men.

"Maxim Gorky, the Russian patriot whom I have recently met, comes to this country standing for the same principles for which Jefferson stood. He, like Jefferson, is a great elemental man, and he stands upon the principles of the Declaration of Independence. He is a man who has outgrown the superstition that kingcraft and a parasite aristocracy are necessary to the wellbeing of men. America should welcome this Jefferson of Russia."

Perhaps the happiest man in the company of The Great Unterrified was Police Inspector Elbert Smith, who has just been ordered back to duty by Commissioner Bingham after having been deposed by ex-Commissioner McAdoo. The Inspector related the amazing number of thirteens which have been important dates in his career.

The grim company of thirteen thirteens sat far into the night, singing Southern songs and drinking mint juleps.

MME. GUILBERT AT PROCTOR'S

Chanteuse Sings There Preparatory to Her Vaudeville Debut.

Mme. Yvette Guilbert made her first appearances at Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre yesterday afternoon and evening preliminary to her début in vaudeville later. Her songs formed a part of the fifth day's programme in the F. F. Proctor's jubilee week.

Following the performance of "Candida" by the regular stock company, the French chanteuse sang a group of the chansons crinoline which she made familiar earlier in the season in her Sunday evening concerts at the Lyceum.

There was the little song of the girl who liked to boast about her regimental bugler; another about the jailor's daughter who set free the handsome prisoner, and a third all about a very indiscreet young woman who lived in the country and did as she pleased. The audience liked these so well that Mme. Guilbert sang two more in English, one of which told about the trials of a man who had his dumb wife cured and then wished he hadn't.

The singer wore the quaint pink and white crinoline of the early eighteenth century.

Mme. Guilbert is announced to appear twice daily at the Fifth Avenue through next week, after which she moves to the vaudeville houses.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Mme. Bertha Kalich, prior to her coming under the management of Harrison Grey Fiske, was under contract to produce in Yiddish in the present year a new play entitled "The Sisters," by Mr. Peretz, a Jewish poet who lives in Warsaw. At the close of her present tour Mme. Kalich will appear for fifteen performances in "The Sisters" at the Kalich Theatre in New York. This, it is said, will mark her permanent farewell to the Yiddish stage.

On May 7 Joe Weber is to celebrate the tenth anniversary of his connection with the Weber Music Hall at that playhouse. For the occasion the members of the Hippodrome company are to be the special guests of the evening.

WHAT IS MEANT BY "JEWISH CHILDREN ARE NOT IMMUNE?"

A friend of crippled children sent $10 for Sea Breeze and asked the above question. Jewish adults are, compared with adults of other races, relatively free from consumption. But the consumption germ does successfully attack Jewish children, eating away, however, tissues of the hip or knee or ankle instead of the lung. There are large numbers of them in our infected tenements, crippled by bone tuberculosis.

One-third the children given out-of-door sea air care for hip disease, Potts disease, and other crippling forms of bone tuberculosis have been Jewish. Illustrated copies of THE CHILDREN'S PLEA free. $8 will give one child one week; $150, until October first. $9,000 needed for food and nursing; $49,000 more for the first permanent seaside hospital. ARTHUR TURNURE DEAD.

Founder of the Grolier Club a Victim of Pneumonia.

Arthur Turnure, founder of the Grolier Club, member of many other organizations, and President of the company publishing Vogue, died of pneumonia yesterday at his home, 109 East Seventy-first Street. He was 49 years old. He was taken ill Tuesday.

Mr. Turnure is survived by his widow, their six-year-old son, David Arthur; his mother, Mrs. David Turnure of 100 East Sixty-fifth Street, and his sister, Miss Mary Turnure. The funeral services will be conducted at his late residence Monday morning at 10 o'clock by the Rev. Dr. Grosvenor of the Church of the Incarnation, of which Mr. Turnure was a member. The body will be buried in Woodlawn Cemetery.

Mr. Turnure was born in this city. He was graduated from Princeton with the class of '76. Returning to New York, he entered the law firm of Vanderpoel, Green & Cummings, and was admitted to the bar.

Mr. Turnure did not long practice law. He became interested in art, particularly as applied to the publishing business, and began the paper known as The Art Age, which he let die to begin The Art Exchange. Selling that publication, he became art director for Harper & Brothers. He was an enthusiastic advocate of artistic illustrations. He arranged a richly illustrated edition of Lew Wallace's "Ben Hur," for which Gen. Wallace often expressed his appreciation.

Some sixteen years ago Mr. Turnure organized the Grolier Club for the study and promotion of the arts pertaining to the production of books. The club was also designed to bring into close touch in one club the makers and publishers of books.

Mr. Turnure withdrew from the Harper concern to establish Vogue. He was President of the publishing company and editor of the periodical. He was particularly active in charities for the benefit of women. He did a great deal of private charity work among them.

He came into public notice recently in connection with the S. P. C. A. Reform Association, of which he was the practical organizer. The association was made up primarily of people not members of the S. P. C. A., and it had for its purpose, as its name indicates, "the reformation" of the society, which, it held, was in a bad way.

Besides the Grolier Club, he was a member of the Calumet and Princeton Clubs, the Architectural League, and the Meadow Brook Club.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

The wedding of Miss Maud Donaldson, sister of Keith Donaldson, whose marriage to Miss Evelyn Willis Hunter is set for April 25 in this city, will take place on April 19 at the residence of her brother in Philadelphia, to Lieut. Grayson Mallet Prevost Murphy, United States Army. Mr. Donaldson and his fiancée, Miss Hunter, will go on for the wedding, which is to be a quiet home affair, the bride having no attendants.

⁂

The Easter dance of university cotillions will take place on Tuesday evening at Sherry's.

Miss Inez Enid V. French, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Darwin Gallatin French, will give a lncheon on Friday, April 20, for the young women who are to be the attendants at her marriage to Daniel Oliver Tow!.

Mrs. Cadwalader Jones, Miss Leary, Mrs. Lorillard Spencer, Miss Chanler, Miss Helen Dunham, Miss Virginia Potter, and others are among the patronesses of the lecture on "Recent Great Discoveries in Egypt," to be delivered at 4 o'clock on April 18 at Sherry's by Joseph Lindon Smith.

⁂

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. M. Burden (Miss Ruth Twombly) are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son last Sunday.

⁂

Through a typographical error the name of Miss Alice Frith Du Vivier's fiancé, Joseph Ewing, was printed "Erving" in yesterday's TIMES. Mr. Ewing is a grandson of the late Robert Ewing of Philadelphia.

NEGRO PROPHET ELIJAH AWES THRONG OF SAINTS

Throned, He Wears a Crown, White Gloves, and Spats.

EATS CHICKEN IN STATE

Big negroes, little negroes, men and women, in gorgeous costume, with feathers and plumes in their hair, marched through the streets of Plainfield, N. J., yesterday shouting hallelujahs, and declaring they had found the Lord.

At the head of the procession in one of the depot wagons rode Elijah, the negro prophet, propped up on a cushion of velvet, bowing right and left to the populace, who stood awe-stricken at the strange scene. Elijah had summoned his flock from all parts of the globe to attend a Passover festival at Plainfield, where for the next week the members of the Church of God and Saints of Christ will hold revival services.

Each train that arrived at Plainfield brought hundreds of the sect. They had been coming into town since Thursday, and so many had gathered that the overflow from the negro boarding houses and hotels had to walk the streets all night, as they could find no accommodations. In the Reform Hall, a big frame building on West Second Street, Elijah, or, as he was formerly known, William S. Crowdy, established headquarters, and here in the basement about five hundred slept on benches preparatory to attending the great Passover feast.

When the great street parade was over the colored saints marched into the great hall, and a delegation of colored elders assisted The Prophet to a gaudily prepared throne, something like that used in "The Wizard of Oz." Elijah was attired in a loose fitting brown suit. His feet were adorned with brown spats and he wore a beautiful crown of vari-colored silk. The shape is mortar board. On his hands he wore a pair of long, loose fitting white cotton gloves, and after getting upon his throne he looked very impressive.

A colored evangelist, namesake of the Prophet, Joseph Crowdy, who explained that, aside from being the Prophet's nephew, he was Joseph, the Biblical son of Elijah, took a seat on the platform near the throne and interpreted what the Prophet said, although the Prophet did no talking while the reporters were there. Joseph said that the Prophet only talked when he felt like it, and sometimes he talked when he did not feel like it, but he understood many of the things that were said to him, although Joseph said that most folks did not know this. But the Prophet was preparing for the great Passover feast by fasting, and this was given as one of the reasons why he did not talk.

Thousands of negro men, attired in brown suits and wearing long, black sashes with white lace fringe, busied themselves among the audience looking for converts. These men were the elders.

The fumes of roast chicken that rose from the basement stairway for a time seemed to distract some of the folks who had not eaten anything since leaving their homes in the South on Wednesday.

Joseph explained that the pale blue silk waists worn by some of the women were symbolical of faith—blue in the new Church signifying faith—while their white neckties signified purity. In fact, there was a significance to every color worn. Brown, Joseph said, signified meekness. The black sashes stood for royalty. Only the Prophet himself and his royal staff of elders were permitted to wear black sashes. The red, yellow, and pink waists which some of the women wore all had their meaning, too.

"These yere yaller colors and pink," explained Joseph, "are Church secrets. Nobody but men and Elijah knows about them, but they mean something—well, I don't care to tell, but they are great significance, 'deed they are."

Suddenly, while Joseph was explaining, the Prophet commenced to move uneasily on his throne. Then he made motions. Joseph ordered the hall cleared. The fumes from the chicken roasting in the basement seemed to have something to do with it. And after the crowd was permitted to return to the hall Elijah was found on his throne ravenously chewing at half a section of roast chicken, which he held in his left hand, while turning now and then to bite away a portion of a huge loaf which he held tightly under his right arm.

"He can't use that right wing," said one of the saints in a whisper. "Pears to me like it's paralyzed."

"The right hand of the prophet cannot be used by him just now," explained Joseph. "He became affected that way 'bout five months ago, but I guess if he wanted to use it he could, 'cause he possess power."

At this point one of the elders explained that Elijah had been fasting for a day and a half, but the smell of the roast chicken from the basement had produced a vision of food, so the prophet told himself it was time to eat. The feast of Passover had been announced for midnight, and it had been the intention of the prophet to forget about the chicken until that time, but the vision was there, and he had to obey the revelation to eat.

While Elijah sat there on his throne gnawing at the roast chicken some of the saints became nervous. Taking from their coat lapels the huge badges resembling those worn by the floor manager of an east side ball, the saints hurried into the street and overtaxed the capacity of the neighboring restaurants.

"I simply can't wait for night," said one man. "I traveled all the way from Kentucky without food, and I jest want to eat enough now to keep up ma strength for to-night's revival meetin'."

Many remained in the hall, however, and prayed against temptation while the fumes of roast lamb began to arise from the basement.

"We are roasting two lambs down there," explained Joseph. "They are for the Passover feast, which will be eaten one minute after midnight. Elijah, the Prophet, formerly was a cook on the Santa Fé Railroad, but nine years ago he suddenly had a vision one night. In it he received the seven keys. With the aid of them 'ere seven keys he discovered that he is the reincarnation of the Prophet Elijah."

"Those mortar bo'rd hats which the saints wear here are symbolic of friendship, love, and truth. The ladies in pink are lady elders, and those in red colored waists are the singsters. I being the Biblical son of Elijah wear a black helmet with one star in it, and a star on my coat. I also carry a sword and wear a black silk sash. The Prophet's home is in Emporia, Kan., and although he can't speak at times he can travel all about the country alone.

"That gentleman over there in the corner is Father Abraham. In Boston life he is known as William Plummer. Martha Butler, over there, is Mother Sarah."

There was much washing of feet later in the day, when the converts began to arrive. This, it was explained, was a form of baptism. About seventy were in this way converted in the afternoon.

In the evening at 8 o'clock the real revival services began when St. Isaac, a tall, thin negro with big, bulging eyes, stepped on the platform and blew his silver trumpet. This summoned the followers of the Prophet to prayer.

The singing of hymns and the camp meeting shouts lasted until midnight, when four elders appeared carrying two roasted lambs. It was explained that the lambs had been killed by the Prophet and were without blemish. But some one said later that the lambs had been purchased at a Plainfield butcher's shop. However, the feast opened, after the announcement that if any pieces of lamb were left they would be burned. But there was not enough to burn when the sect finished. With the lambs they ate unleavened bread and drank water. The Prophet, however, had some more chicken with his portion of lamb, and the saints said as he was the Prophet he could eat as often and as much as he pleased.

Each time a member of the sect met another member in or about the big hall he greeted him or her with "All Hail!" Then came a kiss.

Some of the native-born negroes of Plainfield who had got a whiff of the roast lamb and chicken edged their way into the meeting room. One of these was "Sandy" Johnson, a hostler, employed in a Plainfield livery stable.

"Jest as soon as I heard them 'ere shouts of 'All Hail,'" explained Johnson, "I made up ma mind that there was chicken somewhere in de neighborhood, so I smelled ma way down to de meetin' house and got in on dat feed. If dey only have one of dem 'ere chicken festivals every day I'll jine dat church ma'self. But them Twelve Apostles what ate all Jim Baker's free lunch this mornin' had better keep out o' Jim's place or dey'll be angels sure enough. 'Deed dey will!"

DR. RICHARD GARNETT DEAD.

Aided Thousands of American Scholars—Was 71 Years Old.

LONDON, April 13.—Richard Garnett died this morning from internal hemorrhage at his residence in this city. He was 71 years old.

The death of Dr. Richard Garnett will be regretted by thousands of American scholars who at one time or another have been aided by him in their researches at the British Museum. As Assistant Keeper of Printed Books, as Superintendent of the Reading Room, and later as Keeper of the Printed Books, he was in the service of the museum for forty-seven years.

His knowledge of books was nothing short of marvelous. "Ask Garnett" was a reply so often made by English scholars when questions they could not answer were put to them that it became proverbial. Perhaps it was the source of a quotation from "Sappho" that was desired. "Oh, yes," Garnett would say, and would immediately proceed to give the chapter of the Scholiast, or Longinus, or Dionysius of Halicarnassus, in which the fragment was to be found.

But Dr. Garnett was a good deal more than a mine of information for others to use and profit by. His own literary work was voluminous, and always full of a charming delicacy and unassertive learning. Perhaps of everything he did the little volume of collected short stories, "The Twilight of the Gods," is the best known, but his translations of sonnets by Dante, Petrarch, and Camoens, his versions of poems in the Greek Anthology, and his original verse have all had many enthusiastic readers. His versatility was as extraordinary as his industry. Even to give a bare list of his books would take up half a column of space, while the subjects included biographies of American and English authors, histories of Italian and English literature, translations of historical manuscripts, and essays on all sorts of out-of-the-way things.

He practically grew up in the British Museum. His father, the Rev. Richard Garnett, was an Assistant Keeper, and the younger Richard Garnett entered the service of the museum when he was 16 years old.

Dr. Garnett was the first Superintendent of the great printed catalogue of the museum library. He was made a Companion of the Bath in 1895. In 1883 Edinburgh University made him an LL. D.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Capt. Duncan Kennedy.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Capt. Duncan Kennedy, commanding the cruiser Colorado, died at Guantanamo yesterday as the result of an operation for appendicitis. The body will be brought to this country on one of the vessels of the Second Division of the battleship squadron, arriving in Hampton Roads Tuesday morning next. Capt. Kennedy was born at Albany, N. Y., in 1847, and was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1868. At the time of the Spanish-American war he was on duty in connection with the enlistment of naval militia, and as an ordnance officer at the Norfolk Navy Yard. He attained the rank of Commander in 1899, became a Captain in 1903, and assumed command of the Colorado in January, 1905.

Lemuel Bannister.

Lemuel Bannister, the founder of the English branch of the Westinghouse Electric Company, died at the Imperial Hotel yesterday. He had been ill for three years with a cancerous affection of the throat, and had traveled far and wide in the hope of finding a cure. Up to three years ago he was Vice President of the English Westinghouse Company. He lived in London, but when his health failed, he retired from business. Mr. Bannister was about sixty-seven years old. He leaves a widow, Frances Kenyon Bannister, and a nephew, Lemuel Bannister of Boston. His funeral will be held from 145 West Fifty-eighth Street on Monday morning at 9:45 o'clock.

Monsignor J. J. Kennedy.

SYRACUSE, April 13.—Mgr. J. J. Kennedy, Vicar General of the Diocese of Syracuse, and pastor of St. Lucy's Church, died this afternoon of hemorrhages of the stomach. Father Kennedy came here from Ireland when 8 years old in 1852, and was a cash boy in a Syracuse dry goods store. He was ordained a priest in 1869. Three years later he organized St. Lucy's parish and remained in charge until his death. He was appointed Vicar General in 1891. In 1895 he was raised to the dignity of a Monsignor. He was also a Knight of the Holy Roman Empire.

Sidney H. Joseph.

Special to The New York Times.

FRANKFORT, Ky., April 13.—Sidney H. Joseph, a traveling salesman for a New York jewelry manufacturer, and a life member of Brooklyn Lodge No. 22 of the Order of Elks, died suddenly here this morning.

Sir Robert Thorburn.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., April 13.—Sir Robert Thorburn, who was the Premier of Newfoundland from 1885 to 1890, died here last night. Sir Robert Thorburn was born at Peebles, Scotland, March 28, 1836, and was educated at Edinburgh. He went to Newfoundland in 1852.

Mrs. Whitridge Sails.

Mrs. Frederick W. Whitridge, wife of the special Ambassador appointed by President Roosevelt to attend the wedding of King Alfonso of Spain and Princess Ena of Battenberg, will sail for England en route to Spain on the Cunarder Lucania this morning. Mrs. Whitridge will be accompanied by her daughter, Joan. She will visit relatives in London on the way. Mrs. Whitridge is a daughter of Matthew Arnold.

HOW THE HIPPODROME OBSERVED ITS BIRTHDAY

Broadway Bathers Had Sport in the Big Stage Tank.

NOTABLES SAW THE FROLIC

Early Morning Fun Attracted Leader Murphy and Charles W. Gates—Marie Dressler in the Sport.

W. C. Thompson, press agent, lay back in a box at the Hippodrome and closed his eyes contentedly. It was the crowning moment of his career as a publicity promoter.

In another box sat Charles W. Gates, in still another Charles F. Murphy; the audience, one-third of it attired in bathing costume, was a mixture of chorus girls, actors, newspaper men, and brokers, and to crown all a man in evening dress and crush hat had just been fished out of the big stage tank.

The occasion was the first anniversary of the opening of the Hippodrome, which, since April 12, 1905, has entertained over 3,000,000 persons to the box office tune of $2,000,000. To commemorate it Thompson & Dundy and Press Agent Thompson had arranged a swimming festival.

Marie Dressler, Joe Weber, Charles Ross, "Pete" Dailey, and many others known to Broadway had been invited. The plan was to turn the stage over to outside talent while the 700 employes of the Hippodrome enjoyed the fun from the front.

Charles Ross, who officiated at the auction sale of Hippodrome boxes for the opening night last year, was appointed by acclamation as master of ceremonies. As soon as the Thursday night audience left the big theatre, about 1,500 guests and Hippodrome employes flocked in from the stage doors and the adjacent restaurants.

"Charlie" Gates strolled in with a stump of a black cigar in his mouth; Bird S. Coler, with an "excuse-me" air; Charles F. Murphy, with a pensive adjustment of his eyeglasses; Joe Weber, with a "hurry-up-Marie" gait, and, last but not least, Miss Dressler, with a red face and a hat slightly awry.

Then the fun began. "Charlie" Ross appeared as a speck on the horizon of the big empty stage, and said something about "most unique"—"anniversary," "biggest theatre"—"most admirable genius"—"long life"—"continued prosperity," and "in the en-tire world." He would call upon, he said, one whom the audience knew, one who would fill the stage better than—

"My soul!" came in a hoarse whisper from the back of the house. "Can he—does he mean ME?"

There was a shriek of laughter as Marie Dressler arose and bolted toward the door. She was stopped and led to the stage.

After she had sung a plaintive ditty, Joe Weber was extracted from the audience. He began his performance by doing a sprint around the stage. Then he said:

"I vill not play on this campus unless der chorus vas mit my side."

Some of the Weber chorus out of the audience, in furs and walk skirts, came to his aid. Pete Dailey and six girls who had brought along their stage clothes packed in one grip also performed, as did the Zancigs, mind-readers.

About 1:30 yesterday morning the fun was just beginning. At that time the audience was invited to take a bath in the big stage tank, which was flooded to a depth of four feet. One thousand bathing suits had been provided, and at least 300 of them got wet before the daylight came.

Charles Murphy and Charles Gates were invited to join the mermaids and mermen in the tank, but fled at the suggestion. Maria Dressler was hunted up. It was rumored that she had expressed a wish to walk the horizontal greasy pole over the tank, but when found she waxed indignant and offered to tuck Joe Weber under her arm and scrub him in the tank.

Prizes were offered for the winners of aquatic contests. After the greasy pole contest there was a tub race for men and another for girls. Somebody won each contest, but nobody cared who it was.

The biggest laugh of the morning came when Howard Fielding, who was acting as referee, started to announce a marine tourney. He stood on the edge of the tank with a cigar in his mouth, a collapsible hat saucily balanced on his head, and attired in full evening dress.

"In this number, ladies and gentlemen," he cried, "the contestants will tilt—"

There was a yell and a splash. The collapsible hat drifted away on the disturbed waters of the tank.

"Get a boathook! Get a boathook!" yelled Joe Weber.

"Marie Dressler, shame on you!" gasped Peter F. Dailey.

"Me!" shrieked Marie Dresseler. "It was that boy Thompson who owns the shark that did it."

Mr. Fielding, bedraggled and spluttering, was fished out of the tank. Then W. C. Thompson, representing the press, approached and said:

"Would you mind giving us your name, Mr. Fielding?"

As the daylight was creeping over the housetops the Hippodrome was still buzzing with fun. Some of the guests were in the café, others were lolling around in bathing suits, smoking cigarettes, while hundreds danced on the stage to the music of the Hippodrome orchestra.

CAPT. P. H. COYLE DEAD.

Chief of Fire Engine Company No. 36 a Victim of Consumption.

Patrick H. Coyle, Captain of Fire Engine Company No. 36, died on Thursday of consumption at his home, 155 East 104th Street. He was 36 years old.

His illness was caused by a cold which he caught during a fire in a tenement on 102d Street, near First Avenue, in which three persons lost their lives. Coyle was struck by streams of water several times while climbing up and down the building, and his clothing was saturated.

OLD DANCING TEACHER DEAD.

M. Judson Sause Was One of the Last of the Old School.

M. Judson Sause, one of the last of the old school of dancing teachers, was buried in Woodlawn Cemetery yesterday. He died Wednesday night of apoplexy in his rooms in the Lyric Hall building at 725 Sixth Avenue, where almost every night in the week there is a dance of some kind. M. Sause was 73 years old. As the old teacher died he must have heard the waltz music below going to the shuf-shuf of the dancers' feet. He died happy.

Coming from Unionville, Conn., his birthplace, when he was 12 years old, he began in New York as a machinist. He dropped that to teach dancing some fifty years ago. For many years he was a teacher at the old Masonic Hall in East Thirteenth Street, known as Clarendon Hall. M. Judson Sause leaves one son.

THE CHATEAU OF MONTPLAISIR

By MOLLY ELLIOT SEAWELL

A delightfully humorous novel of modern French life. A wealthy old soap boiler in search of family connections bargains with a penniless young nobleman to be recognized as a member of the nobleman's family. He renovates the nobleman's ruined chateau, and it becomes the scene of some capital opera bouffe.

Master Painters for Open Shop.

The master painters of a part of Essex and Hudson Counties in New Jersey have decided in favor of an open-shop policy, and announced yesterday that they were ready to engage union or nonunion men. Many of the journeymen painters who went out on strike last Monday have got employment elsewhere, and those who are still idle say they will hold out for an increase of 25 cents per day and the half holiday on Saturday.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Strong; Call Money Rates, 3@6 Per Cent.

Although denied an official holiday, the greater part of Wall Street's Stock Exchange contingent went on vacation yesterday on its own account, leaving the stock market largely to its own resources. The result was a volume of business little above that of a midsummer session, but in spite of the dullness and the lack of stimulus from London, where the Exchange is closed for a holiday lasting until Tuesday, prices improved steadily from the opening to the close, when in the three active issues of the day, Amalgamated Copper, Reading, and Union Pacific, gains of 2½, 1⅛, and 1½ points respectively had been scored, with substantial advances common throughout the list. For this exhibition of strength the consistently low rates for call money and the outlook for a favorable bank statement to-day were almost wholly responsible, although working to this same end were the day's developments bearing on the steel and iron trades, including that of an increase of $1 a ton in the price of rails at a large Southern plant and heavy sales of certain grades of semi-finished material by Northern manufacturers. Of favorable import also were the State report on the condition of Winter wheat in Texas, which is placed at 100, that State having harvested over 11,000,000 bushels of Winter wheat last year, and the reported condition of 92 for Kansas wheat, according to estimates collected from some 278 grain dealers and millers throughout that State. The only adverse influence of the day, oddly enough, was that derived from the announcement of an issue of $27,750,000 additional common stock by the Baltimore & Ohio, this news leading to a decline of a point in Baltimore & Ohio common, although the preferred issue, which is usually inactive, rose 3½ points. Rather sharp gains were made by certain specialties, including Pacific Coast shares, which rose 6½ points on reports of a near-by change in the control of that company. Much of Amalgamated Copper's strength was due to the belief that the company's dividend will be increased at the approaching meeting of the Directors.

From preliminary estimates of the currency movements of the week it became fairly certain that to-day's bank statement will show last week's deficit of $2,300,000 entirely recovered, with the further possibility of a substantial addition to surplus. For this betterment the stoppage of recent drains to the Sub-Treasury through pension and mail payments, coupled with receipts of gold and of cash from the interior, are responsible. The maximum estimate of the gain from the interior is placed at $2,700,000, against a loss of very much more than this a week ago. In view of this turn in the money currents between this city and the interior there was a disposition to consider the Spring outflow of cash at an end, and while this may prove to be not wholly true, a decided diminution in the demands upon local banks is not unlikely. The foreign exchange market in the early part of the day was decidedly weak, demand sterling falling some 30 points, but at the close of the session all but 10 points of this decline had been recovered. Paris was the only one of the three great European markets open for business yesterday, and there prices were weak.

RUMPUS AT MEETING OF RUBBER GOODS CO.

Mr. Heckscher Complains of Transfer of Control.

ATTACKS BRADY SYNDICATE

News of a stormy scene at Thursday's meeting of the stockholders of the Rubber Goods Manufacturing Company came out yesterday. August Heckscher raised the rumpus. He said that he, a stockholder with 1,500 shares of common and 2,400 shares preferred Rubber Goods stock, did not like the way the control of the company had been turned over to the United States Rubber Company by the Brady syndicate. The Rubber Goods stockholders, said Mr. Heckscher, didn't get what they were entitled to.

It was a year ago that the United States Rubber Company took over the Rubber Goods Company. Anthony N. Brady, at the head of a syndicate, managed it. He offered to get the consent of at least 67 per cent. of the Rubber Goods stockholders to convert their holdings into United States Rubber shares. The proposal was made at a conference between the Brady syndicate and the United States Rubber Directors last May, and two weeks afterward the Directors approved the scheme.

Since then no open protest has been heard except this one from Mr. Heckscher. The United States Rubber officials say that everybody ought to be satisfied, especially the Rubber Goods stockholders.

"When the officers of the United States Rubber Company submitted to their stockholders the plan to get control of the other company," said Mr. Heckscher at the meeting, "they said that the net earnings of the Rubber Goods Company for the last year had been more than $1,500,000, yet the Rubber Goods Company's report to its own stockholders said that the income applicable to dividends had been only some $660,000. Now I would like to know which of those statements was correct."

Mr. Heckscher wanted to know, too, how the 23,000 shares of Rubber Goods preferred, issued last year, had been procured by the United States Rubber Company. The Secretary of the latter company explained yesterday how it was done. One million dollars of the stock was issued before the Brady syndicate deal to supply money for additions to the plant. After the deal was arranged another $300,000 was added to that issue and $1,000,000 was issued to purchase the General Rubber Company. Then the 23,000 shares ($2,300,000) were exchanged, share for share, for United Rubber first preferred.

Two shares of Rubber Goods common were exchanged for one share of United States Rubber second preferred. With the former paying no dividends and the latter paying 6 per cent., the men who favored the conversion don't see how holders of Rubber Goods common have any reason to complain. At present the market price of Rubber Goods common is 43, and that of United States Rubber second preferred is about 82. These figures would indicate, advocates of the syndicate say, that the public considered Rubber Goods common a little more than half as good an investment as United States Rubber second preferred.

August Heckscher was Chairman of the Stockholders' Committee of the Corn Products Company, which committee was formed last year to protest against the management of the company.

The three new Directors of the Rubber Goods Company elected Thursday are all Directors of the United States Rubber Company, so that now the board contains only three men not United States Rubber Directors.

IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

Price of Open Hearth Rails Is Increased $1 a Ton.

Announcement was made yesterday that the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company had raised its price for steel rails for 1907 delivery from $28 to $29 a ton. This was a great surprise to the street rail market, for the uniform price has been $28 for several weeks.

The explanation advanced by officials of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company is that their rails are superior to all others, and that therefore railroad companies do not object to paying the extra dollar. The Tennessee Coal and Iron Company makes rails only by the open-hearth process, and these, in the opinion of their makers, are much superior to Bessemer rails.

When John A. Topping, Chairman of the Board of Directors and of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company, and President of the Republic Iron and Steel Company, was asked yesterday to make comment on the change in price, at first he refused to say anything. Finally he said:

"On account of the superiority of the open-hearth rail, users are willing to pay $1 more a ton for them than for other rails. It is just a matter of the recognition of merit."

The present capacity of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company is about 20,000 tons of steel rails a month.

Purchases of iron this week are said to have exceeded those of any previous week. These large purchases, despite the fact that the market has recovered from the slight recessions which occurred last week in the price of iron, show, it is believed, that consumers are confident of the future of the market. The amount of basic iron purchased by the cast iron pipe interests is estimated at 60,000 tons or more. Referring to the transactions in foundry iron, Rogers, Brown & Co. say in their weekly circular:

"The largest recent transactions in foundry irons have been the purchases by the leading pipe interests, who report March as the most active month in their career, and have bought upward of sixty to seventy thousand tons of various foundry grades within the last few days. A large part of these orders was taken by Southern producers, who appear to have established their schedules firmly on a $14 Birmingham basis."

NO OFFER FOR TOLEDO BONDS.

The Holders Accordingly Organize a Protective Committee.

The holders of Toledo Railway and Terminal bonds did not get yesterday an offer from the Morgan interests for an adjustment of their claims, which would have averted active steps on their part to protect their interests, and as a result a protective committee representing the bondholders was formally organized. The attorneys for the bondholders and for the Morgan syndicate, which holds the bulk of Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton stock, had for some time been in communication with each other in reference to a possible adjustment of the bondholders' claims without resorting to foreclosure proceedings, but these interchanges of views brought no definite result. The bondholders therefore determined to proceed with the plans for their own protection.

The committee named yesterday consists of Andrew T. Sullivan, President of the Nassau Trust Company, Brooklyn; R. E. James, President of the Easton Trust Company of Easton, Penn.; Daniel McCoy, President of the State Bank of Michigan of Grand Rapids, and Samuel C. Eastman, President of the New Hampshire Savings Bank of Concord. A Maine man will probably be named as a fifth member of the committee. Mr. Sullivan is Chairman.

The committee held a long session yesterday afternoon, going over the situation, but as their deliberations had not been completed at the close of business, definite announcement of the committee's plans in regard to legal proceedings was postponed. The interest on the bonds of the Toledo Railway and Terminal Company fell due last January, but the company had until April 1 to make good the default on the bonds. This the company failed to do and the holders of its bonds are therefore in a position to proceed immediately to bring foreclosure proceedings.

Mr. Sullivan said last night that the committee will hold another meeting on Tuesday next and that meanwhile the legal questions involved had been submitted to counsel.

LACKAWANNA BUYS DOCKS.

Will Repair Its Own Boats at Plant in South Brooklyn.

Negotiations have been completed for the acquisition of the Brooklyn Warehouse and Dry Dock Company and the Brooklyn Dock and Terminal Company, in South Brooklyn, by the Lackawanna Railroad. In addition to giving that road increased facility for handling harbor traffic this deal will enable it to repair for itself its fleet of harbor boats, as well as its ferryboats in service on the North River. The plan of the Lackawanna was primarily to acquire the dry dock facilities of the Brooklyn Warehouse and Dry Dock Company, but it was able at the same time to purchase upon advantageous terms the Brooklyn Dock and Terminal Company, and it is considered by the officers of the railroad that these two acquisitions will prove of great value to the company.

The property acquired by the Lackawanna is situated on the Gowanus Channel, and takes in the shore from Twenty-fourth to Twenty-sixth Street. The land extends back to Third Avenue, and gives the Lackawanna close connections with the lines of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit system.

At present the Lackawanna has its harbor fleet, which has grown to large proportions in recent years, repaired under contract. It is proposed now to do this work more economically by the company owning its own dry dock.

CURRENCY MOVEMENT.

The reported movements of currency this week indicate a gain in cash held by the banks of $1,781,400. They received from the interior $8,442,100, and sent to the interior $7,421,700, including transfers through the Sub-Treasury of $50,000 to New Orleans, $750,000 to San Francisco, and $2,542,000 National banknotes sent to Washington for redemption. The gain from the interior was $1,020,400.

Receipts of new gold were $1,310,100, namely, $425,000 gold imports, $854,200 on New York Assay Office checks, $17,100 on San Francisco Mint checks, and $13,800 on Seattle Assay Office checks.

Ordinary disbursements by the Sub-Treasury were $21,005,900. Payments by the banks to the Sub-Treasury for customs, internal revenue, 5 per cent. redemption funds, &c., were $21,555,000. The loss on Sub-Treasury operations proper was $549,100. The total gain from the interior, $1,020,400, and new gold, $1,310,100, was $2,330,500. Deducting from this the loss on Sub-Treasury operations proper the net gain was $1,781,400.

Receipts of currency from the interior were $4,514,000 more than in the preceding week, while shipments were $5,454,700 less. Receipts were chiefly from near-by points and the South. Shipments were mostly also to near-by and Eastern points, and to some extent to the West. The gain from near-by points, chiefly from Boston and Philadelphia, represented to a considerable extent transfers of deposits of interior banks at those cities to New York, in order to take advantage of the high rates for money. Receipts from the South were larger than for any week this Spring. This may be an indication that cotton is being marketed, thereby releasing the money which has been employed in holding it. The large decrease in shipments of currency indicates that the Spring movement to the interior is nearly over.

The loss on Sub-Treasury operations proper is the smallest since the week ending Jan. 27, in which week there was a gain of $585,200. The expenditures of the Government through the New York Sub-Treasury are largest in the first month of every quarter. In that month payment is made to the trunk line railroads for carrying the mail during the preceding quarter, and there are also more pension checks made payable here than in the other two months of the quarter. Customs collections were $3,461,700, comparing with $4,001,000 in the preceding week. There was an increase in pension payments to $1,466,000, comparing with $428,000 in the preceding week.

THE BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY,

TREASURER'S OFFICE.
BALTIMORE, Md., April 13th, 1906.

To the Stockholders of The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors held this day the following resolution was adopted:

WHEREAS, the Capital Stock of this Company is insufficient for the purposes for which this Company was incorporated;

RESOLVED, by the President and Directors of The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, that the Capital Stock of this Company be and the same is hereby increased by the amount of Two Hundred and Seventy-seven Thousand Five Hundred (277,500) shares of One Hundred Dollars ($100) each of the Common Stock, so that with such increase the Capital Stock of the Company shall consist of Six Hundred Thousand (600,000) shares of One Hundred Dollars ($100) each of Preferred Capital Stock, and One Million Five Hundred and Twenty-Seven Thousand Five Hundred (1,527,500) shares of One Hundred Dollars ($100) each of Common Capital Stock;

RESOLVED FURTHER, that the privilege be given to the holders of the Capital Stock of the Company, Common and Preferred, to subscribe at par, between May 21st and 25th, 1906, both dates inclusive, on which latter date the privilege shall cease, for shares of Common Capital Stock to the amount of Fifteen per cent. (15%) of their respective holdings as they stand registered on the books of the Company at 3 o'clock P. M. on April 27th, 1906; warrants to be issued to each Stockholder by the Treasurer, specifying the amount of stock to which he is entitled to subscribe under this privilege. Payment of Twenty per cent. (20%) of the amount of the subscription shall be made by each shareholder on May 25th, 1906, forty per cent. (40%) on July 16th, 1906, and the balance, forty per cent. (40%), on September 17th, 1906. Warrants must be returned to the Treasurer when first instalment is paid, for which negotiable receipts will be issued, and if not so returned, and the first instalment so paid, the warrants to be void and of no value.

On May 25th any Stockholder having paid the first instalment may also pay the second or both remaining instalments, for which full paid negotiable receipts will be issued.

Interest will be allowed to September 1, 1906, at the rate of five per cent. (5%) per annum from the date on which instalments are paid.

Upon surrender at the Company's office, No. 2 Wall Street, New York City, N. Y., or to its agents, Messrs. Speyer Brothers, No. 7 Lothbury, London, E. C., England, of full paid negotiable receipts on or after September 17th, 1906, certificates of Stock of the Company for its Common Capital Stock to the amount of one share of such stock for each One Hundred Dollars ($100) of full paid negotiable receipts will be issued. The stock when delivered will carry any dividends that may be declared after September 1, 1906.

For fractional warrants, fractional receipts will be issued, and when full paid, will be exchanged for fractional non-dividend bearing stock scrip, which may be converted into Common Stock Certificates on presentation at the Company's office in sums of One Hundred Dollars each, or multiples thereof, and such fractional stock scrip as may not be so converted on or before December 31, 1906, will be redeemed at par.

For the above purpose the transfer books of the Company will be closed at 3 P. M. on April 27th, 1906, and will be reopened at 10 o'clock A. M. on May 14th.

Circulars giving full particulars for availing of the above privilege will be mailed to stockholders of record. J. V. McNEAL, Treasurer.

A New Basis of Organization.

The COPETE CONSOLIDATED COPPER COMPANY starts with all its stock Treasury stock, and no stock is to be issued except for cash.

The importance of this to the investor is apparent at once. Most mining companies issue a large part of their stock to their promoters, or for property at an extravagant cash valuation. This stock so issued shares in the payment of dividends on equal terms with the stock sold for cash. The man who pays cash for the stock divides the earnings of the property with the man who bought his stock some other way.

In the COPETE CONSOLIDATED the men who pay cash for their stock have all the profit, and there is no division except among the cash stockholders.

The COPETE property is one of the largest, most famous and best indorsed copper properties in the world. The COPETE CONSOLIDATED COPPER COMPANY has a very low capitalization and is most carefully and conservatively managed. Its stock is believed by many shrewd and successful investors to be the best investment on the market to-day.

Full particulars will be given and prices quoted on application.

TO THE PUBLIC:

There is a fight on in this town between the New York Telephone Company, which owns the town so far as telephones are concerned, and the Atlantic Telephone Company, which is trying to get a chance to compete with the New York Telephone Company.

You will probably receive, if you have not already received, a pamphlet purporting to be issued by the Merchants' Association of New York, but circulated extensively by the New York Telephone Company. This pamphlet is issued for the purpose of showing you that it is a good thing for you to have a monopoly of telephone service, to pay high rates for indifferent service.

The reason for all this excitement on the part of the New York Telephone Company is that the Atlantic Telephone Company is honestly and squarely asking the city government of New York to say what it will charge the Atlantic Telephone Company for the right to furnish telephone service to the people of Greater New York. This right, which the Atlantic Telephone Company asks the city to fix the price for, is, after all, nothing but the privilege of putting its wires in subways which already exist and which were built by the city under the authority of the old Board of Electrical Control, and which have, in later years, been taken by the New York Telephone Company, used by it, kept by it, and made to serve its purposes. They will tell you that we wish to tear up the streets. This is not so. What we wish to tear up is the New York Telephone Company monopoly. They came into New York, and they did not pay one cent for their coming. They built subways in New York which the city owns, but which they use, and they did not pay one cent for the right to build these subways. They monopolized all of the telephone service of the city and fixed their rates to suit themselves. They charge twice as much for sending the human voice from one end of Manhattan to the other as the railroad companies do for sending the human body from one end of Manhattan to the other, not counting the time involved.

Now, as against all of this, the Atlantic Telephone Company offers the city three million dollars, to be paid annually for twenty-five years; and, in addition, offers to furnish the city with a complete free telephone service, which will relieve them from paying the New York Telephone Company Two hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars a year in telephone bills, as they do now.

In addition to this the Atlantic Telephone Company purposes to enter into an agreement with the city to cut the borough rates fifty per cent. less than those of the New York Telephone Company and the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, and to cut the party line rates more than forty per cent.

The reason that the Atlantic Telephone Company offers to do so much is because it proposes to use the automatic telephone system, which can be used much more cheaply than the manual system, now used by the New York Telephone Company.

The question now is, Shall the Atlantic Telephone Company be shut out of New York, and shall the city be deprived of a free telephone service and the three million dollars, which the Atlantic Telephone Company offers to pay, in order that the New York Telephone Company may go on charging high rates and occupying the entire subways of Manhattan without cost, and charging rentals to other concerns to suit itself; or shall the Atlantic Telephone Company be permitted, after having paid its way honestly, to furnish to the inhabitants of Greater New York telephones in each borough at five cents a call, and telephones between boroughs at ten cents a call, over the most modern and approved telephone system?

The New York Telephone Company reduced its rates the other day. It did this because our application for a franchise was pending, and it threw this sop to the public hoping the public would be satisfied. It intends to reduce its rates again, hoping to curry favor with the public. What we mean to do is to make it let go of the subway franchise, which it simply took away from the city; to make it cut its rates down in competition with ours; make it improve its telephone service, and not only make it do that for a day or a week, but make it keep its rates and its service that way for all time.

The public can judge. Look out for circulars and pamphlets and stories in the newspapers. Look out for charges that we have not got the money. Look out for all of the arguments which a monopoly can make against competition. But the Atlantic Telephone Company is in the fight to stay.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Early Irregularity, Followed by General Improvement.

Amalgamated Copper's Strength Helps Copper Group—Mackay Companies Common the Market Feature.

The market for outside securities was irregular until the late trading yesterday, when a general improvement was scored. The copper group particularly responded to the strength of Amalgamated Copper on the regular board, even the lowliest of the metal shares receiving an impetus therefrom. United Copper was heavy early in the day, and declined from 67⅞ to 66⅞, but later rose to 67⅜; Butte Coalition receded from 36 to 35½, recovering again to 36¼; Copper Securities rose from 38¼ to 38⅝, Gold Hill from 2¼ to 2¾, and Union Copper, in which activity notably increased, from 1⅞ to 2⅜. Mackay Companies common shares, however, were the real market feature, the common on moderately large trading advancing from 63⅛ to 65⅜ and losing but an eighth at the close. The preferred, however, shared but little in the strength of the common shares, the only sales being made at 72⅜ and 72⅞. Chicago Subway receded from 55¼ to 54⅝, but later advanced to 55⅛. Inter-Met common and preferred sold at respectively 53⅝ and 53¾ and 89⅞@90. Although announcement was only made during the day of the increase in Baltimore & Ohio's common capital stock, a market was immediately made for the "rights" in connection therewith, and considerable amounts changed hands at 1⅜@1 5-16.

The principal transactions reported yesterday in the outside market, with high, low, and last prices, were as follows:

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The American Savings Bank has moved into its new quarters at 115 West Forty-second Street, between Sixth Avenue and Times Square. It is open from 9 A. M. to 4 P. M.

George C. Lee, Jr., of the firm of Lee, Higginson & Co. of Boston was elected a Director of the City Investing Company at a meeting of the Board of Directors, held Thursday.

The Albany & Susquehanna Railroad Company has applied to the Stock Exchange to list $10,000,000 3½ per cent. forty-year bonds of 1946. The United Railways Investment Company of San Francisco has applied to list $9,400,000 additional common stock.

Interests affiliated with the Louisiana & Arkansas Railway have obtained control of a large amount of standing long-leaf yellow pine. When trees are logged the land on which they now stand will be laid out in farms.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

"I am about to lose a very active client," said a member of a large banking firm a few days ago. "For what reason?" he was asked. "Simply because we will not install a quotation board for his benefit. He is a man who trades incessantly, always for quick profits, and he tells me that he cannot keep the run of the market by the tape. He must have it all spread out before him like a panorama, or topographically, as it were. He says that when he tries to follow the market by the tape he misses many cues which he could get from a board, and so he will transfer his account to an office where they keep a board."

* * *

The problem of how best to display quotations, if at all, is one that must be settled in each office according to the wishes and proclivities of a majority of its clients. Some houses, especially those which choose to emphasize the banking atmosphere of their establishments, do not display them at all. Their clients are not supposed to be interested so much in fluctuations as in values, and in their business the tickers alone suffice. Other offices, having a like prejudice against boards, compromise by keeping quotations in pencil on a large sheet of ruled paper which rests on an inclined surface, as on a writing desk, and is renewed each morning. A boy transcribes the prices from the tape to this sheet, and it answers for clients who wish to keep the run of fluctuations. About nine offices in ten, however, keep a quotation board. There are two kinds. One is written up in chalk, and on the other the prices are shown by printed cards, which, of course, must be changed for each active stock two or three times a minute. A large board of this kind keeps two boys busy. The card board is the one most in use. A trader who is accustomed to the card board is bewildered by a chalk board, and vice versa. In Chicago the chalk board is popular. Clients prefer it to the card board, and, of course, get the kind they want. The chief objection to a quotation board is that it attracts office sitters. Some brokers think that a board of any kind detracts from the tone of the office. But, however that may be, a very large majority of customers like to look at a board, and it is a broker's business to give them what they ask for. When Western brokers began several years ago to establish themselves in Wall Street they thought to subordinate, in appearance at least, the highly speculative nature of Western business by doing without the quotation board, but most of them had to put in boards sooner or later, because their clients cared nothing for appearances. A Western house that has stood out against a board for several years is now installing one.

There is perhaps only one prominent manipulator in Wall Street who ever looks at a quotation board during business, and he is a Western man. Wall Street manipulators usually sit in a room with a ticker, and the tape tells them all that they want to know. No topographical effects for them. It is almost wonderful the comprehensive idea such a man possesses of a day's market after having followed the tape. He misses no cues. But this "feeling" of the tape is the result of long training.

* * *

Yesterday's stock market was a stupid, perfunctory affair until after 2 o'clock. In the last hour, especially in the last half hour, the volume of trading increased heavily on rising prices. The leaders, as usual of late, were Amalgamated Copper and Union Pacific, both of which had been strong throughout the session. They were bought in a very aggressive manner in the last hour, Union Pacific crossing 157 and Amalgamated Copper going to 113. The other market moved up and closed with an exhibition of considerable buoyancy. The buying of Union Pacific and Amalgamated Copper emanated chiefly from highly speculative sources. Wolf Brothers were large buyers of the former and the House of Twelve partners was equally prominent in Amalgamated Copper.

* * *

There was hardly enough general commission business to reward brokers for the trouble of keeping open, but it was not business that they were looking for. They got money at 5¾ and 6 per cent., which probably would have cost them 10 per cent. or more on Thursday if they had been obliged to make loans on that day which would stand over until Monday. That is what they would have had to do if the Governors had consented to close on Friday. So on the whole brokers were very well satisfied yesterday. Money lenders became suddenly solicitous for the welfare of borrowers, seeking them out and pressing money upon them at 5¾ and 6 per cent., which two days before was inaccessible at much higher rates.

* * *

Yesterday a broker borrowed call money at 5¾ per cent. and then borrowed Amalgamated Copper stock at 7 per cent., making 1¼ per cent. in interest on the transaction. The lender of the Amalgamated Copper stock paid him 7 per cent. interest to carry it. This stock continues to lend over the money rate. The rate of interest, or carrying charge, should be higher on industrial than on good railroad collateral, but it seems that such discrimination is becoming somewhat more pronounced on the part of the principal money lending institutions. A broker, who has, say, 5,000 shares of Amalgamated Copper to carry may well afford to pay another broker 1½ or 2 per cent. over the current rate of interest to carry it for him. If he tendered it to a bank as collateral for a loan it would be unacceptable by itself, as any other industrial stock would be, besides which the bank would require a margin of about 20 per cent., whereas he can lend the stock at its market value. The broker who borrows the stock merely for the sake of the money he makes between what he pays for money and what the lender of the stock pays him to carry it, as in the instance given, assumes a risk which the bank is unwilling to take. He is virtually lending the other broker the full market value of Amalgamated Copper.

* * *

The reasons, perhaps, that Amalgamated Copper furnishes the most prominent example of the discrimination against industrials are, first, that there is so much of it in the Street, and, secondly, because the speculation in Amalgamated Copper is more active than that in any other industrial.

* * *

The Baltimore & Ohio announcement took the market by surprise. There had been no definite rumor of a new stock issue. It is argued by speculators that Baltimore & Ohio will have to be held above 110 to make the new stock look attractive at par. It might be supposed that those responsible for the success of the new issue would, under favorable conditions, inaugurate a bull campaign in the old stock in order to emphasize the privilege of getting the new shares at par. The market's reception of rights, resulting from the placing of new stock at concessions from the market valuation of the old stock, depends a good deal on its mood. Rights are bearish in a bear market and bullish in a bull market. A little while ago New York Central broke very sharply on the announcement that stockholders would be asked to approve a large issue of new stock. Baltimore & Ohio declined yesterday on a similar announcement. Since the Baltimore & Ohio dividend was increased from 4 to 5 per cent. the stock has positively refused to lend itself to bullish operations of a speculative nature. Many have tried to bull it, and all have failed. The insiders, apparently, have not tried.

* * *

The great strength of Amalgamated Copper yesterday gave rise to rumors of an increase of the dividend at the meeting next Thursday. There is still no definite information on the subject. Those who might know seem to think that an increase at this time is probable, but they are seemingly unwilling to go on record with a positive prediction that it will be raised.

Marconi Wireless

An Established, Operating, Commercial Success.

THE BEST INVESTMENT IN THE WORLD.

We have been continuously telling our customers and friends about Marconi Securities. Every word we have said is coming true and much we did not venture to predict. The American people are now awake to the importance and usefulness of the MARCONI SYSTEM, and the demand for the securities has been unprecedented. It would take a book to tell you all about this greatest of inventions. We print the main facts in our prospectus and a good deal of additional information is contained in "THE MARCONI WIRELESS NEWS," both of which are free to you upon application.

To those who are not familiar with the great progress that has been made by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company we publish below a few facts:

The Marconi System has the largest field to work of any enterprise in the world, being adapted to land and sea in every clime in every part of the earth's surface.

The business is on an established commercial basis, now earning money every day and hour.

Its arrangement with the Western Union and Postal Telegraph Companies gives it the use of their 30,000 offices, covering the United States and Canada, so that a message can be sent from and received in every town and hamlet.

Its Officers and Directors include men of the highest business standing and capacity, including John W. Griggs, President of the Company and former Governor of New Jersey, and ex-Attorney-General of the United States; with a strong Board of Directors, and Thomas A. Edison, with other leading scientists as Consulting Engineers.

The English Marconi Company, which was brought out previous to the American Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company, according to their annual statement, earned

GUGLIELMO MARCONI.

SEVEN PER CENT. NET LAST YEAR.

A remarkable showing for a young company. The American Marconi Company, which is younger, has the advantage of all the English Company's expenditures, and is growing rapidly, and with its much larger territory its earnings should be much greater.

IT IS NOW TO THE OCEAN WHAT THE BELL TELEPHONE IS ON LAND,

One hundred dollars originally invested in Bell Telephone stock now represents $200,000 value.

The Company is capitalised exceedingly low, has no Bonds or Preferred Stock, and its securities are based on the assets, contracts, and patents of the System in the United States and its possessions and dependencies.

First in the field, based on the highest scientific principles and the widest experiments, and will always be FIRST, like the Bell Telephone.

Electric inventions have proved the most profitable of all investments, and the Marconi Wireless will ECLIPSE them all, as it does in utility and wideness of field.

Its stockholders embrace the most conservative investors in America, including bankers, merchants, mechanics, and professional men of all classes.

The Marconi System is now in daily operation between both sides of the Atlantic and trans-Atlantic steamships and most war vessels at sea. These securities offer the greatest investment opportunity in the world, and will LAY THE FOUNDATION OF YOUR FORTUNE.

Your chance for profit is in finding out that the investment is a good one before everybody else knows it. If Bell Telephone stock were offered now at the price it was sold to original investors, it wouldn't last a minute. $100 invested in Bell Telephone stock in 25 years increased to over $200,000. The only difference between the Bell Telephone opportunity you missed and the MARCONI opportunity you need NOT MISS is in the name. The time to buy is while Marconi stocks are cheap.

Bell opportunity is one opportunity worth regretting. Marconi Wireless Telegraph is just as good to-day.

The New York "Sun," January 28, 1906, says:

"One thousand messages, commercial and personal, have been sent from one ship to others and to shore stations on one trip in the busy season. This means an expenditure by the passengers for Marconi Wireless messages of more than $2,000. On a recent trip to New York from Hamburg the Amerika sent 700 dispatches to ship and shore."

Now is the time to buy Marconi Securities. To-morrow may be too late. A big demand and an advance in price are at hand.

Invest Before the Next Great Rise in These Securities and Reap the Benefit.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 13.—The local money market holds firm. The usual table of rates, &c., follows:

Call loans, 7@10 per cent.; time loans, collateral, 5½@6 per cent.; time loans, mercantile paper, 5½@6 per cent.; Clearing House loans, 6 per cent.; New York funds at par; clearings, $28,847,296; balances, $2,324,008; Sub-Treasury debit, $9,949.

Local trading during the first hour was quiet and without particular feature. However, good-sized buying orders later made their appearance in Trinity, the stock advancing to 12⅞, a gain of nearly a point from the opening quotation. Popular attention was then directed toward North Butte, which opened at 84½, and advanced to 86⅞, a good part of the buying apparently being for New York and Western account. Amalgamated was strong and active, opening at 110⅜, and gaining over 2 points and closing at the top. The balance of the copper list was strong, and gains are generally shown, the market closing firm.

TRADE CONDITIONS.

Dun's Review for the week says the progress of trade and industry has not been interfered with by the money stringency, though it has tended to develop conservatism in speculation. Building operations are limited only by the supply of labor and capital and the consumption of commodities is shown by the highest level of quotations since February, 1884. The Review continues:

Manufacturing plants are fully engaged; pig iron production is at the maximum; shipments of footwear from Boston exceed those of any previous year, and a stronger tone is reported at the textile mills in response to the well-maintained markets for raw materials. Railway earnings for the first week of April were 8.1 per cent. larger than last year's, although prices of securities have weakened somewhat in response to the highest money market at this season in many years. Official statistics of foreign commerce for the month of March indicate that exports of farm staples were valued at $59,750,000, an increase of $3,250,000 as compared with the corresponding period last year, when the movement was exceptionally heavy. Bank exchanges at New York were 3.9 per cent. larger than a year ago, while at other leading cities there was an average gain of 7.7 per cent.

This as to railroad earnings:

Gross earnings of all railroads in the United States reporting for the first week of April are $5,288,332, a gain of 8.1 per cent. over the corresponding week last year. The same roads for the first week of March reported a gain of 9.2 per cent., while earnings of leading systems reporting for the month increased only 7.5 per cent.

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 13.—An order for 500 shares of Kansas City Light preferred on the local Exchange this morning around 89 seemed to take up all the available stock at that level and as a result the stock turned very strong and ran up to 90¼. The common stock, which has been easy for some time, sympathized a little and sold around 62½.

There was fresh bullish talk on American Shipbuilding. It was said that recent buying in the stock was based on reports that efforts would be made to induce the Directors to pay 5 per cent. dividends on the common stock. Can issues were easy. Chicago Subway common sold at 92. West Chicago was firmer at 26. Box Board preferred dipped below 12 again.

IMPORTS OF DRY GOODS.

Imports of dry goods at the Port of New York for the week were valued at $3,518,260, as against $3,175,161 for the previous week and $2,735,170 for the corresponding week last year. The value of the amount marketed was $3,253,125, as against $3,080,454 the previous week and $2,660,276 for the corresponding week last year.

COPPER MARKET REPORTS.

Urgent demand is said to exist for spot copper, which is taken as an indication that despite the large orders which were placed by consumers they are actually in need of more copper than they have contracted for. This, it is pointed out in trade circles, proves conclusively that consumption is still keeping ahead of production.

PUBLIC NOTICES.

SECOND DEPARTMENT.

In the matter of the application of The City of New York to acquire certain real estate upon Pine's Stream and East Meadow Stream, in the Town of Hempstead, in the County of Nassau, for purposes of water supply.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT AN application will be made to the Supreme Court of the State of New York, at a Special Term thereof, for the hearing of motions, to be held in and for the County of Kings, at the County Court House, in the Borough of Brooklyn, in The City of New York, on the 20th day of April, 1906, at the opening of the Court on that day, or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard, for the appointment of Commissioners of Appraisal to ascertain and appraise the compensation which ought justly to be made by The City of New York to the owners or persons interested in the real estate in the Town of Hempstead, County of Nassau, sought to be acquired herein for the purpose of maintaining, preserving, and increasing the supply of pure and wholesome water for the use of The City of New York, and affected by this proceeding.

CITY OF NEW YORK.

BOARD OF ESTIMATE AND APPORTIONMENT.

Public notice is hereby given that at a meeting of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, held March 30, 1906, the following petition was received:

To the Honorable, the Board of Estimate and Apportionment:

The petition of the Williams Terminal Railway Company respectfully shows:

1. That your petitioner is a street surface railway corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New York, having filed its certificate of incorporation in the office of the Secretary of State of New York on the 29th day of July, 1905, for the purpose of constructing, maintaining, and operating a street surface railway in the Borough of Brooklyn, City of New York.

2. That your petitioner desires to obtain from the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of The City of New York its consent to and a grant of the right, privileges, and franchise to use a portion of Bowne Street, in the Borough of Brooklyn, City of New York, for street railway purposes, and for the construction, maintenance and operation of a single track street surface railway upon and along the surface of said Bowne Street, a description of such proposed railway being as follows: Beginning at a point southeast of Imlay Street, where it will connect with the track of the New York Dock Company, and running southeasterly along Bowne Street to and into the property of J. H. Williams & Co., on the easterly side of Richards Street, the entire length of said road not to exceed nine hundred feet, together with the necessary connections, switches, sidings, turn-outs, turn-tables, cross-overs, and suitable stands necessary for the accommodation and operation of the said railroad by the overhead system of electricity, or other power lawfully employed by connecting railroads, all in the Borough of Brooklyn, City and State of New York.

3. Your petitioner further shows that there is no adequate means of transportation provided between the termini of the proposed railroad, and your petitioner believes there is a public demand for the construction and operation of this proposed railroad, and that such construction and operation will be a public convenience and benefit, the said railroad to be used for freight only.

Wherefore, your petitioner prays that the notice of the time and place when and where this application will be first considered be given, pursuant to provisions of Section 92 of the Railroad Law, and all other laws applicable thereto, and that consent or grant be given in the form of an ordinance subject to the laws and ordinances applicable thereto, and upon terms and conditions to be fixed in accordance with the provisions of the Greater New York Charter.

THE WILLIAMS TERMINAL RAILWAY COMPANY,
By JAMES H. WILLIAMS, Vice President.

Dated City of New York, Borough of Brooklyn, February 23, 1906.

State of New York, County of Kings, ss.:

James H. Williams, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is the Vice President of the Williams Terminal Railway Company, the petitioner named in the foregoing petition; that he has read the foregoing petition and knows the contents thereof; that the same is true of his own knowledge, except as to the matters therein stated to be alleged on information and belief, and as to those matters he believes it to be true.

JAMES H. WILLIAMS.

Sworn to before me this 23d day of February, 1906.

A. Y. BRITTON,
Notary Public, Westchester County.
Certificate filed in Kings County.

And the following resolutions were thereupon adopted:

Whereas, the foregoing petition from the Williams Terminal Railway Company, dated February 23, 1906, was presented to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment at a meeting held March 30, 1906;

Resolved, That in pursuance of law this Board sets Friday, the 27th day of April, 1906, at 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon, and Room 16 in the City Hall, Borough of Manhattan, as the time and place when and where such petition shall be first considered, and a public hearing be had thereon, at which citizens shall be entitled to appear and be heard; and be it further

Resolved, That the Secretary is directed to cause such petition and these resolutions to be published for at least fourteen (14) days in two daily newspapers in the City of New York, to be designated by the Mayor, and for at least ten (10) days in the "City Record" immediately prior to such date of public hearing. The expense of such publication to be borne by the petitioner.

Chicago Traction Men to Appeal.

Representatives of Chicago traction interests said yesterday that they had no knowledge of the rumored plan to submit the dispute between the traction companies and the City of Chicago to a body of eminent citizens as arbitrators. The traction interests have decided to apply to the Supreme Court for a rehearing of the case recently decided against them by that court.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Cotton Hosiery to Pay Higher Rate—Other Decisions.

In a decision by Marion De Vries, the Board of United States General Appraisers decided yesterday that cotton hosiery exported by Max Werner of Thalheim, Germany, and entered at New York, must pay duty on a higher invoice value. It appears that ladies' black cotton hosiery was entered at 4.404 marks per dozen, whereas the Collector deemed the correct values to be 4.754 marks per dozen. The importer appealed to the Board of Appraisers for relief, with the result that the Collector was affirmed in demanding duty on the higher basis.

In a decision by General Appraiser Howell the board decided that silk ribbons exported by R. Raimon of Paris must stand duty at the valuation imposed by Collector Stranahan. The importers were dissatisfied with the classification found by the Collector, and took an appeal to the board.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

Among the creditors are Ellen M. Powers, $850, secured; Roebling Construction Company, $2,203, and Frank L. Froment, $1,041.

Hundreds of Old Bankruptcies Ended.

Referees in bankruptcy have closed up several hundred old cases in the past few weeks under the rule made by Judges Adams and Holt of the United States District Court to wind up cases over eighteen months old where proceedings have halted. Some of the cases have been pending since the Bankruptcy act went into effect in 1898. In many instances bankrupts have died, have left the city, attorneys have died, and receivers and trustees have either failed to qualify or neglected to get discharged.

Weekly Failure Report.

Bradstreet's reports 161 failures in the United States during the week, against 151 for the previous week and 196, 198, 160, and 199 for the corresponding weeks of 1905 to 1902. The Middle States had 42, New England 27, Southern 32, Western 20, Northwestern 12, Pacific 17, and Territories 2. Canada had 15, against 17 for the preceding week. About 86 per cent. of the total number of concerns failing had capital of $5,000 or less and 11 per cent. had from $5,000 to $20,000 capital.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD.

Kemp Estate Sells Fifth Avenue Corner—West Twenty-first Street Purchases—Large Volume of Minor Trading.

John N. Golding has sold for the George Kemp Real Estate Company 720 and 722 Fifth Avenue, northwest corner of Fifty-sixth Street, two five-story dwellings, on plot 60 by 100. It is understood that Charles W. Morse is the buyer. Mr. Morse is the owner of two other houses in the same block, 726 and 728. The Kemp properties have been held at $800,000. They were offered at auction about two years ago, but were bid in for the estate at $602,000. The corner house is now occupied under lease by Edwin Gould, and the one adjoining by R. T. Wilson, Jr.

Buyers of West 19th Street Flats.

The King Farm Realty Company is the buyer of the tenements known as Yankee Row, on Nineteenth Street, between Seventh and Eighth Avenues, sold recently by the Philips estate through E. S. Willard & Co.

To Build on Amsterdam Avenue.

Isaac Friedman has sold for Herman Harris the northwest corner of 168th Street and Amsterdam Avenue, 50 by 100, to John Katzman, and has resold the property to a builder, who will erect a six-story apartment house.

Estates Sell on 21st Street.

The estate of Bradish Johnson, which owns the southeast corner of Sixth Avenue and Twenty-first Street, has bought from the estate of Jacob Wall the adjoining property, 64 West Twenty-first Street, a four-story building, 24 by 100.

The Jones estate has sold 48 West Twenty-first Street, a four-story brownstone dwelling, 25 by 100.

George R. Read & Co. sold 41 East Forty-first Street, a four-story brownstone dwelling, 20.3 by 53.10 and irregular. This property was scheduled for sale at auction on Thursday, but was withdrawn.

Gustave L. Morgenthau will erect, from plans by Buchman & Fox, a six-story store and loft building on the north side of Seventeenth Street, 81.2 feet east of Sixth Avenue, on a plot 100 by 92, at a cost of $83,000. The front will be of red brick, with granite and limestone trimmings.

New Owners for West Side Dwellings.

Jesse C. Bennett & Co. have sold for E. B. Southworth 317 West Eighty-sixth Street, a five-story American basement dwelling, on lot 17 by 100. The buyer will occupy the house.

L. J. Phillips & Co. have sold for David F. Meyer the four-story dwelling 20 West Seventieth Street.

Population follows Quick Transit and Population Brings Values.

Springfield Park

IS ON THE

and already has the transportation facilities that bring population and make value.

SPRINGFIELD PARK is surrounded by a perfect network of railways and trolleys, which make it a natural town site. These include the steam Montauk Division of the L. I. R. R., which is now the most important division of the road; the New Third Rail line; First-class service on the Freeport Trolley, connecting with Brooklyn and Manhattan; the New York Avenue Trolley, running from Jamaica to Far Rockaway, stops right opposite Springfield Park. The fast trolley service from Rockaway Park, Far Rockaway and Lawrence will be opened shortly. Springfield Park is on the new proposed Boulevard. This will be the largest and best equipped automobile and driving road in Greater New York or Long Island.

Springfield Park will be Twenty Minutes from Herald Square or the City Hall, Manhattan, upon the completion of the Pennsylvania and Interborough tunnels under the East River, with their six tracks.

Lots at SPRINGFIELD PARK, if bought NOW, can be secured for a mere fraction of the cost of any other property. Within New York City limits and accessible to the great centers of population and trade.

LONG ISLAND.
FOR SALE.

BUY LAND AT WHOLESALE

Direct from Owners.

We began purchasing nearly three years since, before the recent advance in values, consequently we can sell at lower prices than brokers are asking to-day.

We handle only our own properties. In buying of us you save all middlemen's profits.

10-Acre tract, 163 lots, Woodhaven Jct., bounded on two sides by macadamized roads, $315 per lot, adjoining land sold for $425.

25-Acre tract, 382 lots Crescent St., East Brownsville, $285 per lot, adjoining property sold for $350.

Save Brokers' Commissions.

We have acreage tracts in direct line of present transit developments and whole blocks of lots in the heart of improved sections, ready for immediate building operations, and suitable for high-class two-family and apartment houses. The best income producing property.

80 lots, Aves. C and D, East 2d and 3d; valuable because not restricted against 2-family houses; sixty per cent. may remain on mortgage.

FLORAL PARK.

20 Minutes From Broadway.

Lot $300. $10 Down & $5 Monthly

With improvements, running water, etc.; no interest or taxes for one year. Title guaranteed. This is without a doubt the most beautiful and attractive piece of property and investment that was ever placed on the market before. Everybody knows John L. Childs, the seed and flower raiser; this property adjoins his handsome estate; it is also right at the depot and trolley. Floral Park has the best railroad service on Long Island, owing to four branch roads running through it. These lots are as good as 100 per cent. investment and could not be bought for less than that in a year from now, and a beautiful home site for any one wishing to build. All the new Penn. R. R. tunnels and improvements go straight to this property. For free tickets, booklets, etc., apply to

LULL IN NEGOTIATIONS IN THE COAL DISPUTE

Balancing Anthracite Against Bituminous Interests.

OPERATORS WON'T REPLY YET

They Will Consult the Independents Before Meeting the Miners—Mitchell is Hopeful.

It was learned yesterday that the anthracite operators believe President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers to be trying to get into a position by which he can play the soft coal interests against the hard coal interests. However that may be, matters have not shaped themselves so that he can carry out this plan.

On behalf of the operators it was stated yesterday that it is not true that the protest of the independent operators against the union was given out for publication without consulting those who signed it. They, on the contrary, authorized the publication of the document.

The operators were notified yesterday that the miners at the Franklin Collieries of the Lehigh Valley Company, especially the foreigners, who cannot speak English, and to whom Mitchell's orders have to be translated, have been making trouble for the pumpworkers and others allowed by Mitchell to remain at work to keep the mines in order. It is supposed that many of them misconstrue Mitchell's instructions.

A crowd of mineworkers gathered around these collieries on Thursday and made threatening demonstrations against the men at work. The latter were afraid to come out, and a Deputy Sheriff with a posse had to be called on to protect them. The Deputy Sheriff and his men kept the crowd at bay all night on Thursday, and yesterday it dispersed at daybreak.

The operators' committee of seven will consult the independent operators before they send their formal reply to Mitchell's latest proposals. It was stated, however, that the formal reply will give no more comfort to the miners than the brief reply given by Mr. Baer on Thursday, and that the latest proposal of the operators was final.

Mitchell appeared yesterday to be hopeful of winning some concessions from the operators. He will leave this city to-day to attend the convention of the National Executive Committee of the Union, which begins in Indianapolis on Tuesday. He will also preside at the National convention of the mine workers on April 17, at which the arbitration proposal of John H. Winder, President of the Soft Coal Operators' Association of Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, will be acted on. Mitchell would not say what stand he will take on this proposal. Regarding the reply of Mr. Baer to the anthracite miners proposition on Thursday Mitchell said:

"I did not consider the little reply we received as final. It was given to us on the spur of the moment, and I do not look on it as the result of deliberation. The written reply will be explicit and give all the details of the points the operators want to make."

Among the visitors to Mitchell yesterday was E. B. Sturges, President of the Clarence Coal Mining Company of Scranton. He is an idependent anthracite operator, and was one of the signers of the protest of the independent operators against the union.

Mr. Sturges had a conference with Mitchell, and later said he believed there would be an anthracite strike.

Soft coal advanced a little yesterday in price and is now $3.50 a ton. A representative of the Fairmont Coal Company, 1 Broadway, which operates soft coal mines, said the soft coal men were waiting to see whether there would be an anthracite strike or not before making any new move.

The price of pea coal, one of the small steam sizes of anthracite, went up yesterday from $4 to $4.35 a ton. The coal dealers said that the operators were releasing a little more domestic coal, but unless they released more it was likely that the prices of domestic coal would soon be raised to consumers.

THINK STRIKE IS CERTAIN.

Anthracite Region Has About Given Up Hope of Settlement.

PHILADELPHIA, April 13.—There was little hope for industrial peace in the anthracite region to-day among the men most interested in the coal situation. All seemed convinced that nothing short of an unexpected intervention of some sort can now prevent a determined strike.

It is regarded as settled that the mine operators have gone as far as they will go. An important official in one of the largest coal companies said to-day at Scranton:

"There will be no more concessions. There will be not one jot conceded by the operators. There will be no more counter propositions, just a simple refusal to consider the miners' latest proposition."

TOO MANY POLICEMEN AND TOO FEW SALARIES

But Maybe the Reinstatements Will Hasten New Precincts.

BINGHAM SHAKES FORCE UP

Police Commissioner Bingham filled his pipe, crushed the tobacco down in the bowl with a lead pencil, leaned back in his office chair, and puffed ruminatively yesterday afternoon.

"Gentlemen," he observed, between puffs, to the reporters, "I'm in a fix. I'm in the fix of the shoemaker who had a superfluity of pegs and a paucity of holes to put them in."

"Are you trying to half-sole the force?" was suggested.

"Be that as it may," responded the Commissioner with a frown at his questioner, "I've got more policemen on my hands than I know how to take care of. I haven't got the money to pay them off, so I've put it up to Mr. Delany, the Corporation Counsel. We'll see what he's going to do about it."

Commissioner Bingham said the muddle was due to the fact that under decision of the courts he had been constrained to reinstate two Inspectors, two Captains, and sixteen Sergeants to duty, and that he hadn't a cent to pay them with. Furthermore, about forty more men are to follow who were dismissed by Commissioner McAdoo on charges of physical disability. The total increase of the salary list will amount to something like $100,000 a year.

Gen. Bingham will put them to work, and Corporation Counsel Delany will ask the Board of Estimate to get an appropriation. According to plans hinted at yesterday at Police Headquarters, the whole scheme will probably lead to the establishment of new precincts and new station houses in Queens and Richmond.

Coincident with the reinstatements, Gen. Bingham announced the transfer of seventeen Captains. The most notable was the transfer of Capt. Stephen O'Brien from the Leonard Street to the City Island Station.

The transfers came like a bomb to a crowd of the old timers at Headquarters, and in a moment 900 reasons were suggested why they had been made.

"The General has certainly tied the can to O'Brien," observed one at the Commissioner's office, "and if he don't have a good time this Summer huntin' rabbits and diggin' potatoes it'll be because he's lazy." Capt. O'Brien was a favorite under Commissioner McAdoo, and was sent to Europe to study traffic conditions as a preliminary to being put in command of the traffic squad. When Gen. Bingham assumed office O'Brien went to the Tenderloin Station for a few days, and then to Leonard Street. Only six of the transfers affected Manhattan. The seventeen include:

Commissioner Bingham was asked what the transfers meant.

"Nothing to say," he replied laconically.

It was reported from other sources that more transfers of Captains may be expected within the next sixty days.

The two Captains reinstated were assigned to duty as follows: Nathaniel Shire to Tottenville, Staten Island, and Michael E. Foody to the Gates Avenue Station, Brooklyn. The two Inspectors, Elbert A. O. Smith and Thomas L. Druhan, were temporarily assigned to duty at Headquarters. The Sergeants were all stationed in Brooklyn and Queens.

Commissioner Bingham was talking about the reinstatements yesterday when he came to the name of Inspector Smith.

"It's a lucky day for Smith, eh?" he remarked.

"Unusually so," a reporter answered. "To-day is Good Friday, the thirteenth of the month. Smith was sworn in as a policeman many years ago on the thirteenth of the month. He has thirteen letters in his name. The case was acted upon thirteen times in the courts. Smith is a member of the Thirteen Club, and is to occupy Seat No. 13 at a dinner of the club to-night."

BINGHAM AND FRAWLEY BILL.

He Doesn't Deny He Asked Policemen to Oppose It.

Police Commissioner Bingham declined yesterday to say whether he had urged a meeting of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association in Maennerchor Hall Thursday night, not to support the Frawley bill, providing for a bipartisan Police Commission for New York City. All he would say was that he went to the meeting and addressed the patrolmen by their invitation.

It is reported that a large number of patrolmen are contributing money to support the Frawley bill.

Damage for Street Railway Victim.

Bridget Leonard, who received serious injuries last June while alighting from a Second Avenue car at Forty-second Street, was awarded a verdict of $1,000 by a jury in the City Court yesterday. Justice Delahanty charged the jury to decide if the conductor had given the signal to go ahead before the plaintiff was safe on the ground. Miss Leonard sued through Abraham Oberstein, her attorney, for $20,000.

O'Brien Asks New Fire Alarm System.

Fire Commissioner O'Brien forwarded a letter to Mayor McClellan yesterday asking the Board of Estimate to authorize an issue of $1,625,000 of corporate stock to establish, build, and equip a new fire alarm system in Manhattan. The Commissioner declares the present system to be inefficient.

ATTACKED BY TWO MEN, EX-SOLDIER KILLS ONE

Button Stops Bullet and Saves the Life of the Other.

ASSAILANTS MEANT TO ROB

Herman C. Miller, ex-cavalryman in the United States Army, was roused from sleep in his flat at 320 East Thirteenth Street yesterday morning by a choking grip on his throat. As he tried to free himself he recognized his assailant as Patrick J. Donovan, a man whom he had thought his friend. On the floor he saw his wife struggling in the grasp of Edward Scanlon, another supposed friend.

Under his pillow, besides diamonds worth $400 and $100 in bills, Miller had a pistol. With the quickness born of his military training he seized the weapon, placed its muzzle close to the stomach of the man who was trying to strangle him, and pulled the trigger. The bullet tore through Donovan's coat, struck a button and glanced off, striking the woman in the leg and inflicting a slight wound.

The grasp on Miller's throat was loosened. Donovan took to his heels. Miller leaped from bed and opeend fire on Scanlon. The first shot took effect and the man dropped to the floor with a bullet in his brain. A second shot struck him in the breast.

All this time the woman was screaming at the top of her voice. Her cries and the sound of the shots attracted the attention of Policeman Dwyer, of the Fifth Street Station, who ran to the Miller house at top speed, rapping for help as he ran. Entering the vestibule he bumped into Donovan.

"Where are you going in such a hurry?" Dwyer demanded as he grabbed for the fugitive's coat.

"I'm going for a doctor," Donovan replied. "A friend of mine is shot up stairs."

Cries of "Stop him! Stop him!" came from a landing above, and Dwyer hung on to his man. When Donovan tried to shake off the policeman's grasp a blow on the head settled him.

Sergt. Hall and Detective Cahill of the Fifth Street Station, with County Detective Reardon, heard Dwyer rap for aid and raced to reinforce him. On the way they were joined by Patrolman Reid.

When the policemen entered the kitchen of the Miller flat they found the ex-soldier ready for them, whether they were friends or foes. He still had three cartridges in his pistol and held it poised for instant defense. Scanlon was dying at his feet.

The police found where the bullet had passed through Donovan's coat and glanced off from a waistcoat button. The cloth was powder burned. He was made a prisoner at once on the charges of assault and attempted robbery.

An ambulance was called from Bellevue Hospital and Dr. Hunt hurried Scanlon to Bellevue, where he died, an hour later, on the operating table. Miller and the woman were taken to the Fifth Street Police Station with Scanlon. Miller was locked up on the charge of homicide and his wife was held as a material witness.

The police were told by Miller that Mr. and Mrs. Martin J. Quinn boarded with him. They were not in the flat at the time of the shooting. The Quinns are close friends of Scanlon and Donovan and were drinking with them shortly before the two men visited the Miller flat. When they learned this the police arrested the Quinns as suspicious persons.

Florence Miller said that Miller was asleep when she heard the bell ring. She knew the Quinns were out and, thinking they had forgotten their key, went to the door expecting to let them in.

"When I opened the door," she said, "Scanlon caught me by the neck and threw me to the floor, while Donovan dashed by me and grabbed my husband. Then came the shooting. It was just 2 o'clock when the bell rang."

Miller, who is barely 25 years old, is tall and broad-shouldered and bears himself in soldierly fashion.

His army record will stand Miller in good stead. He had not attained his majority when war was declared with Spain. He was living then in Cleveland, and enlisted in the First Ohio Volunteer Cavalry. With this command he got no further than camp at Huntsville, Ala. At the conclusion of the war he enlisted in Troop E of the Fifth United States Cavalry, and was sent to Porto Rico. There he won his way to be senior Corporal, and was rated as a sharpshooter. Later he was transferred to the Philippines, where he was employed as a scout. When his time was up he had saved $1,000, and he came to New York. Here he has been employed in various hotels. For several months he has been a clerk at the Hotel du Nord, Irving Place and Fifteenth Street.

He said that he had not the slightest doubt that Scanlon and Donovan meant to "do" him after robbing him, and added:

"Scanlon and Donovan are Turkish bath rubbers and touts. I have always saved my money, and besides what I have in the bank I always carry about $100 with me. The two men have induced me at different times to bet on alleged 'good things.' The good things never went through. Yesterday afternoon I lost $6 on their advice, and when I made the bet they saw my roll."

Coroner Acritelli held Miller in $5,000 bail pending the inquest into Scanlon's death. Donovan's bail was made $7,500, and Quinn and Mrs. Quinn were held in $2,500 bail. Mrs. Miller's bail was fixed at $100. In addition, Donovan and Quinn were held for attempted burglary in the Yorkville Court. They were sent to the Tombs. Mrs. Quinn went to the House of Detention. Mrs. Miller gave bail.

Donovan and Quinn were arraigned before Magistrate Mayo in Yorkville Court in the afternoon. The hearing was adjourned until Monday.

SHOPPERS SCARED BY DOG.

Animal Caused a Commotion in Wanamaker's and Was Killed.

A mongrel dog, seemingly rabid, created a scare about noon yesterday by running into Wanamaker's store by the door at the corner of Tenth Street and Broadway.

When the dog, with froth dripping from its mouth, bolted into the store there was an immediate scramble for safety. Many of the saleswomen hid under counters, while patrons climbed upon stools and anything else that they thought would put them out of the animal's reach. The dog was terrified by the commotion it had caused and, after galloping up and down, fell exhausted in the middle of the store. There men surrounded it and a messenger went for Traffic Policeman Leggett.

Leggett killed the dog with his club.

ROSS AN OLD OFFENDER.

Tried to Pass Bad Draft at the Broadway Central—Wanted in Pittsburg.

According to Assistant Supt. Bailey of the Pinkerton Detective Agency, Philip Ross, who was arrested a few days ago at the Broadway Central Hotel on complaint of its management for attempting to pass a worthless draft, is an old offender, for whom the detectives have long been searching. He is to be sent to Pittsburg Monday to answer a complaint there.

"The fellow has H. H. Cook for one alias that we know of," said Mr. Bailey, "and we don't know yet how many other aliases he has. At my instigation he was arrested by Central Office Detectives Rieth and McMullen on the Broadway Central charge. He didn't succeed in getting any money there as the cashier discovered that his draft was worthless before advancing money on it.

"He is going to Pittsburg to answer a charge brought by the Federal National Bank for the same sort of business. I don't know now just how much he got out of that bank. He used to live in that town. In New York he victimized a line of stores on and near Twenty-third Street."

NEW BOOKS ON MUSIC.

Mr. Krehbiel's Admirable Translations of Kerst's "Beethoven" and "Mozart."—The Story of the Organ.

By RICHARD ALDRICH.

MR. HENRY E. KREHBIEL has translated and edited Friedrich Kerst's two volumes on Beethoven and Mozart. (New York: B. W. Huebsch.) These little books are the excellent outcome of an ingenious idea. Both Mozart and Beethoven were fluently articulate outside their music; both wrote many letters and left records of all sorts concerning their views on many subjects. The industrious Mr. Kerst has gone through their published correspondence, note books, &c., and culled from them significant utterances, which he has grouped together under general headings, provided with their dates and an explanation of the special circumstances that called each out or to which each refers. They are thus, in a way, autobiographic character studies. The results are strikingly interesting. The characters of the two men—very different in many respects, yet at one in their common devotion to art and the outlook upon it—are disclosed with an intimacy that much biographical reading would not yield.

In the Beethoven book the bigness of the man, his essential nobility of view, his breadth of understanding in all things artistic, are evident on every page; there come to light, too, his sorrow and suffering and the isolation in which he went through the world; but with them always dignity. Many different matters are touched on; they are grouped under headings concerning art, concerning texts, on composing, on performing music, on his own works, Beethoven as a critic, on education, on his own disposition and character, the sufferer, worldly wisdom, God. Many of the quotations are aphoristic; but there are very few merely well-sounding commonplaces. A large number were called forth by special circumstances, concerning which due information is given in the notes.

The same is true of the Mozart book; but how different the character of the man it reveals! The headings here are such as chips from the workshop, concerning the opera, musical pedagogics, touching musical performances, opinions concerning others, Wolfgang the German, self-respect and honor, strivings and labors at home and abroad, love and friendship, worldly wisdom, morals, religion. The gayety, good spirits, and amiability of the man are no less evident than the lofty view he took of his art and of his own duty as an artist. The temptation to quote from such a mass of quotable matter is strong; but there would be no end. The translations have been admirably made by Mr. Krehbiel, and his additions to the notes (indicated by brackets and his initials) are valuable. Of the Mozart book he has made a complete new translation. Most of the translations of Mozart's letters that have found their way into print have shown a want of familiarity with Mozart's colloquialisms and careless epistolary style; and this style has been delightfully reproduced in Mr. Krehbiel's English versions. Music lovers will find much to interest and stimulate them, as well as to widen their sympathy with the two great men who are allowed to speak for themselves in these two volumes.

The history of organ music involves an important part of musical history in general, and for such a discussion Mr. Abdy Williams has shown himself to be one of the very ablest of the contributors to the Music Story Series, "The Story of the Organ," (Scribner.) His book is brief but scholarly, and is the work of a man that knows his subject and knows how to present it interestingly—even the mere abstruse historical portions of it. For Mr. Abdy Williams begins at the beginning with the Roman hydraulus, the music for which, though we have none preserved, if we could hear it, would probably sound insipid and meaningless. Organ music as we understand it began in the first half of the eighteenth century. What there is representing the preceding period is very scanty, and is of a kind without aesthetic value to us, showing the first gropings after artistic expression. Before the fourteenth century there is nothing at all.

The description of this earliest music is a task of purely historical interest. It involves an account of the forms of the "ricercar," the "canzona francese," the "toccata," the emergence from the bondage of the modes through the growth of the "musica ficta," that is, the use of accidentals that establishes the modern sense of tonality, and the interrelation of keys. The first celebrated organ player was Landino, who lived between 1325 and 1390. The organ in those days was a big machine without stops, with keys six inches broad, played with the fist, and was used only to accompany the plain-song in unison and to attract the congregation to church, as bells are now. But there was also the portable organ, the "portative," placed on the knees or hung from the neck of the player, who blew the bellows with his left hand and played the keys with his right. Upon this Landino played so that the whole assembly was excited, and birds ceased their song, drawing near in their astonishment to listen. Such is the contemporary testimony; and while organ playing has improved since then, it has scarcely increased its effect upon the birds.

St. Mark's in Venice was the most important seat of organ playing for several centuries, and the appointment as first or second organist there was a certification of pre-eminence, both in performance and in composition. But for a long time instrumental music lagged behind vocal, and the works of the instrumentalists, such as Merulo, the Gabriells, and Diruta were far inferior in artistic value to the vocal music of their contemporaries, for Palestrina had already raised his form of the art to supreme perfection. Mr. Abdy Williams has much to tell about the methods of writing organ music in those days. The several kinds of "tablature," the many-staved notation, are illustrated by reproductions of contemporary editions.

The first great advance was made by Frescobaldi, an Italian of the early seventeenth century; and thenceforward the record is one of advance to the climax and culmination of organ writing and organ playing in J. S. Bach. Mr. Abdy Williams treats of the Italian, German, French, Spanish, and Netherland organists, finally of the English. England was in an unfortunate case, since her great school of composers was crushed by the rise of Puritanism, and then, after the death of Purcell, by the overshadowing power of Handel. The later history of organ music is disposed of in comparatively brief space. The record is more of organ virtuosos than of important works for the instrument, although, as the historian observes, within the last thirty years there has been an enormous output, both of arrangements and of original works for the organ. The improvement of the mechanism has led to possibilities undreamed of in the past, especially in the way of orchestral imitations. Mr. Adby Williams is optimistic enough to believe that through greater familiarity with orchestral music on the part of the public, organists are more and more turning their attention to real organ music.

There are some quotations of early organ music in the appendix, a chronological synopsis of organ composers, a bibliography, and an index. The book is one of the best of a series that has varied greatly in merit.

BRITISH IMPERIALISM.

A Frenchman's View of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain's Fiscal Policy—Victor Berard's Entertaining Book.*

EDWARD A. BRADFORD.

THE last, and lost, campaign of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain seemed to many to be marked rather by shrewdness and ingenuity than by deep and enduring statesmanship. In this we do him less than justice His misunderstood cry of imperialism was far from being a parrotlike adoption of American protectionism, warmed over for the purposes of a campaign by a party in need of an issue. Pan-Britannism is at least a generation old, and may even be said to have been foreordained as a necessary issue in British politics whenever the present stage of national development should have been reached. To England imperialism now means something very different from a few years ago, and also something very different from imperialism with us. Our imperialism—if there is any American imperialism—more resembles the jingoism of Beaconsfield. Chamberlain's imperialism is rather a life preserver for a nation in need of one than a "big stick" for attack upon others with intent to annex any stray trifles of land or population not under suitable suzerainty. That stage of the world's conscience and development ended with Germany's capitalization of the missionaries slain at Kiao-Chow, and Secretary Hay placed a tombstone over the grave of many national ambitions when he asserted the world's guardianship of China's administrative entity. The vitality of that crystallization of all the world's national possessions into their present form as the quasi-permanent forms is being illustrated anew in the Algeciras Conference. Current events thus demonstrate the hopelessness of any policy of conquest and acquisition by any nation. The telegraph makes it impossible that boundaries shall be changed over night, and the world confronted with accomplished facts. British imperialism is therefore merely the expression of conviction by a British party that what England needs is to rest and consolidate her possessions and defend herself with her entire strength against economic assaults, which are peaceful in form and deadly in effect as any war. Imperialism in England has indeed protection for its basic principle, but British protectionism, like British imperialism, differs from our own by the whole sky. It is a topic worth developing, for England's case may yet become our own. And even if consideration be limited solely to England, it is worth while to estimate whether Chamberlain's defeat, or even Chamberlain's death, can end a struggle which means most to us of all nations in the world next to England.

⁂

The tight little kingdom contains, in fact, two Englands—black England and green England, the England of Birmingham and the England of Manchester. We have in the same sense two Americas, the pastoral communities of the prairies and the South, and the manufacturing communities of the East, especially Pennsylvania. But the distinction is less precise and means less with us. Either community is self-sufficient with us, and both communities are inside the same ring fence. Moreover, we are double England's numbers. Modesty, therefore, becomes us in comparing our accomplishment with England's, whose resources are so inferior in proportions, and under disabilities from which we are happily free. For example, black England, the England of Birmingham, possesses only raw materials, clay, coal, and ore, and cannot feed itself. Neither can green England feed itself, and Manchester must import even its raw material, the flocks and fibres grown in our own Southland. And the interests of black England and green England are antagonistic. Birmingham's fortunes have always been brightest when war cursed the rest of the world, while to Manchester war anywhere is purgatory. Either of these Englands numbers about eight millions, and adding to them Liverpool as representative of the maritime interests associated with its name, there remains no other great category of English mercantile life except London, which finances all.

England, therefore, cannot thrive, and can hardly live, unless Birmingham can export its wares, which sell best when the world is fighting, and unless Manchester can import cotton. And neither Birmingham nor Manchester, nor even Liverpool or London, can eat if oversea communications are interrupted. Modern England differs from Merry Old England in these respects. Merry Old England was a fat England, and fed itself easily in the days of the parson and the squire, the land and the Church, nobility and plutocracy. Then there were laws to protect the farmer, and privilege drove its roots deep into society. But as manufactures throve cities and suburbs made the farms dwindle, and created a demand for foodstuffs which the land no longer supplied. Moreover, the necessity of selling cheap in order to sell at all made more and cheaper food indispensable just as the supply shrank. The corn laws were repealed, and, this barrier being removed, meat and wheat from our prairies poured in in limitless quantities, and the fate of England's landed estates was sealed.

⁂

Nevertheless, so stout and sound and rich was our Motherland that all might yet have moved along pretty well if she had been able to keep her markets. The quality of her wares remains unsurpassed because unsurpassable, but the nations one after the other forbade her to sell to them. There was no trouble for either England or her customers while European trade was free, from 1860 to 1876. Austria set the signal of commercial exclusion in 1877. Germany and Russia followed, then France, and shortly there was not throughout the Continent a nation, great or small, which did not erect a barrier of Custom House eccentricities, such as are too familiar with us. Commercially it became and now is England against the world. This was not competition, it was prohibition, and as "unfair" as any shop ever denounced by any union. In the result the paradise of the rich became the purgatory of the poor. Thousands of unemployed repeatedly parade the streets, and imperialism made and lost its first campaign. England's shrinking industries are not the result of free trade, but of unfair trade. England's demand for markets is not a demand for conquest and a lust for power, but the pitiful cry of the idle and starving. Our protection's object is to develop "infant" industries. England's protection is for the maintenance of full-grown industries, which are dwarfed by ours, her children's. Chamberlain's imperialism is parochial beside the internationalism of Cobden and Bentham. There is nothing of the man on horseback, nothing of the vulgar patriotism of the music halls, nothing of protectionism as we understand it, in the attempt to secure a market for exports. England seeks only to sell as freely as she permits others to sell. She is the world's best buyer overseas, and yet her own children will not allow her to sell to them except under a penalty which they call "preference." This sort of imperialist is no St. Jingo, sword in hand, and a paean of that very modern Psalmist, Kipling, upon his lips. Manchester's motto of "peace and profit" is the compulsory motto of a nation which will go far toward revolution if ever again wheat brings in Liverpool the price it has brought again and again, or if Manchester's spindles ever again cease, as often before, to keep hunger away from its millions.

And there is little here set down which is not true of ourselves, or which soon will become true. We are not yet dependent upon Canada for our food, but we must consider that contingency. We are not yet submerged in an overplus of products, but we are exporting at a time of unprecedented domestic consumption, and some time the closure of the world's markets will be oppressive to us. When the United States becomes, like England, an industrial community, with all the world for suburbs—say after the Panama Canal is opened to commerce—we are likely to develop a sympathy for the economics of Panbritannism, even though the politics of it seem impracticable.

Mr. Berard writes with the vivacity and clarity of his race. His portraiture of Chamberlain is vivid and truthful, and his account of Birmingham's finance and trade holds the mirror of nature up to Wall Street and Pittsburg. No one can find those chapters dull, whatever be said of the mass of figures which Mr. Berard marshals skillfully and interprets most effectively. It is a pity that so much has happened since the book was written—Mr. Chamberlain's defeat, for example. The figures are now so far out of date that an appendix bringing them down to within a year—if it be impossible to recast the text—is necessary. The translation is excellent.

THE IRISH IN AMERICA.

TO have had an Irishman among the companions of Columbus is not honor enough for Mr. Crimmins. In his "Irish-American Historical Miscellany," published recently by himself, he accepts the story of St. Brendan's voyage to this country in A. D. 550. Let that be as it may, the Irish element in the white population of this country has been large from the very beginning. There were Irishmen on the Mayflower, others fought against King Philip; there were Irish by the hundred in our Revolution and in the civil war; all through New York's history one finds Irish names, not singly, but in battalions—one need but recall our street names to be impressed with the fact that not only since the Irish famine, but for years before that, the Irish were a factor in New York.

Mr. Crimmins's book is the result of many years of labor; and it is of interest, not merely to the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, to whom it is dedicated, but to persons of other than Irish descent and race. Upward of half its space is occupied by accounts of the various celebrations of St. Patrick's Day by the society—from the time it helped to welcome Andrew Jackson in 1819 to the time it greeted President Roosevelt in 1905. Interesting features of the book are biographical sketches of some five hundred Irishmen who have done something for their adopted land, from the time America took shape almost to the present day. Mr. Crimmins is to be congratulated on his book.

A BELATED WAR-BOOK.

MR. SAMUEL LIVINGSTON FRENCH, or probably, under the circumstances Capt. French at least, has prepared what he calls "An Inside View of the History of the Army of the Potomac." (Publishing Society of New York.) The chief value of such a book depends very largely upon the author; if he is an acknowledged military critic, his attack on the commanding officers in a campaign will have weight; if he is not, it will have little or none. To his comrades of the Army of the Potomac, Mr. French's book may be interesting and valuable; to outsiders, it appears merely the usual grumbling of an enlisted man, who despite his growling does his duty.

The compilation of the volume involved much work; Mr. French says he used the Union and Confederate reports, and the records and correspondence of both armies, thus forming a concise and accurate history of the army's movements. "The story is an exhibit of intermingled loyalty, patriotism, and undaunted courage, with imbecility, cowardice, and hate, which in their effects fell little short of treason." So the author describes it; it appears, from the text of the volume that only the leaders were imbecile, cowardly, and hateful—the lower ranks, especially the enlisted men, were loyal, patriotic, and brave. The book is clearly printed, but only one size of type is used for original matter, extracts, and notes. It needs constant care therefore to determine whether Mr. French is speaking or quoting—especially as quotation marks are conspicuous for their scarcity.

A MODERN ROMAN DE LA ROSE.

'TIS a bit old fashioned to place the happiness of a heroine in the keeping of a rose; but, to be sure, the old fashions are now fashionable, and besides, in the story of "Kenelm's Desire" (Little, Brown & Co.) Hughes Cornell does not forget certain desires of the reader for modern politics, for nature descriptions, and for novelty of subject.

They are so far unhackneyed "copy"—the Indians of British Columbia—but if any one expects a story of the actual redman, he is doomed to disappointment this time, for Kenelm has been adopted by a white family and is immensely civilized.

In fact, it may as well be confessed, Kenelm is the old-fashioned ideal hero, and yet, mirabile dictu, he is interesting—muscularly, intellectually, and emotionally.

His chief savage trait is his working out of the maxim, "It's dogged that does it." He works it out to the extent of becoming an M. P. and of winning his heart's desire, otherwise known as Frau Eda's only daughter, Desire Llewellyn.

Just how much doggedness was needed would take long to tell; but we suspect that a certain plaintive Indian refrain, touching the musical susceptibilities of the heroine, (an up-to-date young woman, making music her profession,) had nearly as much as the rose to do with the beginning of the end.

A NEW BOOK OF GOOD FISH STORIES.

Charles Frederick Holder's "Log of a Sea Angler" Is Full of Excellent Reading.*

FISHERMEN, amateurs and professionals, have always been famous, or infamous, for the stories they tell. But in "The Log of a Sea Angler" we find the greatest collection of fish stories that ever came to delight us, and in Charles Frederick Holder, the author, the king of fish-story tellers.

As a rule, after hearing or reading a fish story, one is inclined to laugh and say there are better fish out of the sea than ever were in it, but Mr. Holder leaves the impression that there are better yarns in the sea than ever came out of it. The reader thinks—and likes to think—that the author wrote this book with a pencil and a pad on his knees, while the little fishing boat bobbed up and down on the waves and the salt spume splashed on the pages.

No matter whether the reader of Mr. Holder's book is initiate in the game of angling, there is bound to be something in these pages that will pump the red blood to the head and fill the nostrils with a tang that will make them twitch and the heart yearn to be up and away. He tells of fishing for little and big game in "many seas," from Cape Cod to the "jumping-off" keys of Florida, from the Rio Grande waters to Monterey. Indeed, considering that this is a time of year when our thoughts idly turn not only to the primeval fancy, but to the second natural impulse—sport—it seems hardly fair of Mr. Holder to have placed this wonderful book in the hands of poor fellows like ourselves who cannot throw business to the same winds that would blow our good sailboat to the fishing grounds.

Nevertheless "pain comes sweetened" when it is the next best thing to realization. And it should not be difficult for us to hunt the shark, the tuna, the jack, the swordfish, the moray eel, the big green turtle, and all the rest of them with our feet on the desk when his Highness is at luncheon.

There are some things about this book, aside from the ever-delightful fishing narrative, that come upon the reader as astonishing, pleasing shocks. Mr. Holder, invariably picturesque, rises quite above himself in the description of things which the average man would not think worthy of more than a remark. Now Mr. Holder speaks of that submarine world which has been often imagined as something green with tentacles in it, but never truly described:

> There was nothing more delightful on this fishing ground than to go with the dinghy at sunrise, stand in the bows, grains in hand, one man sculling slowly, the other amidships, and watch the marvelous panorama of the lagoon, gazing down into the splendid vistas. No forest of the land has more beauties than this forest of the sea. * * * One might compare it to a Japanese garden where everything is dwarfed and the trees stunted, as the leaf coral, with branches four feet across, resembled the cedars of Japan, while the bottom was covered with gorgonias of countless hues. * * *
>
> In contemplating the animals of the sea one ultimately compares the fishes to the birds, and other marine animals with similar forms of the land, and it does not take long to become convinced that the ocean is even more densely populated than the dry land. The inhabitants here were living on the slopes of a mountain; some were near the surface of the coral zone; some intermediate, others in deep water, while others again lived in the open water, soaring continually, like the condor and eagles, always in search of prey.

One of the intensely interesting passages in "The Log of the Sea Angler" is where Mr. Holder describes that remarkable little fish, the Physalia, or Portuguese man-o'-war. He writes:

> No more beautiful object than the Physalia can be imagined—a floating bubble four inches long, with a perfect sail that can be elevated or depressed, while depending from its lower surface is a mass of vivid blue or purple zoöids, or tentacles, which can be held closely to the body or extended many feet. They constitute at once the drags, the keel of the fairy ship, and lures as well. Lowered into a school of sardines, they resemble purple worms twisting about; a small fish bites at one, and, as though struck by lightning, turns over dead. The moment of contact tens of thousands of lasso cells, animate bombs, capsules loaded with "screws," exploded and struck the fish, piercing it, pouring into the myriad of wounds a purple poison that was as effective as so many electric bolts.

One might go on to the limits of space (professionally speaking) and yet find something to fire the enthusiasm again. The writer is no angler. One man in a thousand is a fishing enthusiast. But the lay brother enjoyed the reading immensely; so, in all probability, will the nine hundred and ninety-nine.

*THE LOG OF A SEA ANGLER. Sport and Adventure in Many Seas with Spear and Rod. By Charles Frederick Holder. 12mo. Pp. 385. Boston: Houghton, Mifflin & Co.

A STORY IN LETTERS.

A WOMAN'S HEART. Manuscript Found in the Papers of Katherine Peshconet and Edited by Her Executor, Olive Ransom. 12mo. Pp. 282. New York: Doubleday, Page & Co. $1.50.

OLIVE RANSOM gives us a book in "A Woman's Heart" which has for its subject the love and suffering of a woman who loved a priest.

It is an old subject, and it has been much better done by Charles Reade in "The Cloister and the Hearth." But it is the sole and ever-present argument in this book, because the work is in the form of a woman's letters to her priest love, and addressed to herself. For that reason the Roman Catholic priesthood rule of celibacy is thrashed unmercifully, with little chance, owing to the book's construction, of the reader's gaining an idea of the priest's standpoint in the matter. This one-sided argument is rendered almost irritating by the acknowledged fact that the priest is madly in love with Katherine Peshconet.

Olive Ransom begins each letter, or entry, in her diary with a touch of simple heartburning; then she drifts into lengthy arguments, citing ecclesiastical history to an extent that is wearisome. Eventually her arguments break through the priest's armor. He marries her secretly. Then he repents, confesses to his father superior, and is sentenced to a severe penance. Katherine dies, and her child after her.

The book leaves a bad taste in one's mouth. It may be that the reviewer's taste was never good. But it seems that Katherine was more unfortunate in the man she loved than in his profession. He hesitated for two years, then married her—secretly!—like a weakling who is ready to protest if the unfavorable toss hit the table edge.

As for Katherine, if hers was a woman's heart, then, indeed, is a woman a daughter of Eve. She argued through years, got what she wanted, and died for it. She paid the cost of her own act.

The arguments against the rule of celibacy may be true, but in the book they are incomplete when the other side is heard only when it opposes her wish, and then only as she construed it. Both priest and woman needed a little more of that sense of condition and sacrifice which is behind this little poem by one who suffered similarly, except that, in this case, the sexes were reversed:

I may not tell you of the love I cherish;
  You may not tell me all your lips would say.
We meet in crowds, our riven hearts safeguarding
  Their burning love beneath a mask of clay.

For you are his, and not a look shall sully
  The lily fragrance of your pure white soul.
If love were all! But no, Love could not pay you
  Full tale and sterling measure what it stole.

The New Forum.

The Forum, now become a quarterly, makes its second appearance this year with an interesting number. Its six departments, of American and foreign politics, applied science, finance, music, and education, are directed by men whose competence is well known, and besides these, there are three special articles. Of the latter that by Mrs. Isaac L. Rice, "An Effort to Suppress Noise," is apparently the least important; yet potentially it is of quite as much consequence to our civilisation as Dr. Trent's criticism of Birkbeck Hill's edition of Johnson's "Lives of the Poets," or Count Okuma's account of Japan's policy in Korea.

The Green Bag for April.

The Green Bag, the well known magazine for lawyers, has this month a "symposium" on the important topic of "Abuses of Personal Injury Litigation, and Workmen's Compensation Acts." The discussion of the first part of the subject is shared by lawyers from all the large cities of the country; and foreign lawyers discuss the second part. An important question is raised by an article on the imprisonment of corporations, the author of which suggests that guilty corporations, hitherto exempt from punishment, be suspended and their franchises forfeited for the periods for which men guilty of the same crimes would be imprisoned.

MRS. HALE'S STORY.

"A Motor Car Divorce" Is Interesting, Both as a Romance and as a Travel Book.

AT last the automobile has been used—in the deliberate sense—as the means to a divorce. That is what Louise Closser Hale calls it—The Means. But, after all, it wasn't any means, for in "A Motor Car Divorce" (Dodd, Mead & Co.) Louise Closser Hale as a writer and Walter Hale as an artist show how utterly impossible it would be for two sensible and very tractable people to fall out while enjoying the "auto elation" in picturesque Europe.

Louise Closser Hale is a young actress, and, though one may see her, as the saying is, "for a shilling," by paying a few shillings more one may gain an insight into her character as an author. Her work is filled with a kind of wit that is delightful because it is real humor, and more because it is really womanly.

In "A Motor Car Divorce" Mrs. John Ward is a member of the Minerva Club—one of those Wednesday afternoon protest gatherings. The members declare that they ought to be free from the tyrant man after ten years of marital slavery. The idea is based on the George Meredith idea, whatever that is; Mrs. Ward explains—that—that after ten years—anyhow, the Minerva Club is one of "liberty of thought" and a "wider horizon."

Mrs. John Ward is the only member who has the courage of her convictions. But has she? You see, she was expounding liberty of thought and George Meredith when somebody snickered and said:

"Why don't you demonstrate?"

Hence "A Motor Car Divorce." It was in this clever way the author found a peg upon which to hang the description of a tour of Europe. That Mrs. John Ward is only "convinced" that she has "the courage of her convictions" makes the narrative thread stronger to bear the lengthy pages of travel diary. As the story goes on, the reader, while delighting in Mrs. Hale's never-failing cheer, her ready touch of humor and colorful style, must stop to chuckle over the big love for her husband that Mrs. Ward has to overcome before she can get that divorce. In fact, the divorce difficulties become more difficult at every turn. As Mrs. Ward keeps a diary, however, the reader is not enlightened, even by a hint, as to how it will end.

But this situation can have only one culmination. The woman weeps and lets the Minerva Club and all its members "go hang." The idea is prettily worked to a pretty ending, and, as was said before, it serves a noble purpose, guiding the reader over three hundred and nineteen pages of laughing description, full of the glamour of Summer travel in France, Italy, or any other old place that comes in the way.

Walter Hale's drawings in pen, pencil, and crayon, illustrating the text, (or illustrated by the text?) contribute largely to the pleasing of the senses in this book. They are delicately in keeping and give one the notion that these are scenes where one might fall in love, but get a divorce? Never! not even with The Means.

The Jewish Encyclopedia.

With the twelfth volume the Jewish Encyclopedia is completed. We have before this spoken of this great work—the first of its kind in the world, the result of the labor of the chief Jewish scholars of the day. Too much cannot be said in its praise. It is a wonderful race that the encyclopedia deals with—how wonderful the twelve volumes show; but the work is conservative, the editors and writers have not been carried away by the contemplation of their past and their present. The work is accurate, and, despite the twelve volumes, concise. It is a monument to Jewish students of today and to Jewish educational methods of the past, and to the generosity and boldness of the firm that issued it, the Funk & Wagnalls Company.

Miss Amanda Jones's New Volume.

Miss Amanda T. Jones, who gained an established reputation as a poet more than a generation ago, and whose "Rubaiyat of Solomon" attracted much critical attention last year, has prepared a complete edition of her poems, which will soon be published. This will contain the author's own selection of her pieces which have appeared in her four volumes already published. Miss Jones is a resident of Junction City, Kan., and not content with the labor of selecting and editing her poems for the new volume, is constantly writing new verses.

AT COLLEGE.

WRITTEN quite from the undergraduate point of view, and in quite the undergraduate spirit, "The Count at Harvard" (L. C. Page & Co.) has many of the faults and some of the virtues commonly observed in the "college young gentleman." It is, in fact, the epic of the college young gentleman as he conceives himself to be. Most of us can remember from our own college days that one among all our fellows who seemed to us utterly ideal and admirable. He was not, we recall, a grind, not editor of the "Lit," not even Captain of the eleven—and ours were the days of football. His accomplishments were social—he smoked with an inimitable finish, he drank with an air, he played passably upon the piano, he wore his clothes dashingly, was fertile in pranks, inventive of jests, infinitely wise and blasé about women and philosophy. Mr. Rupert Sargent Holland has selected for his hero just such a precocious exquisite, and all you need do to enjoy the "Count" is to turn back the clock ten, twenty, thirty years and reassume the ideals of your callow youth.

Naturally these ideals are quite false and preposterous at this distance, but that doesn't matter. So you will sit beside the fire in a college room of a Winter afternoon and listen to the Count's wit; you'll spend the evening with that complacent youngster at the theatres in town and sup with him afterward; you will attend him while he entertains with serious scholastic functions a man from Yale; you will assist at a punch and the high jinks and riot following; you'll be one of the company at an afternoon tea—ladies present.

Then you'll read a story of how the Count encouraged the aspirations of a fellow-student to be a rowing man, how he played tennis, and how he drilled the chorus for the Hasty Pudding show, how certain inspired college young gentlemen came home upon the top of a cab and had adventures, how the hero took a girl to the baseball game, and so on. After that the humors of class day, when the glorious young man is annoyed with visiting relatives and can't get away to talk to the only possible girl.

College work, of course, is treated with great levity. Our hero is the kind who makes parade of not being able to recall what courses he is taking—though doubtless he grinds secretly in the small hours, with wet towels about his head. Chiefly, the author delights in talk—airy undergraduate persiflage. Some of the talk is rather clever of its kind, too—but it's is rather clever of its kind, too—but it's apt to get tiresome—which is worse than untruthfulness.

JACQUES CARTIER.

A VERY valuable contribution to the history of North America is James Phinney Baxter's "Memoir of Jacques Cartier, Sieur de Limoilou," (Dodd, Mead & Co.) Cartier was the discoverer of Canada and of the St. Lawrence; yet little is known about him or his voyages. The accounts of the latter exists, in whole or in part, and these Mr. Baxter has translated into English. To them he has added the translations of the accounts of the voyages of Roberval and of the latter's pilot, maps, a fac simile of the manuscript of Cartier's story of his first voyage, and other pertinent details—notes, a bibliography, and an index.

Cartier made three voyages to Canada, and is said to have made a fourth and a fifth voyage, though as to the fourth Mr. Baxter says proof is wanting, and as to the fifth, that there is nothing to support the suggestion. On the first voyage, in 1534, Canada was discovered; on the second, in 1535-6, the Saguenay and the St. Lawrence were discovered and entered and Hochelaga visited—Montreal; on the third, Cartier revisited Hochelaga and explored the country between the city and the sea, (1540.) The text of the accounts of these three voyages is incomplete, and Mr. Baxter had difficulty in getting good versions to translate into English; in fact, a large part of the text of the third voyage is missing.

The notes added to Cartier's text are of value. It was not Mr. Baxter's intention to add notes, but, as he says, Cartier "everywhere speaks of the fauna and flora of the country, and notes differences in the tribes he had encountered, both in appearance and plant life. A study therefore of the animal and plant life, as well as of the ethnological and lingual peculiarities of the savage people who are known to have inhabited Canada in Cartier's time, became necessary." The author has with the aid of other students worked out the cartography of Cartier's voyages, until he believes he has it as correctly as may be. His book is distinctly valuable and an important addition to any library aiming to keep up with the development of the knowledge of American history.

JAPAN AS A WORLD POWER.

GEORGE R. BISHOP.

RESEARCH and speculation in the field of political history and international relations may be said still to attain their highest development in the West; yet the Far East, almost everywhere conscious of the greater antiquity of its civilization, generally tolerant and urbane, and looking with apparent unconcern on our newer achievements, is beginning to manifest a desire to explore regions of thought which, until recently, she had never attempted to penetrate. The work before us, written by a young Japanese, a Ph. D. of an American university, exhibits the most ambitious effort yet put forth by an Oriental to master the facts and philosophy of Western politics in their latest aspects. From this viewpoint he develops the story of his country's rise to the position—reached he thinks in 1899—of a world power; not disguising his belief that her earlier policy of exclusiveness and non-intercourse operated to her disadvantage in delaying her elevation in the national scale. He is confessedly imbued with a very thorough appreciation of the superiority of Western learning and methods. The Eastern and Western powers are now in accord in that they concur in framing their international compacts on lines substantially identical. With the entry of the non-Christian into the national family circle, an old adage of diplomacy, in which one detects a possible sarcasm, seems obsolete: That an Ambassador should be a good Christian, and, what is more important, should seem to be one!

Our author is a loyal son of the Island Empire. He establishes his patriotism, and gives the true Oriental touch to his work, by "reverently" dedicating it to his parents, and to the memory of his ancestors.

Japan's Relations to Other Powers.

At the outset he indicates his ideas of sovereignty. He considers the position of Japan in relation to other world powers. Interwoven with his history we find frequent allusions to her position as affected by the recognized principles of international law. He says that in constitutional law sovereignty means unlimited power over the subjects or citizens of a State; not noting that its locus may be in direct representatives of the citizens themselves. In international law, he thinks it means unlimited power over the subject members of each State in the management of its own foreign intercourse, as opposed to the will of other States. Necessarily, the State holding such relations must be autonomous, such a one as other world powers will consent to enter into treaty relations with; and it is a commonplace of jurisprudence, since Austin and those who have commented on him have written, that in international law there is no common superior sovereignty to which appeal can be made to enforce national conformity to even those principles that are conceded to be most fundamental and obligatory. Lord Coleridge observed, in the case of the "Franconia," that the fact that international law is an inexact expression, is to be kept in mind; Holland, the Chichele Professor of International Law and Diplomacy at Oxford, declares that it is the vanishing point of jurisprudence, since it lacks any arbiter of disputed questions save public opinion; and Maine says that lawyers on the whole regard sovereignty as the sovereignty exercised by individuals. The author's statement that the object of sovereignty is identical in the national and the international society, seems to attempt to identify an imaginary thing—sovereignty in international law, if he means power to coerce a State—with something that is real. In a subsequent edition he might very well present an analysis of what the word sovereignty in its different senses connotes—a matter of considerable difficulty.

The author presents a very complete narrative of Japanese general history; beginning with the legendary; professing to define the point at which the real history begins. Not all of it is relevant to the international relations of his native islands, but the history is undoubtedly valuable. The pages are so crowded with facts that the reader gets the impression of an elaborate cyclopaedia article—such, for example, as the late Dr. Arnold's "Later Roman Commonwealth," contributed to the old Encyclopaedia Metropolitana; though this remark is not intended to imply that the historical style of Arnold, which enabled the late Edward A. Freeman to contrast that of Mommsen with it to the disadvantage of the Berlin professor's, is matched by that of this young Oriental, although his style is clear and compact, and well fitted to subserve the purpose which he evidently had in view in writing his book. He sets forth the relations of Japan to her Eastern neighbors, China and Korea, and the earliest intercourse that Western nations had with them. He recognizes that of these the Portuguese were the pioneers—acting under the authority of the Bulls of Partition promulgated by the Pope five years before Vasco de Gama discovered the route to India round the Cape of Good Hope. Those Papal promulgations, 1493, undertook to divide the world that might be newly discovered between the two great Catholic powers, Portugal and Spain, and the Treaty of Tordesillas, 1494, between those powers, more definitely defined the demarkation at 370 leagues west of the Cape Verde Islands.

Japan and the Early Explorers.

The condensed form into which the author's narrative is compressed precluded the setting forth of the story with picturesqueness of detail or character sketches. In his "History of British India," a work which our author might fitly include in his bibliography, Sir William W. Hunter rises to eloquence in relating the story of Eastern exploration and discovery. Diaz rounded Cape of Good Hope somewhat earlier than de Gama did, but so far out to sea and in such a storm that he did not sight it, but seeing it on his return he called it Cabo Tormentoso, the Cape of Storms, in commemoration of his tempestuous passage. King John II. renamed it the Cape of Good Hope, feeling that the sea passage to India was now discovered. Hunter also pays his tribute to Prince Henry the Navigator, who so largely inspired the spirit of exploration among his countrymen. Having won his spurs through gallantry at the siege of Ceuta, in Northwest Africa, he thenceforth devoted his life to the study of navigation and to sending expeditions into uncharted seas. At the age of 24 he retired to the storm-swept promontory of Sagres, at the southern extremity of Portugal, whither he invited the greatest sailors of Christendom, and where he erected the first observatory ever possessed by Portugal, and "on that barren spur of rock and shifting sands and stunted juniper, with the roar of the ocean forever in his ears and the wide Atlantic before him inviting discovery, he spent his remaining forty-two years, a man of one high aim, without wife or child." As to de Gama, credited with having first voyaged to India round the Cape, the dates are: Sailing from the Tagus, Saturday, July 8, 1497, reaching Calicut, India, May 20, 1498, and returning to Lisbon in August or September, 1499. On the voyage he had lost his brother, half his ships, and more than half his crew. His voyage supplied a theme for the "Lusiad" of Camoens.

Mr. Hishida clearly describes what Portugal did, under the license of the Papal document referred to, which gave the right "to attack and subjugate all the countries of the infidels, to reduce all their inhabitants to slavery, and to seize all their property." It does not appear that she attempted to do all this; but, thus commissioned, she claimed certain exclusive rights, and maintained them until the English and the Dutch, the two great Protestant powers, repudiating the validity of the exclusive charter, broke into the vast virgin area, and in time pretty thoroughly ousted the Catholic power from island and continent.

He repeats the story that 1543 saw the first meeting of Europeans and the Japanese; that Pinto presented firearms to them and obtained leave to trade at Hirato; that the feudal barons of Kiushu also opened their ports, gave access to the interior, and the privilege of settling on land; that in 1556 Nagasaki was opened also to foreign trade; that on his second visit Pinto brought St. Francis Xavier, and other missionaries later, but that in 1587 the Government determined to suppress the propaganda and ordered the Jesuit missionaries to leave, as it was believed diversity of worship would be prejudicial to the State. When the Spaniards came they came from round Cape Horn, made the conquest of the Philippines, and precipitated a controversy with the Portuguese. They came to Japan, where "their missionaries were more numerous than their traders," where the Jesuit and Dominican rivalry brought both into disfavor, to the advantage of the Dutch and the English, who now appeared. The massacre of the English by the Dutch at Amboyna, one of the Spice Islands, is just touched on by the author, but furnishes material for an interesting chapter in Hunter, according to whom the Dutch wrenched the fairest of the Moluccas from the Portuguese, and in 1641 captured Malacca, and thus "turned the straits into a Dutch waterway."

Opening of Japan to the West.

For Americans the pages in which the author describes the opening of Japan to the Western nations through the initiative of the United States possess an especial interest. Japan did not yield to the demands of England, France, Russia, and the United States till Commodore Perry appeared in Yedo Bay and insisted on entering into negotiations. President J. Q. Adams had broadly declared the right and even duty of Christian nations to open the ports of Japan, and of the Japanese to assent, as no nation had the right to withhold its contribution to the world's welfare. The author just touches on the expedition of Capt. Bidwell in 1846. Of this expedition Rear Admiral S. B. Luce, who was a midshipman on the Columbus, one of Bidwell's vessels, tells the story interestingly in proceedings of the Naval Institute for September, 1905. He declared that he retained a vivid impression of the dignified bearing, affability, and polished manners of the Japanese from his thus meeting them. Charles Nordhoff, who was a powder boy on board, in Lieut. Percival Drayton's division, equally commended them in his "Man-of-War Life." Bidwell was unfortunate in having an incompetent interpreter. Perry was more fortunate. Nakahama Manjiro, who acted for him, had been cast away with companions in a storm, picked up by a whaler, taken to Honolulu, and later to the United States, where he received an education and learned English. He finally made his way back to Japan. The Rear Admiral quotes Prof. Sewall, who was on the Saratoga of Perry's squadron, as saying of him that he was the divinely appointed channel through which American ideas naturally flowed into Japan.

Commodore Perry and Townsend Harris.

When Perry sailed, under credentials dated July 10, 1851, he bore a letter from the President to the Emperor of Japan proposing that the two nations should live in friendship and commercial intercourse with each other. It suggested a permanent arrangement for the treatment of shipwrecks, for permitting American vessels to secure supplies, for the establishment of a coal depot, and the privilege of trading. Perry, who on July 8, 1853, appeared at the entrance of Yedo Bay, assured them his mission was friendly. The presenting of his letter was obstructed and delayed, but he persisted, and said unless it was received he should consider his country insulted. He was permitted to deliver it. Saying he would return the next Spring for an answer, he sailed away. Ultimately, after a protracted negotiation, he concluded with Japan the first treaty she ever entered into with an Occidental State.

The author lays much stress on the negotiation by the Hon. Townsend Harris in 1858 of more definite treaty arrangements. His proposal that he have a permanent residence at Shimoda was denied. He insisted, for ten months before succeeding, on permission to deliver in person the letter of the President. On Dec. 7, 1857, he was granted an audience for the purpose—the first audience granted to a foreign representative at the Shogun's Court since the exclusion edict of 1638.

The Shogun was pleased with the letter and with Harris's discourse. Harris assured him that it was not the desire of the President to acquire exclusive privileges, but to establish by peaceful negotiation commercial intercourse between Japan and the United States and other countries; further, that religious propagandism was not intended, and that if Japan made a treaty with the United States all other foreign countries would make the same sort of treaty, and Japan would thereafter be safe. He also explained to the Minister the method of raising revenue by customs duties; also how international law regulated the intercourse of nations with each other, and what it was. The author naïvely explains that by kind advice and tender treatment, "seasoned with polite menaces," Harris more and more gained confidence, and induced the Shogun to enter into negotiations that resulted in a treaty of amity and commerce, concluded on Feb. 9, 1858. Other powers soon concluded similar ones, Harris lending his assistance to Lord Elgin, who represented Great Britain.

The Power of the Emperor.

The author assures us that whatever the theory of sovereignty may be, the Emperor alone has the supreme power in Japan, though he exercises his governmental powers, legislative, administrative, and judicial, under "self-limitations." If, as we are assured, the civil liberty of the people is constitutionally guaranteed against governmental encroachment; if all laws and all expenditures of funds require the consent of the Diet; if the imposition of a new tax or the modification of an existing one must be determined by law, and the courts are independent of the Executive—it would seem that in the estimation of these Greeks of the Far East, these alert-minded investigators who, inspired with insatiable curiosity, come to America and to England and imbibe, with knowledge of Western business methods, Anglo-Saxon ideas of government and constitutional limitations—the self-limitations spoken of might harden into the form and substance of inalienable rights, so that any attempt of the Emperor to resume them might be resisted.

The author has moral courage; he looks facts in the face; eschews dissimulations and disguises. He recognizes that after the end of her war with China in 1894 Japan was forced by Russia, France, and Germany to relinquish some of the fruits of victory which, by the treaty of Shimonoseki, China was ready to grant her—that is, the occupation of the Liao-Tung Peninsula. He explains that the squadrons of those three powers were concentrated in the adjacent waters; that with these the Japanese fleet, though lately victorious over that of China, was in no position to contend. He is not misled by the Mikado's euphemistic phraseology ordering the withdrawal of his troops from Manchuria "on the ground that such permanent possession would be detrimental to the lasting peace of the Orient," nor by the pretense that he found nothing to impair the honor and dignity of his empire in yielding to the dictates of magnanimity and the advice of the friendly powers.

The Korean Question.

No part of the book is more interesting or more skillfully wrought out than Chapter VIII. It considers the relation of Korea to the other Eastern powers; and the author in another chapter asserts that before the Christian era Japan interfered in the affairs of that peninsula. Whether she was independent, or under the suzerainty of Russia or of Japan, was a moot question, between the powers asserting suzerainty, antecedent to the precipitating of hostilities, and that question doubtless was potent in the general diplomatic contest. The triple intervention of 1895 rendered the policy of aloofness which Japan had cultivated untenable. She was compelled to co-operate with those powers that had interests similar to her own, hence the obvious importance to her of an alliance with England, which had not acted with Russia, France, and Germany in 1895. The great concessions made by China in response to the demands of the European powers, in consequence of the events of that and the previous year, served to fix attention on the uncertainty of the future and the necessity for unremitting watchfulness. The gradual encroachments of Russia, her relentless advance toward the aggrandizement of Manchuria, and ultimately of Korea; her unamenability to reasonable limitations; her insistence, in the final negotiations preceding the late hostilities, on conditions which Japan could not yield except with the feeling that her own autonomy and self-existence would be imperiled; the proposals and counter-proposals, the course of Russia in them all justifying this one inexorable conclusion—all these are set forth by Mr. Hishida with clearness and good judgment in stating facts and giving extracts from documents or summaries of demands and offers of concession.

These pages alone would have justified the Columbia University Press in including the book in its series. Space is lacking in which to summarize this narrative. The reader should go to the work itself. It contains a mass of general Japanese history, industriously gathered and clearly arranged, much of it not generally known, but which every American who takes an interest in our international relations should be familiar with. Appropriately, an appendix contains the Treaty of Portsmouth, a great document, thus made easy of reference. Remembrance of the short time occupied in the making of it should encourage us to think that the art of diplomacy has improved. Let me remind the author and the readers of this notice that the Treaties of Westphalia, signed on Oct. 24, 1648, one at Münster, the other at Osnabrück, and closing the Thirty Years' War, were completed and signed after a very protracted negotiation, preceded by a very leisurely assembling of the Congress; that six years were spent over frivolous preliminary controversies, the preliminaries finally arranged on April 28, 1643; the plenipotentiaries of the Emperor arrived at Münster in July 1643; the first French envoy eight months later, and it was not till June 11, 1645, that the negotiations really began, by the delivery of the propositions of Sweden and France. The negotiations proceeded till Oct. 24, 1648, on which day cannon from the ramparts announced the conclusion of peace. The difference between the earlier and the later method should be noted.

SOLOMON'S MINES.

A New Book on the Ruins in Rhodesia—An Exploded Myth.*

ANTIQUARIAN mares' nests have been all too many, but perhaps none has assumed such portentous dimensions as that found among the Rhodesian ruins. These structures, described on hearsay by more than one Portuguese chronicler of the later Middle Age, were not seen by European eyes till about forty years ago, when Manch visited the Makalanga, but no great account was taken of them before the British annexation of the territory north of the Limpopo. Then, all at once, we began to hear of gold workings which no Kaffir could make, of mighty walls which no Kaffir could build, and of sources of Solomon's wealth discovered in South Africa. Mr. Rider Haggard's well-known romance had much to do with the wide attention that the ruins excited in this country, and there is no doubt that those responsible for the development of Rhodesia were not unwilling that the glamour of a Biblical past should be shed over the new territory. Has it not been told by a witty fabulist how the financial fortunes of a certain company were enhanced when a learned German, "with admirable economy of proof," identified its malarious concession with the Sheol of the Old Testament? Be that as it may, Mr. Cecil Rhodes was nevertheless prepared to put the question to the test of scientific examination, and, largely at his instance, the late Mr. Theodore Bent was sent out to Rhodesia in 1891. It was an unfortunate choice.

Mr. Bent was an intrepid explorer of great resource, who was always accompanied by a wife not inferior to him in those qualities, but he had had no archaeological training in youth, and, though he had traveled among classical monuments, had not made their study his business, and had largely left the publication of them to others; nor had he ever done a piece of scientific excavation. He went, he saw, he dug; and predisposed to accept the "Solomon" theory, and encouraged to lean toward the side of the marvelous, he came back to report the ruins to be of fabulous antiquity and monumental grandeur; he brought home certain carved and other objects as pieces de conviction; he found evidence, not only of stupendous gold working, but of a nature worship, with phallic and stellar ritual; and he concluded that the builders of the great Zimbabwe were Sabaean Arabians, who might well have been subjects of the Sheban Queen. His book "The Ruined Cities of Mashonaland" settled the question for most people at home, and for all South Africans, and if a certain well-known story be true, the man who dared thereafter to doubt that Solomon got his gold from Zimbabwe was told he "had no imperial instinct."

It was in vain that a few archaeologists and ethnologists protested. They saw no positive evidence of either high civilization or high antiquity. The Rhodesian architecture seemed to them mere stone piling, and the carvings, mostly in the softest of stones, not better than the work of many existing races low down in the scale of humanity. Above all, they saw no evidence of early Arabs—not a letter of their script or a trace of their fabrics. The proofs of stellar orientation they took leave to doubt, and their attitude was to be justified ere long by a resurvey. Many objects found—indeed, all about which certainty was possible—were of Kaffir origin. Could not the ruins themselves be native African? They were told they did not know the Kaffir.

Meanwhile Bent's exploration was followed up by more than one person, but by no one of archaeological qualifications, and finally the work of clearing the Great Zimbabwe thoroughly was committed to Mr. R. N. Hall, who was no exception to the rule hitherto observed in the selection of its explorers. He excavated for some years with praiseworthy devotion, wasting health and strength, and in 1904 came to England to report to scientific bodies and to publish a detailed account of his work. It so chanced that the British Association had arranged to visit South Africa in the following year, and a suggestion was made (at the instance of Sir Lewis Mitchell) that some one should be sent on ahead to examine the Rhodesian sites and report to the association on its arrival. The archaeologists and ethnologists at last made themselves heard, and their demand for a scientific excavator was met finally by the selection of Mr. D. Randall-MacIver, who had been trained in Prof. Petrie's practical school of research, and done other work in Africa of a kind to render him familiar with native products. Thus it came about that a trained archaeologist went to examine the Rhodesian ruins for the very first time in 1905, and—the whole Sabaean myth collapsed like a pack of cards! Mr. Maciver was given every facility by the local authorities; he examined foundations and middens, cut sections and drove trenches, and, in brief, these are the facts he established in about three months' work:

(1) That the essential thing on most of the Rhodesian sites is the hut, built on a platform more or less circular. Several such platforms fill the interior of the so-called "Elliptical Temple," at Zimbabwe. (2) These platforms are constructed of layers of cement all of one period, and stand either on virgin earth or, in one case, on a thin stratum of disturbed débris. (3) The "Kaffir" objects found on the surface of the platforms are found also below them, and nothing else is found either above or below of necessarily earlier date. (4) A few imported objects are also found, the date of which is not doubtful, such as Arab glass, Persian faience, and Nankin china; and these occur with the "Kaffir" objects both above and below the platforms. No one of these objects can be earlier than the eleventh century A. D., and most should be dated from two to four centuries later. (5) No Arab objects of any kind occur. (6) The architecture, at its best, is that of an uncivilized people and purely local in character. Incidentally Mr. Maciver made it clear that the great walls are those of royal kraals, built around kopjes to protect huts within. They are never true ellipses any more than of any other true form, but were probably intended to be roughly circular, so far as the nature of the ground would allow. Their present shape, their imperfect joints, their slight variations in style, are the result only of local lack of skill and precision. The whole of the ruins without exception are of native construction, and not older than mediaeval.

These main points Mr. Maciver seems to us to have made absolutely sure. There may be slight differences in date between one building and one site and another; slight differences in style may be due to construction by different tribes or native dynasties. The object and use of some of the structures remain doubtful—e. g., of the conical towers in the "Ellipse," or the "Western Temple" on the Acropolis, at Zimbabwe; many may reasonably doubt if Mr. Maciver's explanation of all the ruins he saw is adequate—e. g., if his "outworks" at the Niekerk site were not after all mere retaining walls of cultivation terraces. But these are minor questions not affecting the main facts; that beyond all question Arabs have had nothing to do with the Rhodesian structures, and that whoever built the earliest of them did not belong to any earlier period than the Middle Ages.

Exeunt Solomon and his Sheban Queen—Enter the Monomotapa. Is it conceivable that races like the modern Makalanga could have raised such huge and extensive structures? No less an authority than Mr. Selous has said lately in public that he sees no reason why not, given greater power than the chiefs have nowadays, and the command of much larger numbers of tribesmen and slaves; the construction of Zimbabwes, he thought, was well within "Kaffir" capacity. We see no difficulty either, and, where the objects found are without exception such as native African races make or use, must conclude that the buildings also are of native construction. If so, the Rhodesian sites, as Mr. Maciver truly says, acquire an altogether new, and we would add, a more real, interest. They become documents of the first order for filling up one of the greatest gaps in our knowledge of mankind, i. e., for the past history of the negro races. They ought to be studied at once by ethnologists and anthropologists familiar with African race problems, and by none more closely than by those responsible for the government of "Kaffir" races at the present day. The South African administrations might well appoint a commission of South African men of science to pursue further investigations, and if any coadjutors are needed from the mother country, they ought to be sent out by the Home Government, and include a trained excavator.

Paul Elder Nature Series.

The first two volumes in a new nature series are announced by Paul Elder & Co. of San Francisco. They are: "The Garden Book of California," by Belle Sumner Angier of Los Angeles, which covers the general subject of home gardening, and a revised and enlarged edition of Charles Keeler's "Bird Notes Afield." Both books are to be fully illustrated and decorated, and will probably appear next month.

Rex E. Beach's Thrilling Story of Life in the Far North, "The Spoilers."

OF stories that a weary man will sit up far into the night to read through, there are not, perhaps, too many. The point of view counts for something in the matter, of course—but at all events Rex E. Beach's "The Spoilers" (Harpers) is a story of the kind mentioned—a good story, to put the description in a nutshell. There's nothing subtle about Mr. Beach; his field is the obvious, his manner the direct, his morality conventional, his types conventional also—conventional, that is, in their unconventionality. For the scene of the action is Alaska—a ship of gold seekers, Nome, the diggings; the time that of the gold stampede to the North; the plot hinged on an impudent conspiracy, with political ramifications in Washington, to "jump the claims" of the first comers. The conspiracy is a matter of history. According to Mr. Beach's improved version the rascals employed a pretty and innocent young woman as unconscious advance agent of their villainy, and this young woman went unchaperoned to Nome, meeting many adventures, and, in particular, two adventurers—Roy Glenister, a young one, and Dextry, an old one, joint owners of the Midas, richest mine on Anvil Creek. These two befriended the young woman, ignorant as she was of her sinister part. Then came the arch conspirator, a big, bold politician, and with him the girl's uncle, a subservient judicial officer, to finish the job. They took the Midas and other claims and many things ensued. The more things because Glenister and McNamara (the arch conspirator) are rivals for the girl's favor.

Thereto Mr. Beach, who was one of those present, adds all the Bret Hartean stage properties of a rich mining camp—especially the high light nocturnal effects—like the flaunting dance hall and gambling house at Nome, where Broncho Kid dealt faro and Cherry Malotte was reigning belle. Several of the gambling house episodes are thrillingly dramatic—one where Cherry deals the cards, another where Glenister has a mad white night of luck, another when the other girl creeps thither in the dark to warn him of an attempt of her friends upon his liberty. There are shootings in the streets, waylayings by night, pitched battles at the mines; there is a riot of miners, and almost a lynching—with tar and feathers on the side—an encounter between Cherry and the heroine, and much else. But in particular there are two encounters with nature's weapons quite beyond description here. In one, at a lonely roadhouse, the heroine fights like a tigress for her honor, in the other Glenister and McNamara settle their grudges with bare hands, wrecking the office furniture in the process.

Mr. Beach quotes Kipling's line denying currency to law of God or man north of fifty-three, and he partly professes to show how the veneer of civilization scales off in the rugged north; but he is chiefly intent on his story. That's a thing full of dramatic incidents and dramatic figures; the gambler, the lady called Malotte, the arch-conspirator, a certain unspeakably wicked lawyer, and old Dextry, the miner, all stand out in bold and picturesque relief, and the language of the last is "langwidge" indeed. Witness his whispered comment when a fellow-miner swore: "It's plumb solemn an' reverent the way he makes them untamed cuss words sit up and beg. It's a privilege to be present." If the hero and heroine are less effective than the others, that is one of the proved penalties of the dignity. The same may be said of Sir Walter's leading men and women—or the leading creatures of any whole-hearted romancer. Only a cynic or a satirist has the nerve to treat hero or heroine quite as he does common men and women.

Miss Singleton's Holland.

Miss Esther Singleton, who has won distinction as an able editor of books, will add to her fame by her new volume on Holland, (Dodd, Mead & Co.) The book is made as Miss Singleton made earlier books on Japan and Russia, on furniture and paintings, on buildings and on Venice; she has collated the opinions of various writers, and their descriptions of Holland; has added two or three accounts by herself of certain points of the Netherlands—she is a practiced writer—has chosen nearly half a hundred excellent views of the country, and has made her book. It takes work to do what she has done, and a variety of editorial genius. She has chosen as contributors E. A. Freeman, de Amicis, George H. Boughton, Durand-Greville, to name but four of the better-known writers on Holland; but there are others less famous whom she has consulted, and the thirty whose opinions are in the book are the fittest of a much larger number. Holland is a most interesting country; Miss Singleton's book is, in its way, as good as its subject.

FORESTRY.

SILAS STRONG, EMPEROR OF THE WOODS. By Irving Batcheller. 12mo. Pp. 340. New York: Harper & Brothers. $1.50.

WHEN an author begins a book promisingly, picturing an extraordinary character—something humorous and grave, tender and terrible—who will presently appear; and when that man does appear and the reader waits in vain for him to lose his temper or do something noble, and he doesn't do it, is a nervous man justified in throwing the book down an airshaft?

That actually happened to a book the other day. But the book now under review is Irving Batcheller's "Silas Strong." Here is a novel that breathes of the woods, the Summer waters, the fishing rods, and the rifles shining under the sunlight. But the characterization lacks something. It lacks—well, failing words, it lacks character. Even the author as he writes seems to realize this. He is continually writing a sentence too many, as if, not quite sure that the reader may grasp the point, he must necessarily explain it further.

Silas Strong—the man, not the title—somehow reminded the reviewer of that other man—or title—who fell down the airshaft. In the first chapter of the book we are promised a lion who slays panthers before breakfast and breaks a bear's neck with a cuff on the ear. When he comes, after a trying wait, we find a nice old man—really a nice old man—with a bad stutter and a way of saying things that require much thought—or none at all.

But Silas Strong, the man, serves to bring out Mr. Batcheller's admirable plea for the preservation of the woods. "Back to Nature" is the song that hums between the lines. In a foreword to the book—which is in explanation of the book—the author says:

> It is in no sense a literary performance. It pretends to be nothing more than a simple account of one Summer life, pretty much as it was lived, in a part of the Adirondacks.

Then the book is what it pretends to be, and "Silas Strong" is just a title.

COWARDICE COURT.

RIGHT gayly (and with gayly colored illustrations by Harrison Fisher) rides my Lady Penelope Drake through the pages of George Barr McCutcheon's new story, "Cowardice Court," (Dodd, Mead & Co.) The only two real people in the book are Penelope herself and Randolph Shaw. At least that is the way Penelope feels about it when she compares her good-looking neighbor with the Duke and the Count and the other fashionable figureheads who are the guests at her brother's house party.

Apparently the chief matter is the feud—a paltry quarrel over some five hundred acres of Adirondack woodland, which the young American refuses to sell even to a buyer of such distinction as her Ladyship of Baslehurst. Really, however, the chief matter is the interest the English-bred Penelope takes in the American enemy. The story goes of itself, runs away with itself almost. There is a storm, a haunted house, some dog shooting, much trespassing, and more lovemaking; and we had nearly forgotten to mention that the heroine is as slight and romantic as the book and is fetchingly garbed in the properest of riding habits even when not actually seen on her horse's back.

NOT A STUDY, BUT A STORY.

AND we are told women have no sense of humor! Then probably Mary Raymond Shipman Andrews, author of "Bob and the Guides," (Charles Scribner's Sons,) is the exception that proves the rule.

Howsomever, as the countryfolk say, we defy anybody to sit through the tale of the burning trousers and keep a solemn face.

Bob is the proverbial small brother, brimful of mischief—witness the way he understudies the fox, and finds all things on earth matter of amusement from big fat brothers to grandfathers. It makes no difference even that one of those grandfathers is a Reverend Bishop and the other a venerable Judge. Bob is of the opinion that he, the "Cub," is included in the camping party because "in his young days" he had spent a year in Paris and is therefore convenient for speaking French to the guides.

He writes his chronicles at the behest of Margaret, his sister-in-law, whom he likes anyhow, she is such good sport. He occasionally gets his elders to help him out on especially long words.

"I get big words mixed sometimes unconscientiously," he admits, "but Walter says I have a noble ear for general picturesqueness."

In common with their royal Highnesses of Assyria, (or was it Babylonia?) he has a simple and naive way of beginning his narrative with the bald statement of fact, "I am Bob."

The explanation is worked out in ten chapters, each of which proves a little adventure in itself and serves to make us the more enamored of this most genuine of thirteen-year-old cubs, the man-cub who kicks out his long legs when he is pleased and has the most enviable of capacities, that of getting fun out of "everything going."

"DICK PENTREATH."

THERE'S many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip," and "The course of true love never did run smooth," are two ancient proverbs that might apply to the modern story of English country life which Katherine Tynan has named "Dick Pentreath," (A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago.)

Dick, the favorite of rich and poor, the very pet of the county, was having things quite too much his own way. It was a most literal and disgusting cup that upset matters, but there were circumstances almost to be called extenuating connected with that one fatal evening's intoxication. For hitherto our hero had been as temperate as he was clean and wholesome of nature.

It was only Lady Stella who suspected that his real weakness would prove to be the way he took his defeat. She it was who realized what a spoiled son of fortune he had been, and that she who tried to forestall him had been "acting the fool." It was only natural, perhaps, that his fiancée, not knowing him as well as Lady Stella knew him, and waiting for no testimony of circumstance, should break the engagement with utter curtness.

It was his lot to "dree his weird" with a vengeance almost from the moment after his marriage with the wrong woman, while as for poor self-accusing Dorothea in her corner of the world among the Sisters of St. Luke there were also dregs of bitterness for the drinking of. Yet let not the gentle novel reader despair. Is not the novelist all-powerful? Then "cheerily" should be the watchword, for 'tis he (in this case she) can bend and unbend fate and finally "mold it nearer to the heart's desire."

A Couple of Travel Journals.

Two hitherto unpublished volumes of travel are to appear this Spring through the Arthur H. Clark Company of Cleveland. One, believed to be of great historical value, is "Audubon's Western Journal—1849-1850," recounting an overland journey with a party of gold seekers from New York to Texas, and through Mexico to California. The introduction, biography, and notes have been supplied by Miss M. R. Audubon and Prof. F. H. Hodder. The other tells of the travels of a young Englishman through Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Kentucky, Ohio, and Illinois. It is entitled "Fordham's Personal Narrative of Travels—1817-1818," and the introduction and notes for it have been written by Prof. F. A. Ogg of Harvard.

THE CASTLE OF LIES.

TO cleanse the castle of Alterhaffen of its lies is a task for a Hercules. Suffice to note that those lies are of all sorts and conditions, political, personal, fanatical, and of every shade except white. ("The Castle of Lies." D. Appleton & Co.)

The first chapter of the story, which introduces the American tourist, Mr. Haddon, as a curiosity and a "coward," is so exciting that we wonder what can be left for the last. However, when the "one girl" sets before him the somewhat Quixotic duty of saving a life for a life, we know we are "in for it."

We are in for acquaintance with a beautiful, baleful woman, with an arch-villain, with a band of would-be assassins; and we are to watch Haddon's unwilling impersonation of his Excellency the English Ambassador. We are to share in a bloodcurdling escapade, a descent by a ladder of stones from a monstrous high-battlemented tower, and for an arrival on terra firma in the nick of time to save not only a life but the reputation of another life. This is indeed the act that vindicates the hero's hitherto inexplicable behavior.

The keyword to one of the thrilling situations is that opprobrious term "coward." It serves to unlock a safe, and reveal one of the lies as well as to lead on to the crisis.

It would be giving away royal secrets to tell the name of the "personage" whose life is saved; but barring out real people and the fabulous Hercules, we are not sure but this is the most strenuous hero on record. Wherefore, of course, he deserves the fortune that is ultimately his.

Maxim Gorky.

Apropos of Maxim Gorky's visit to this country comes the timely announcement from the Funk & Wagnalls Company of the publication this week of the Russian novelist's "Creatures That Once Were Men" in an English translation by J. K. M. Shirazi, with an introduction by G. K. Chesterton.

Four books of rich, rare, humorous quality.

In Our Town

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE.

Mr. White suggests Barrie more than any living writer. In his new book he does for the daily life of a modern Kansas town just what Barrie has done for a Scotch town in "A Window in Thrums." It is through a window also that Mr. White, as the pretended editor of the local paper, looks out upon the main street of "our town" to observe the current of life that passes there. With a delicate and yet thoroughly American humor he records its daily humors and tragedies. He mellows and humanizes his portrayal of village characters and oddities—making them real people with a real hold upon the heart. Cloth. Sixteen illustrations. $1.50.

MARY STEWART CUTTING

More Stories of Married Life

Some say courtship is the happiest period of a man or woman's life. Mrs. Cutting says no. Her exquisite stories of married life prove her theory, with what success thousands of readers well know. This latest volume is even more delightful and fascinating than her earlier work. Cloth. Frontispiece in color. $1.25.

O. HENRY

The Four Million

"East side, west side, all about the town"—Coney Island, Wall street, Fifth avenue and the Bowery—that's where O. Henry finds the types of character that he reproduces with inimitable drollery in these twenty-five tales of city life. The book radiates good humor and laughter. Cloth. $1.00.

ELLIS PARKER BUTLER

"Pigs Is Pigs"

So great has been the demand for this little masterpiece of American humor that a week before publication a second edition was put on the presses. The book is meeting with a brilliant and well-deserved success. Cloth. Five illustrations. Price 50 cents.

A Klondike Tale.

Moffat, Yard & Co. will bring out this Spring "Scarlett of the Mounted," by Marguerite Merington. The scene of the story is laid in the Klondike region. The humor in the tale is afforded by the contact of a sophisticated Eastern girl and the rough frontier characters. The villain is said to be "inimitable" and altogether new in fiction.

By Herbert Strang

The Outlook, in one of the most careful appreciations of Mr. Strang's work, said:

"Let us be thankful for boys' books really worth reading. We rejoice to find that among the crowd of money-makers who produce as if by machinery the standard books for boys there are still some who realize that because only a boy is to read a book it need not therefore be careless, and because the boy will be without experience the book need not therefore be impossible."

Brown of Moukden

A Story of the Russo-Japanese War.

. . . The story is very skillfully constructed. . . . A most effective narrative. . . . The relief of humorous passages and situations has been given, and without stint. . . . Ah Lum, the spectacled brigand chief, with all the wisdom of Confucius and Lao-Tze at his finger tips, is a most amusing person. . . . Brown of Moukden is certainly a success.—Spectator.

Kobo A Story of the Russo-Japanese War.

"A dashing romance. A story that every schoolboy will enjoy and one that will be read with much pleasure and profit by many older readers as well."—Cleveland Leader.

"The story throughout bristles with adventures; it is well written, and the author shows intimate knowledge of Japanese character and customs."—San Francisco Bulletin.

The Light Brigade in Spain;

Or, The Last Fight of Sir John Moore.

"Mr. Strang manages to galvanize the dry bones of history into a close semblance of glorious life. . . . Vivid and spirited descriptions of campaign life in Spain . . . with many rare and interesting episodes. . . . This is good reading for young and old."—Chicago Post.

The Adventures of Harry Rochester

A Tale of Marlborough and Eugene.

"A good story. Mr. Strang is to be congratulated on his success, as no doubt many young readers will testify with rapt joy."—N. Y. Tribune.

TOPICS OF THE WEEK.

DR. RICHARD BURTON has made a drama in verse out of the story in the Book of Joshua of the lady of Jericho whose house was on the city wall. There is not much in the Bible story, to be sure, on which to found a play, but Dr. Burton's imagination is sufficient, and he has made a piece that is moving and forcible in the reading, and might act well, if the actress were at hand to undertake the rôle of the sentimentalized Rahab, and there was a playgoing public likely to find interest in a poetic drama of high quality. For such Dr. Burton's "Rahab: A Drama in Three Acts," (Henry Holt,) assuredly is. It is simply and fluently written, with many felicities of phrase, and with comparatively few passages to which the most super-sensitive critic might object. The pseudo-historical atmosphere is adroitly managed, and there is plenty of dramatic action. The story of Rahab and the scarlet cord, like the wonderful story of Balaam, (or the Elohist's part of it,) in the Book of Numbers, is capable of many interpretations. The context shows it to be one of the oldest stories in the world. But Dr. Burton's interpretation is that of a dramatist. His Rahab is a penitent woman, who has seen the glory of the God of Israel in a vision, and has dreamed of the downfall of Jericho. One of the spies of Israel is her favored lover. The other spy is a traitor to Israel and his rival. There is also a Phoenician lover. The "human interest," therefore, as Augustin Daly used to express it, is sufficiently strong, and the tale, as Dr. Burton tells it, is one of repentance and pure love requited.

THE name of Theodore Tilton on the title page of a new book carries with it a sort of shock of surprise. Mr. Tilton, in his seventieth year, dwells quietly in Paris, regarding the goings on in his native land with the complacent eye of the philosopher, but still with an occasional emotional throb at the spectacle of the passing of the old order. "The Fading of the Mayflower: A Poem of the Present Time," by Mr. Tilton, is published in a handsome volume, with pictures by W. J. Enwright and decorations by Ralph Fletcher Seymour, (Chicago: A. N. Marquis.) There is a striking portrait of the author, as he is in these later years, a veritable patriarch in appearance, with that same head of hair, now snowy white. The rush and scramble after money in our Republic, the bitter spirit of competition, the accusations of dishonesty in high places, have led Mr. Tilton to fear that all may not be well in America. "But is it fading?" he asks of the New England emblem.

Is it doomed to die?
And is our arbute not an amarant
But a mere perishable plant,
Whose pink is paler as the years go by?

The pink sometimes seems to be a trifle redder, rather than paler, but the question is quite justifiable. Mr. Tilton sings anew of the glory of old New England, of the Pilgrims, and Paul Revere, and plain living. He tells again, in flowing verses that are easily read, the old Colonial tales, and his poem is full of apt historical allusion and pertinent moral reflections. It is quite worthy of its fine setting.

FRANCIS WILSON, student of books as well as of men, collector of American first editions and relics of Napoleon, golfer (within certain limitations,) and incidentally a comedian of great renown, has gathered into a volume, handsomely printed, and published by Messrs. Charles Scribner's Sons, his remembrances of the famous "star cast" of "The Rivals," when Joseph Jefferson's Bob Acres was associated in a few performances with the Absolute of Crane, the O'Trigger of Goodwin, the Mrs. Malaprop of Mrs. Drew, the Jack of Robert Taber, the Lydia of Julia Marlowe, the Falkland and Fag of Joseph and E. M. Holland, and the David of Francis Wilson. These memories of a notable tour are combined with many anecdotes and stories of Jefferson's later career. The sketches of personalities are intimate and charmingly done. New light is thrown on the best qualities of Jefferson, his amiability, his genial humor, his sound artistry. The illustrations include reproductions of photographs of the actors, and some of Jefferson's paintings. "Joseph Jefferson: Reminiscences of a Fellow Player," is a book no theatrical collector will miss, and one that many a playgoer, old and young, will read with enjoyment.

THE novel of the hour that seems already to be most talked of is Rex E. Beach's stirring narrative of possible happenings in and around Nome City, called "The Spoilers," (Harper.) In its serial publication this remarkably well-told story attracted a great deal of attention. The right of dramatization was secured before the third installment was published. As a book it has already sold largely, though it has been on the counters and stalls only a few days. "Good Bret Harte, well done," one of its admirers calls it. But, although its personages and incidents, and the rough lawlessness in its pictorial environment, inevitably suggest the master of far Western fiction, there is no imitation in "The Spoilers," except its vivid imitation of life. The young novelist knows the men he writes of, and he knows, also, the place in which he has located them. It is interesting to remember that the best of recent Klondike stories previous to Mr. Beach's, namely, "The Magnetic North," by Elizabeth Robins, was never likened to Bret Harte. That fact is significant. "The Magnetic North" was a psychologcal story. Though it was read by many, it was never the "good seller" that "The Spoiler" already is. There is a strong public demand, undoubtedly, for vigorous writing about elemental man, his battles with nature, and his own passions.

WHY an All Essay Magazine? asks one of our correspondents, who is not willing to join in the rush to get under a new standard. More essays, to be sure, he wants, and better ones. But he thinks that the present controversy should suggest to the editors of existing American magazines some wise changes in their plans. He finds a surfeit of fiction in the existing magazines, in which, we fancy, the multitude of their readers will not agree with him. He finds the Contributors' Club in The Atlantic and The Spectator in The Outlook not so good as they used to be. Perhaps he is at fault himself. Well, we print this week two letters from magazine editors, who say they always want more good essays than they can get. Here seems to be an answer to this particular correspondent. Perhaps a new All Essay Magazine would breed essayists.

MR. HENRY RIDGELY EVANS lately contributed to The Open Court of Chicago a series of entertaining papers on magic and magicians, the mystics and impostors of old, the modern mystifiers of the race of Robert Houdin. These have now been gathered in a volume, and, with an introduction by Dr. Paul Carus, editor of The Open Court, are put forth under the title of "The Old and the New Magic," by the Open Court Publishing Company. The main object of the book, of course, is to show the folly of superstition and the vanity of pretense. The aim of The Open Court is to examine, to test, to accept or reject nothing without proof. But no reader need fear to take up this book because of its moral or ethical purpose. It contains fascinating reading for everybody. It has chapters on the ghost seers and charlatans of ancient days, on Cagliostro and his predecessors. But it contains accounts, also, of the wonderful performances of Pinetti, Robert Houdin, the Herrmanns, Heller, Kellar, and a host of others, down to the days of Trewey. It describes the movements of automata, the optical illusions of the black-curtained platforms, the tricks with ropes, chains, and locked handcuffs, the second-sight and slate-writing mystifications, the vanishing of girls, the decapitations, the strange doings in movable cabinets. There is always a charm in this kind of a book. One reads it with a sense of penetrating the darkest mysteries. Then he goes to see the same old cheerful tricksters, and is as much mystified as ever by the same old tricks.

PROF. NATHANIEL SOUTHGATE SHALER of Harvard University, who died this week, aged 65 years, was easily the foremost American geologist, but he was much more than a representative of any one branch of science. He was a student of a wide range of subjects, of social economy and history as well as geology, biology, and zoology, and the author of many notable books. His "Study of the American Commonwealth" is a sound and valuable work. He found time to write a useful and suggestive book entitled "Domesticated Animals: Their Relation to Man." His sociological studies, "The Individual" (1900;) "The Citizen," (1903;) and "The Neighbor," (1904,) attracted a great deal of favorable comment. His most extraordinary literary work, however, was his long dramatic poem, "Elizabeth of England," which filled five volumes, and set forth, in well made verse, of the Elizabethan pattern, the glorious happenings of a spacious age. This was really a wonderful achievement for a man of Prof. Shaler's activity in other fields. It certainly proved his contention that a man of science may also be a student of the liberal arts. But the breadth of Prof. Shaler's mind and the wide scope of his usefulness had already been sufficiently proven.

THE first number of a new monthly magazine called Whist, published by Richard Badger, in Boston, is at hand. H. H. Ward is the editor, and R. F. Foster one of the principal contributors. Among the other contributors will be A. R. Metcalfe, E. A. Montgomery, Carl T. Robertson, W. H. Samson, W. M. Seabury, John T. Slade, and B. W. Smith, American authorities on whist and bridge. The new magazine is well printed and of good appearance, and it contains the features to be looked for, naturally, in a publication of its kind. Only four of its forty pages are devoted exclusively to bridge, but bridge is still the card game of the hour, and its literature is increasing in volume. The newest books on the subject are "Foster's Complete Bridge," by R. F. Foster, (McClure, Phillips,) which will be found useful alike to beginners and advanced players. This is Mr. Foster's fifth book on bridge, which is still a comparatively new game. He says that its origin is obscure, and conjectures that it may be an outgrowth of other games such as goralasch, siberia, and preference. There is an old Dutch game very much like bridge, which, Mr. Foster conjectures, may have originated in Turkey. "The Why and Wherefore of Bridge," by G. T. Atchison and A. J. G. Lindsell, (Longmans,) is a well-written treatise, which contains the needful information for novices at the game, but it is better adapted, we fancy, to the requirements of players who have attained measurable skill in playing it.

THE Goop man is a good fellow. We all owe a great deal to Gelett Burgess. The Goops themselves are a source of perpetual delight to persons with the intellectual capacity to comprehend their grace and humor. Mr. Burgess is also a capital story teller, with a head full of odd fancies, and a nimble pen able to set them forth entertainingly. A fresh batch of his stories is now at hand in book form, having done service the past few months as a serial. "The Little Sister of Destiny," (Houghton, Mifflin & Co.,) is another New Arabian Nights, with the prettiest of pretty young women for a new, ingenuous, and equally ingenious Haroun al Raschid. She is a California heiress of untold millions, and she does good in this metropolis in a queenlike, nay, more than queenlike, way. Principally, she does good to the reader, to whom her fairy-like personality, her fund of humor, her mastery of device, are all refreshing. Her doings are just barely possible. She belongs, indeed, to that golden land of romance, which lies further away than California, and yet is so near to every sound heart. Everybody should read "The Little Sister of Destiny."

EVERY habitual reader of current fiction must know by this time that Mrs. Humphry Ward's latest novel, "Fenwick's Career," which is approaching completion as a serial in The Century Magazine, is founded on the life of the great painter George Romney. Romney was born in 1734, and died in 1802. The novel does not contain the actual story of his life. As in "The Marriage of William Ashe," Mrs. Ward has transferred her personages to a later day. The action of the novel passes in the last half of the nineteenth century. But the model for the protagonist was Romney, the brilliant, sensitive friend of Lady Hamilton. "Fenwick's Career," which, we fancy, will be accounted one of the best of Mrs. Ward's books, in her later manner, will appear in book form this Spring.

Dr. Rowland's New Book.

Dr. Henry C. Rowland's new novel, "In the Shadow," will be brought out by D. Appleton & Co. April 20. It is said to go deeply into the race problem, the chief character in the story being a negro who has every advantage of wealth and education and is admitted into the best society in England. He later falls in love with a beautiful American girl. Dr. Rowland has a record in ocean voyages. He crossed the Atlantic five times, the Pacific three times, the China Sea half a dozen times, and the Indian Ocean once. In addition he has made five voyages to the West Indies and shorter cruises along the coasts of North America, Great Britain, Holland, Germany, the Baltic, and other places. The scenes of his new novel are laid in England, the United States, and Haiti.

An Important Compilation.

Dodd, Mead & Co. are just sending out the seventh issue of Clegg's valuable work, "The International Directory of Booksellers and Bibliophile's Manual." The work contains full lists of public libraries of the world, publishers, book collectors, universities and colleges, learned societies, &c., bibliographies of book plates, book and library catalogues, &c. The work is useful to librarians and others in the book line.

NEWS OF THE BOOK WORLD ABROAD.

New Stories by Rudyard Kipling—Adriatic Civilization, Wedmore's Whistler Book, Oriental Carpets.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES. [Copyright, 1906.]

LONDON, April 13.—Rudyard Kipling's new volume of stories for children and about children will not be published until the Autumn. As already announced it will be entitled "Puck of Pook's Hill." It is said that the stories will have something of the fanciful vein of "They." John Murray will soon publish "The Shores of the Adriatic: An Architectural and Archaeological Pilgrimage," by F. Hamilton Jackson. The author aims to point out the objects of interest on the eastern coast of Italy, where Lombard, Byzantine, and Saracen mingled and left traces of their art, history, and traditions.

⁂

SIR ISAAC PITMAN & SONS will publish this month Frederick Wedmore's "Whistler and Others." The famous art critic in this book, besides his discussion of Whistler, covers a wide range of art topics, such as the rise of the English water color, the personality of G. F. Watts, the influence of Ruskin, the paintings of George Romney and Lawrence. The Austrian Museum of Art and Industry is preparing a work illustrated with plates of the most important Oriental carpets discovered since 1896. This is, practically, a continuation of a work published during the years 1892-6 by the Imperial Museum at Vienna. The first of the four parts is now ready.

⁂

AMELIA E. BARR'S latest novel, "Cecilia's Lovers," is published here to-day by Fisher Unwin. Sarah Jeannette Duncan has a novel coming out with the Constables. It is called "Set in Authority." The scenes are laid in London and India.

⁂

THE Westminster Press is about to publish "The Log of H. M. S. Lancaster." This work is likely to prove unusually interesting, for the Lancaster was the warship which shadowed the Russian auxiliary cruisers, and also followed Rojestvensky's fleet after the Dogger Bank incident. W.

NEW BOOKS ON ART AND ARTISTS.

Work of the Dutch Landscape Painters—Titian's Pictures—The Preraphaelites Again.

ART critics and connoisseurs are constantly amazed at the deplorable ignorance of theory in art, of its biographical, historical, and critical literature, displayed by men whose pictures are successfully exhibited and sold. The art schools in this country, and especially in Europe, do their best to remedy this defect, but the student, on leaving them, unless he have a literary inclination, usually confines his efforts to the purely practical and productive part of his work. If he can be induced to admit the necessity of another part, he invariably answers that he has "no time" to give it attention. For several years past readers of these columns may have noticed the appearance from art publishers of monographs in history, biography, and criticism intended to offer in a concise yet comprehensive manner a field for supplementary reading to practical art workers who have "no time" to examine original sources. Among the authors of works published with this intent is E. B. Greenshields, who now presents as a sequel to his essay, "Subjective View of Landscape Painting," a volume on the landscape, with special consideration of the work of seven Dutch artists of the modern school—Johannes Bosboom, Josef Israels, James Maris, Anton Mauve, Matthew Maris, William Maris, and J. H. Weissenbruch. ("Landscape Painting and Modern Dutch Artists." Baker, Taylor & Co. $2.)

The book opens with a brief history of landscape painting, in which is distinctly shown what artists should copy, reproduce, idealize, or completely transform from nature as she appears before the eye under the sun or lowering clouds. We then have a chapter on the revival of Dutch art—a correct topography subordinated to an individualism, charming in emotion and feeling. A chapter on "Various Opinions About Art" is a collection of critical extracts so arranged as to fix in the reader's mind the exact status of all the chords in the whole gamut of artistic expression from conventional decoration to the world's greatest pictures. "Nature and the Poets" is a suggestive essay, a combination of apt extracts and analogous references to landscapes, showing how in poetry as in art the greatest work is achieved by those who, with a complete knowledge of the actual, are by dint of a sympathetic imagination able to discern what may move the emotions in others or what in a particular instance may be expanded through this imagination into a universal truth, the universality of which was unknown or unappreciated before.

Particular emphasis is laid on the group of Dutch artists already mentioned, because their work reveals landscape painting in a strong subjective phase—the domination of realism by a thoroughly poetic individuality. The book will be found of varied value in its pictorial aspect, for, in spite of the pains taken with the half tones, even the auto-chromatic lens leaves values somewhat distorted in yellows, reds, and browns. A pleasing typographical as well as convenient feature of the book will be found in its marginal notes.

SIXTY-FIVE pictures are given in the new Newnes Library volume, "The Later Work of Titian," (Frederick Warne,) $1.25, which present the characteristic work of the Venetian painter from 1540 onward. They include the many examples in the Prado, Madrid, among which are the presentations of Venus and Diana, the portraits of Charles V. and Philip II., &c.; at the Louvre in Paris, in the different collections in London, the Royal Gallery of Vienna, and other places. The photogravure frontispiece is a reproduction of the painting of Charles V. as he appeared on the morning after the battle of Mühlberg.

Mr. Miles places Titian with Velasquez and Rembrandt, the first being, however, he believes, the most popular painter to-day. And he believes, too, that only to the painter, who has studied much and gone through a course in an art school, the "complete beauty" of Titian's handiwork will be apparent; "to such alone, also, will be fully revealed the vital and inherent truth of his renderings of tones and values." Titian, he points out, is thoroughly human, and consequently makes his figures live and move, thus stirring "to real enthusiasm an absolutely untrained spectator."

A list of the localities of Titian's pictures is given, while there are a few words in the introduction on his most important works—for whom he painted them, what they represent, and other interesting information.

The second volume in this series before us contains examples of the work of the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood—Ford Madox Brown, William Holman Hunt, Dante Gabriel Rossetti, and Sir John E. Millais, P. R. A. Besides these, there are pictures by the Italian painters before Raphael—Fabriano, Fra Angelico, Masaccio, Fra Filippo Lippi, Mantegna, Botticelli, and one from Raphael. With the exception of the frontispiece, a photogravure reproduction of Millais's "Autumn Leaves," the fifty-five illustrations in the book, as in the other volumes in the series, are in half tone. ("The Preraphaelite Brotherhood," Frederick Warne. $1.25.)

Mr. Phythian's introductory essay deals with the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood, special attention being given to Ford Madox Brown, who, although "not so much a member" of the brotherhood, still was its inspirer and guide, and anticipated the chief principles adopted by it. There are briefer sketches of the others in the Brotherhood, with some reference to their more noted works.

It was the aim of the "P. R. B.'s" to paint direct from nature and bring out her marked differences in light and shade, as was evidenced in the work of the painters before Raphael. But they did not remain true to their ideals, and, one by one, the men stopped troubling themselves about "fidelity to natural fact," and began to produce pictures of romantic and idealistic character. Speaking of the influence of the Brotherhood, Mr. Phythian says:

> It was not enough that the men who took part in it ("the movement on the aftercourse of English painting") should win recognition for their theory and practice of art. It was needful that the whole lump should be leavened, or, to revert to the figure with which we started, that the whole body, which was sick, should be reinvigorated. And the movement did, in fact, accomplish what was required of it. Not merely did it quicken a few artists into life, it permeated the whole art of the nation.

PENNSYLVANIA, 1838-1905.

"OLD Time Notes of Pennsylvania," in two volumes, which is a connected and chronological record of the commercial, industrial, and educational progress of Pennsylvania and the "inner" history of all political movements since the adoption of the Constitution of 1838 down to 1905, is coming from the John C. Winston Company press of Philadelphia. It is by Col. A. K. McClure, LL. D., who, as is said in the introduction, was for nearly fifty years "actively engaged in the political struggles of the day." He has endeavored to be just and "to suppress every vestige of resentment." An idea of the contents of the work may be had from some of the chapter headings. Beginning with a discussion of "Old Time Political and Social Conditions," the author goes on to the "Buckshot War," the advent of the Whig Party, the advent of the locomotive, the early railways and their Presidents, the earliest Governors of Pennsylvania, the Erie riots, the political "confusion" in 1855, the organization of the Republican and People's Parties, Lincoln's election to the Presidency, and the civil war, through the Reconstruction period, the adoption of the Constitution of 1874, The Philadelphia Times, (of which the author was editor for a time,) down to the election of Quay for the second time as United States Senator.

The work is illustrated with over 100 portraits of politicians, writers, business men, and other well-known men of Pennsylvania. It is being issued in a limited autograph edition, each set signed by the author.

McClurg Publications.

The Chicago house of A. C. McClurg & Co. is bringing out just now three volumes dealing with entirely different subjects—"Old Tales from Rome," by Alice Zimmern; "Hawaiian Yesterdays," by Dr. Henry M. Lyman, and "The Ghost in Hamlet, and Other Essays in Comparative Literature," by Prof. Maurice F. Egan.

The volume of "Old Tales" presents in popular form the legends and fables of Rome as related by Virgil, Livy, and Ovid. The book has been divided into three parts—the story of Aeneas and his comrades from the fall of Troy to the founding of Lavinium; the early days of Rome down to the expulsion of the Kings; and "The Transformation," some of the stories in which are of Italian origin, others belonging to Greece and Asia. The volume is fully illustrated and appears uniform with "Old Tales from Greece," by the same author.

Dr. Lyman's book is one of boyhood reminiscences. It describes life in Hawaii in the early '40s, when the author was a boy. He tells about the customs of the natives and how the white people lived. His book is embellished by a number of pictures from photographs, and two maps.

There are ten essays in Prof. Egan's little volume. The titles are: "The Ghost in Hamlet," "Some Phases of Shakespearean Interpretation," "Some Pedagogical Uses of Shakespeare," "Lyricism in Shakespeare's Comedies," "The Puzzle of Hamlet," "The Greatest of Shakespeare's Contemporaries," "Imitators of Shakespeare," "The Comparative Method in Literature," "A Definition of Literature," "The Ebb and Flow of Romance." The author is instructor in English at the Catholic University in Washington.

"The Princess Olga."

The Harpers publish this week a story by Ervin Wardman called "The Princess Olga." It is a romance somewhat of the school of Zenda, but there are variations. For instance, the hero, who goes out to the Kingdom of Crevonia, where romance and the Princess Olga dwell, is not a British younger son, but an American. And the American is not a mere wanderer, but the representative of powerful American commercial interests—in short, a sort of master of events in the little kingdom, rent by many plots over a disputed succession. The object is to gain the hero his way and the Princess. The author, by the way, is a newspaper man, editor of The New York Press.

Everyman's Library

Is a library composed of FICTION, POETRY, SCIENCE, HISTORY, ROMANCE, BIOGRAPHY, etc.

It is composed of books that have stood the test of time and are recognized as of permanent value.

It is under the general editorship of Ernest Rhys, who has secured an array of editors never before seen in a library of the sort.

It is published at 50 cents a volume in cloth and $1 in full leather. Each volume is a really attractive example of bookmaking without regard to price.

A WOMAN'S HEART

The author of "A Woman's Heart" (just out) has written a truly remarkable book. It is the intimate account of a cultured woman's passionate love for a man bound by priestly vows. It is palpitant with human emotion. ($1.50.)

THE SPUR

By G. B. Lancaster, author of "Sons o' Men," is a tale of an uneducated literary genius who sells himself for seven years to another man in order to get his chance in life. The strange chain of events which resulted from this unnatural bargain make a story of tremendous power. ($1.50.)

THE DOG BOOK

"The dog de luxe" (as The New York Sun calls it) has reached seven parts out of the ten needed to cover all the prominent American breeds. Mr. Watson has made the only adequate book on the subject ever issued in America. (Per part, $1.10, subscription.)

FROM READERS.

Music, Poetry and Prose—Still Seeking a Definition of Poetry.

I.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

IT seems strange that even a "Sphinx" should have failed to read a riddle as simple as mine, yet like others he has missed altogether the pith of what was puzzling a "Perplexed Subscriber." To discover what is essential in poetry—that is, "significant" and "fine"—would be a work or supererogation, as—perhaps luckily for authors—tastes differ quite as widely as do talents.

For instance, measured by my yardstick, Whitman's "Leaves of Grass" is neither pig, perch, poultry, nor good plain pickles—that is, neither fine poetry nor very significant prose. I cannot ignore the fact, however, that some widely recognized authorities have accorded him "laurels," but I believe these, in the long run, will not prove "evergreens"; they will fade and fall, as so many do.

Most of the conventional critics (and I fancy very few of the "cultivated" ones dare to be unconventional) hold that poets, like the proverbial Indian, are never good until they are dead; though I dimly perceive there must be some hiatus in this silly-gism, (pardon me, I meant syllogism,) as all of these glorified ghosts must have been once beginners unknown to fame, and it is reasonable to assume that their once "unlaureled lines" were not posthumously revised and improved.

It is fair to assume that the "lambkin," bleating from the Bronx, would prefer "Leaves of Grass" to "Laurels," (the last usually but lean fare;) and it is evidently his opinion that the "form" is not essential. If Mr. Boynton is right, what distinctly differentiates the poet from the writer of prose is that the first cannot ignore rhyme and rhythm, (one or the other,) and the latter can, even when h's ideas are poetic in conception.

Even in literature there is nothing so successful as success, though, as a rule, with poets only the dead draw big dividends. To be uninfluenced by the prestige of a name, to judge a work by an unknown author judiciously yet sympathetically, to be able to pick out the "pearls" from the "pebbles," that is given to but few; and least of all to those who have neglected nature in their devotion to art. It is the reaction from the teachings of this school that explains, if it does not justify, the worship of the naked and unwashed that Whitman gives us; but even if we believe star gazing leads only to stumbling, that is surely no reason why we should insist that diamonds can only be dug out of—dunghills.

As to myself, I frankly confess to being one of the unorthodox; I prefer Schiller to Shakespeare, even Baumbach to Browning, and certainly Heine to Homer; but then I am from the backwoods, not the Bronx. A. M. HUGER.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

I cannot refrain from offering a few remarks suggested by "Jax's" communication. In it is the old, familiar thrust given to any one who dares to question any of the forms and tendencies of modern music. I have not the qualifications of a musical critic, but maintain that when out of 100 persons of refined and serious tastes attending a performance more than 90 per cent. come away either openly complaining or admitting that it furnishes neither pleasure nor inspiration, there is something radically wrong. Music should sometimes be considered in relation to life. It is time that human needs be granted a respectful hearing. When those who come from the various fields of the world, capable of appreciating and craving for the "beauty and grandeur of music," protest that what is furnished does not minister to their highest needs it will not do to tell them to go and listen to the hurdy-gurdy.

It is possible that the cultivation of taste, so called, may sometimes be the perversion of taste. I can conceive how one taught to disregard his taste may eventually learn to derive satisfaction from the practice of the habit in another direction, or how one who has spent years in the pursuit, especially where pleasure is the chief aim, may at last through excessive indulgence become surfeited with all real music and require extravagant combinations to excite interest. But in both instances the conditions are abnormal and the tastes of such persons should not be the criterion for all of us.

As to poetry, there is good reason to hope that on the basis of modern science and experience and inspired by the newer and higher conceptions of duty and truth, the grandest work of all time will be reared. But assuredly it will conform to the rules and restraints that characterize the art and by virtue of which it takes hold on our lives. C. H. E.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

How comforting to "C. H. E." must be the belief that his preference for the simpler and more melodious forms of music is due to intellectual honesty rather than to lack of taste! But how about those of us who prefer more complex and higher, as we think, forms of music? We make no defense of dishonest folk. Heaven knows such are none too few in our day and generation. But is it fair of "C. H. E." to brand us by implication with intellectual dishonesty?

The human mind, even of the first class, is subject to curious limitations. What seems plain, simple, and harmonious to one may seem (unsympathetically) chaotic to another. Most of us who have cultivated such gifts as the good Lord has given us feel that we have made certain advances in certain directions. In our youthful days we may have found "Flee as a Bird" and "Way Down Upon the Suwanee River" the most beautiful of musical compositions. To-day, perhaps, while still realizing the merits of these compositions, we may find ourselves infinitely more moved by "Siegfried's Tod," and yet feel that our intellectual honesty is not impaired.

In music, as in poetry and art, who is in the right and who is in the wrong? Time alone can tell. We shall not be here, "C. H. E.," you and I, when the final verdict is pronounced!

However we may differ, why not credit each other at least with intellectual honesty? JAX.

Huneker and Wilde.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

Mr. James Huneker, in a recent article entitled "Ideas and Fancies of Arthur Symons," remarks that "to criticise criticism is to deal with life at third remove." May I be permitted to deal with life at fourth remove, or perhaps at fifth remove, since I propose to criticise a critic's criticism of the criticism of a critic? The critic of the first remove is in this instance Oscar Wilde, whose sole reputation, that of a literary artist, Mr. Huneker seems to sweep away with a few witty generalities. Not that he overstates the case when he mentions that the revulsion of opinion with regard to Wilde "has gone to strange extremes." Revulsion of opinion may be said to postulate exaggeration, and the deluge of mawkish sentimentalism that has attended Wilde's rehabilitation is as sickening to all who admire his writings as to them who in their antipathy confuse the author with the man. But when Mr. Huneker adds that "the man never wrote an original line, never conceived an original dramatic situation," and appears to base his contention on or to support it by Symons's essay, he places himself in an unenviable position and one that is alarmingly untenable. In his quotation of Arthur Symons he commits the indiscretion of telling the truth, but not all of the truth. He has shown how asterisks may prove more treacherous than words, and that Stevenson's gospel of omission may not always be followed with impunity. For Symons does not confine himself to the statement that "the whole man was not so much a personality as an attitude." He continues by saying: "And it was precisely in his attitudes that he was most sincere. They represented his intentions: they stood for the better, unrealised part of himself. Thus his attitude toward life and toward art was untouched by his conduct." Now an attitude that is sincere is by its very nature the sign manual of originality and the literary product of such originality its quintessence. "A truth in art is that whose contradictory is also true." Thus writes Wilde in "The Truth of Masks"; thus quotes Symons in "An Artist in Attitudes." And yet we learn that Wilde "never wrote an original line." But perhaps, after all, Mr. Huneker has his best advocate in Wilde himself: "To know the truth one must imagine myriads of falsehoods. For what is Truth? In matters of religion it is simply the opinion that has survived. In matters of science it is the ultimate sensation. In matters of art it is one's last mood."

Symons tells us at the conclusion of his essay that Wilde "found himself appealing frankly to the public in a series of the wittiest plays that have been seen on the modern stage." This recalls Mr. Huneker's "and the man * * * never conceived an original dramatic situation." Max Beerbohm once wrote of Wilde: "And now that he is dead they will realize fully what was for them involved in his downfall, how lamentable the loss to dramatic literature." It was George Bernard Shaw—unless I am mistaken—who suggested to certain detractors who said a Wilde play was so lucrative, as well as so easy of composition, that they should all try their hands at one. Even Mr. Howells considered "An Ideal Husband" worthy of his notice. Yet this is beside the mark, the question being: How many original dramatic situations are offered to the public in a decade? The answer might prove beyond the powers of the wisest of the Sybils! And as for Salomé finding its inspiration in the "Herodias" of Flaubert—why not? Shall Shakespeare, the Elizabethan dramatists, and Mr. Fitch, be set at naught because of the occasional appropriation of an Italian novel or a French playlet? To condemn a playwright for such practices would be like convicting a myopic maiden of wearing glasses. But where is the "sweet reasonableness" on which Mr. Huneker dwells—this "epieikia" which he borrows from Matthew Arnold? This allusion, coming upon the heels of a somewhat unconvincing application of irrelevant premises, tends to place his criticism in the category of "Robert Elsmere," which Wilde says is "simply Literature and Dogma 'with the literature left out.'"

Yet Mr. Huneker rather gracefully permits Wilde to remain "the most brilliant mocking bird of English literature." He then proceeds to bewilder us with lightning flashes from his clever pen, to terrify us with references to Huysmans, Poe, Hawthorne, and Barbey d'Aurevilly, (Mr. Ross repudiates the posthumous translation of "Ce qui ne meurt pas,") serves us Wilde's plays as cream puffs, (melted ones!) and leaves us baffled with the last mask: "De Profundis."

But has Mr. Huneker read carefully those exquisite tales, "The Young King" and "The Happy Prince," that stirring prose poem "The Teacher of Wisdom," or among his poems "Requiescat" or "Impression du Matin" or the charming "Jardin des Tuileries"? Has he perchance examined "Salomé" in the French in which Wilde wrote it? Can he explain why this play is now published in German, Spanish, Polish, Swedish, and Russian? Has he forgotten "The Ballad of Reading Gaol" and "Intentions"? Does he know that that last appeal for a hearing should have been called "Epistola: in carcere et in vinculis" and not "De Profundis," that if it could have been given to the world in its entirety the former masks would now be forgotten?

Of Arthur Symons's poems Wilde has said, "I greatly admire Symons's work. He feels what he writes. But he is occasionally too sickly. He pants upon the breasts of his loves in a labored effort to feel. He urges his passion, instead of permitting his passion to surge in him."

What might he have written of Mr. Huneker? Probably much that was praise; for when all is said and done in his point of view his verbal pyrotechnics, his rhetorical flourishes, his weakness for alliterations, and his unexpected subject matter, James Huneker more nearly approaches Oscar Wilde than any other living writer. This may be an earthly consolation to the former, since it can no longer serve as such to the latter. He, in one of his last letters speaks of his life as "the tragi-comedy of our existence." Judging from present circumstances, it would seem to have survived him.

Literary Statistics.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

I was greatly surprised, in looking over a recent issue of THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS, to find, under the signature of Eugene L. Didier, and dated Baltimore, March 1, 1906, an article entitled "A Southern Author." The article in question is a short sketch of the life and literary work of Dr. John Williamson Palmer, a well-known poet, editor, and novelist.

Let me say at once that the statements in Mr. Didier's article are undoubtedly accurate. His account of facts in Dr. Palmer's literary career—such as his early life in California, the circumstances under which his famous war lyric, "Stonewall Jackson's Way," was written, &c.—agrees substantially with the biographical sketch in Edmund Clarence Stedman's "American Anthology"; but Stedman's "Anthology" (edition of 1900) states that Dr. John Williamson Palmer died in New York in 1896—ten years ago; while from Mr. Didier's article I learn—and this is what surprises me—that Dr. Palmer died Feb. 26 of the present year. This date is, of course, correct.

The above incident is a curious example of inaccuracies such as we often find in the very best of our standard encyclopedias and works of biographical reference. Other authors besides John Williamson Palmer have had the pleasant privilege of reading their own obituaries. In "Harper's Cyclopedia of British and American Poetry," published in 1881, Horatius Bonar, the Scottish hymn writer, is recorded as having died in 1869. He lived twenty years after that date. In a popular work on American authors, published about fifteen years ago, Charlotte Fiske Bates is mentioned as dead, although that lady is living to-day.

More than one of Edgar Allan Poe's biographers has stated that his birthplace was Baltimore and the date of his birth 1811. In a cursory examination of "Sharp's Dictionary of English Authors," a reference book well known on both sides of the Atlantic, I noticed that William Carleton, an Irish novelist, who died upward of thirty-five years ago, is credited with the authorship of "Farm Ballads," "Farm Legends," and "Farm Festivals," books written by the American poet Will Carleton.

Stedman, in his "American Anthology," states that James Aldrich died in 1856. On the same leaf he tells us that Anne Reeve Aldrich was a "daughter of the poet James Aldrich," and he gives 1866 as the year of her birth. Other authorities agree with Stedman in regard to both the above dates; but if they are correct the lady mentioned could not have been a daughter of James Aldrich the poet. Possibly their relationship might be explained in a manner similar to the way in which the Dutchman explained the authorship of the dramas of Shakespeare—that they were not written by Shakespeare at all, but by another man of the same name.

Bushmen.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

May an Australian visitor make use of your columns to call attention to a misuse of the word "bushman" when applied to inhabitants of Australia which is creeping into use in America? I have encountered it in some very high quarters. The meaning of "bushman" in Australia differs radically from that of an analogous word, "Bushman," (originally, I believe, Busch man) in South Africa. The latter is the name of one of the native colored races, whereas in Australia the "bushman" is the white resident of the "bush," or the wilder parts of the country. Specifically, it means one skilled in bush craft, in finding his way from point to point, knowing the signs of the neighborhood of water, &c. In this descriptive sense only it may be applied to a native black man, as, "Jacky is a good bushman." The black inhabitants are styled indifferently "blacks," "aborigines," or "aboriginals" and "natives." The last word is sometimes used, though not so often as formerly, to signify the native-born whites. In this sense it was accepted as a title many years ago by the large and important Australian Natives' Association, (the A. N. A.) The Australian of to-day, however, dubs himself an Australian simply.

SPELLING REFORM.

One Correspondent Who Thinks Current Pronunciation Should Also Be Corrected.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

MR. SPRAGUE'S kindly letter interested me much, and I thank him cordially for trying to lift the subject of any reform of English spelling out of the rut of prejudice. Even his gentle jeer at the misspelled "traveler" in my letter was amusing, for it was the spelling, Mr. Editor, of some daimon of your own Inferno, most carefully altering my own "traveller." However, this alteration is very pardonable, in face of some sorry experience of mine of having serious and careful contributions to certain papers altered purposely by the printer into coarse and vulgar effusions, and so printed over my own name. The insolence was carefully explained to me as American humor. I accepted the explanation. It was hardly an encouragement to send any well-meant article to a paper, but from an Eastern paper and from its correspondents one will receive courteous consideration, even in trifles, I am sure.

By "English scholars" I meant precisely what Mr. Sprague means, rejecting, however, his opinion of the "narrowness" of Englishmen in conserving their own language. As well charge the Académie Francaise with narrowness in preserving French from corruption. I regret that my writing was not clear on this point. Your correspondent will, I am sure, allow me to correct a misconception into which he has fallen. In instancing certain words as lacking all authority in their local spelling, (I used as examples "endeavor," "neighbor," "Savior,") I was not speaking of their linguistic ancestry, but of their orthography. Your correspondent writes concerning this, "He concludes that 'Emperor' is not from the French and that 'endeavour' and 'behaviour' are of French origin. He is in error in each case." I made no such conclusion. This absurd non sequitur is his, not mine. Because words in "our" reach us from Latin through old French it does not follow that words in "or" do not. And to prove how foolish I am he has taken words I did not use—"Emperor," "behaviour"—and put them into the same category as "endeavour," to which neither belongs, confusing a point and—well, I will not follow his example of holding it up to ridicule, but will simply point out his error in asserting that "endeavour" is not from the French, doubtless a slip on his part, for he must know, I am sure, that it is most distinctly of French ancestry, of which any Latin derivation from "debére" is so remote as to be almost lost. "Behaviour"—a pure Saxon-English word—is not in the same family at all, but seems to have taken on its termination by "attraction," an excellent example of the strength and antiquity of French influence upon the language, an influence so potent at one time in the social and political life of England, as well as in its speech, that its exhibition in the language is well worth retaining as part of our common history and ancestry. I hope your correspondent will not mind my pointing out that, in labouring with my ignorance of my mother tongue, he has fallen into the common blunder of thinking that words which look alike belong to the same family. It only accentuates my point—that spelling, such as "endeavor," "neighbor," "behavior," "Savior," has not even the authority of the crude scholarship of "favor" and "color."

Yes, I know the Philological Society and some members thereof, but the uncouth spelling given by your correspondent for my "benefit"—was he writing contemptuously?—has not commended itself to English people. Its weird words may be seen, I think, in the brochures of Anarchists, but in England is neither accepted nor acceptable. As a matter of interest, apropos, I have just received from a New York publishing house of international fame a work by an American scholar of first rank on the results of research in a difficult problem of ancient literature, and this purely American work of highest literary ability has English spelling throughout.

I have never seen Archbishop Trench's work. It was not necessary to learn English from books, for from my cradle I have been surrounded by those who spoke it with purity, discussed it with intelligence and wrote it correctly, and always used it with a rich music of intonation, phrase, and rhythm utterly unknown in conversation here. Every mail brings me letters from English men which, for pureness of diction, felicity of phrasing, and historical correctness of spelling—not to speak of elegance of handwriting—might be sent to the press without alteration of a letter or a comma. It is our mother tongue. I never used a dictionary, nor even saw one in the house. It is our mother tongue, and as we make the language so it remains, as the French with French and the Spaniards with Spanish. In taking leave of the subject, as far as I am concerned, permit me to make two suggestions—of which the former is that those who wish to reform a language should first learn how to speak it. I have resided in this country for ten years, and my lot has been cast among soi-disant "cultured" folk. I speak of language, not of hearts—their hearts are good and true, and some of the most valued friendships of my life are here. But, apart from university professors and the higher clergy, I know only one man who speaks correctly. All but he [illegible] their [illegible] path with [illegible] wrecks of the language as they use it. What with slang, Yankerie, and, I suppose, Chicagoese, snarled, and snapped, and choked out, they are scarcely intelligible. Whatever it be, it is not English. Educated women speak, as a rule, correctly, and are very careful, loving purity of speech as they love purity in everything. And this brings me to my second suggestion. As the Précieuses of France, notwithstanding their affectations and Molière's badinage, did purify French, so let the cultivated women of America take the language in hand for whatever reform be necessary in America. I would trust them; but as to any Standard Oil and Steel Spelling Trust, may all good powers defend us! The most musical, majestic, tender language the world has yet known, more sonorous than Greek, more musical than any Latin from Vergil to St. Bernard, in the hands of some millionaire shopkeeper who founds a spelling school and calls it a university because he and his crew cannot speak or write decent English! Well, well! A Wall Street and Bowery Language Purification College will come next. What else are we expected to do at the nod of Jupiter Dollarius? I prefer Les Précieuses. With a thousand apologies for trespassing upon your space—I will not further offend—I am, yours, &c., ENGLISHMAN.

Emily Bronte's Poems.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

It is a source of satisfaction to see in your issue of March 31 (in the contribution of "E. M.") that the deep thought and pious feeling of Emily Brontë are receiving recognition. Matthew Arnold recognized a kindred spirit when he wrote of her as one

> "whose soul
> Knew no fellow for might,
> Passion, vehemence, grief,
> Daring, since Byron died,"

And he acknowledged that he had not yet risen to her level, by characterizing as too bold the poem she wrote the day before she died. No loftier swan-song has yet been sung. It is the culmination of the thought of Aristotle, Berkeley, Hegel, St. John, and (I may add) of the latest teachings of modern science, conceived as it could be conceived only by the insight of genius and piety. Whether she knew it or not, she was writing for posterity, and posterity is just now entering upon its inheritance. Will you find space for these stanzas from the poem as yet so little known?

No coward soul is mine,
  No trembler in the world's storm-troubled sphere,
I see heaven's glories shine,
  And faith shines equal, arming me from fear.

With wide embracing love,
  Thy spirit animates eternal years,
Pervades, and broods above,
  Changes, sustains, dissolves, creates, and rears.

Though earth and man were gone,
  And suns and universes ceased to be,
And thou wert left alone,
  Every existence would exist in thee.

There is not room for death,
  Nor atom that his might could render void;
Thou, Thou, are being and breath;
  And what Thou art may never be destroyed.

Bailie Nicol Jarvie.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

Often something lacking either in ourselves or in the other person leaves us unappreciative of people really likable.

It is possible that a lack in my make-up might cause me to find some of Mr. W. C. Brownell's favorites tiresome. Be that as it may, I should think myself unworthy if after an intimacy of fifty years I did not proclaim Bailie Nicol Jarvie as even more delightful than when first we were acquainted. Sir Walter, it is said, never fully appreciated the Bailie until the novel had been "Terryfied," (dramatized by Daniel Terry,) and he, honest man, had been set before his creator in his habit as he lived. May Mr. Brownell experience a like change of heart!

Objects to King James.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

Has not the time arrived when the Christian Church may afford to dispense with the preface to the King James version of the Bible denoting this our commonly accepted edition by a single line, as, the King James version? However appropriate it may have seemed to the Church at the period when prepared, it appears to me to be no longer needful; that, in fact, the presenting of the names of Elizabeth and James in the preface of the Scriptures, as given into the hands of the present generation, savors almost of modern advertising, seems a desecration actually. I have felt it for years to at least jar upon my meditations when opening the Bible to have my attention drawn to fulsome praise of earthly potentates. Y. H. S.

BOSTON NOTES.

"Miss Million" as a Real Person—Lives of Whistler and Stevenson—"Plantation Sketches."

NORTH CAROLINA, less familiar ground to readers of reminiscence and fiction than its four boundary States, is the scene of "Plantation Sketches," by Mrs. Mary Devereux, a volume soon to appear with the imprint of Messrs. Houghton, Mifflin & Co. Its preface is a "Letter to My Grandchildren," and its chapter titles are "Plantation Life," "Going to the Plantation," "My Own Early Homes," "Two Bob Whites," "Little Dave," "Hog Feeders' Day," "Junior Reserve," and "War Reminiscences."

⁂

The readers of the periodical in which Mr. Gelett Burgess's "A Little Sister of Destiny" was first published retain an extraordinary proportion of their faith in the printed word, and accepted his benevolent heroine as a real person, appealing to her in the most artless way. One wanted her old frocks to make over, and obligingly sent measurements that the question of possible fit might be decided; one desired help for an Arizona paralytic, others were content to ask for money. As for those who wished to dictate the course of the story, their like has never failed from the world since they vainly besought Richardson to permit Clarissa to live, and they have aided Mr. Burgess by suggesting ways in which Miss Million might be more useful to her fellow-creatures. The book itself comes to-morrow; but those who buy novels belong to a class quite distinct from that of the readers of continued stories, and no new letters are expected.

⁂

Some day there is to be a volume of "Sunnybrook" stories, with Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm as the heroine of each. Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin will write some of them this Summer, possibly while staying in England, possibly after she returns to her Maine home in June. The first two stories she read at the Buxton (Me.) church last Summer.

⁂

Mrs. H. D. Pitman of St. Louis, author of "Belle of the Blue Grass Country," now printing by the C. M. Clark Company, is the author of "Americans of Gentle Blood and Their Ancestors."

⁂

Messrs. L. C. Page & Co. have sent a second edition of "The Count at Harvard" to press, although the first was larger than is customary, and the booksellers report that the undergraduate seems to have accepted it as a college guidebook to Harvard.

⁂

Among this firm's Autumn announcements is "The Treasure Trail," by Mr. Frank L. Pollock, a story of gold bullion stolen from the Boer Government, carried off in a steamer, and sunk in the Mozambique Channel. It has been the current impression that when the Boer Government fled from Africa it took good care that where its heart was there should its treasure be also, but in this story two search parties attempt to find the sunken gold, and success is a matter of but a very short time.

⁂

The children are to have a novel fairy story next Winter, and, inasmuch as it begins with a motor car, it will succeed if they be like their fathers and mothers. In "The Enchanted Automobile," the author, Dr. Mary J. Safford, tells of a discontented Prince and Princess whose fairy godmother sent them to fairyland to see their old friends, and lo! Princess Charming keeps a shop for the sale of the gems which fall from her lips; Little Red Riding Hood has trained the wolf to dance and to perform tricks in the street for her support, and all are happy. So the little Prince and Princess go home to be happy also, having learned that work is the secret of content.

⁂

A sign that interest in the Celtic revival is felt in this country is seen in Mr. R. G. Badger's announcement of "The Jewels of King Art." This is a third century poem dealing with the King at whose command the "Psalter of Tara" was compiled, and the author is Mr. James Connolly.

⁂

Mr. Frederick Chamberlin's "Around the World in Ninety Days" contains among its 350 photographs taken by the author some pictures of Vesuvius in eruption, but the author found the Orient more interesting than Europe, and Arabia, Ceylon, and Egypt are especial favorites with him. An interview with Aguinaldo and a chapter about Queen Liliuokalani, making a supplement to her own "Hawaii's Story," form part of the book, and the Midway Islands are described in detail. This volume is to be bound in holiday fashion, the first of this class issued by the C. M. Clark Company. Mr. Naylor's "The Kentuckian" is selling very well, and "Quincy Adams Sawyer" has gone into another new edition, bringing its sales close upon 350,000.

⁂

It is some years since Mr. John C. Gray, since 1883 Royall Professor of Law at Harvard University, wrote his "The Rule Against Perpetuities," and the second edition, now announced by Messrs. Little, Brown & Co., will contain 3,600 cases, or about twice as many as the original book, and also about 150 additional pages of comment.

⁂

Three of Mr. E. Phillips Oppenheim's novels, "The Betrayal," "The Yellow Crayon," and "The Traitors," have been transferred from the list of Messrs. Dodd, Mead & Co., to that of Messrs. Little, Brown & Co., who in time will probably acquire all his works.

⁂

Mr. Haldane Macfall's "Whistler" comes from Messrs. John W. Luce & Co. this week, accompanied by Miss Eve Blantyre Simpson's "Stevenson," illustrated by a portrait of R. L. S. in his advocate's wig, as a teller of tales, and lastly by the portrait painted in Samoa by Count Nerli, now belonging to Mrs. Turnbull. Both authors have caught something of the spirit of their subjects. Mr. Macfall defies any reader not to see that he is eccentric, and Miss Simpson delights in all things that are lovely and of good report in her subject, and packs the story with characteristic phrases from Stevenson's work, and with tender epithets coined by his loving friends. The covers of the two volumes, one stamped with a vessel in gallant trim, the other with tricksy butterflies, are pleasantly significant. STEPHENSON BROWNE.

AN ANCIENT MARINER.

UNCLE WILLIAM. The Man Who Was Shif'less. By Jeannette Lee. Pp. 296. New York: The Century Company. $1.

IT is good to know Uncle William, especially as he, like the book he is in, is short, sweet, and to the point. He is an old sea Captain, now a fisherman, and lives in some little island somewhere up the coast. He is "shif'less" in the sense that he cannot understand why he should do more than he has to, but that which he has to do he does with all his might.

He does not understand art or music, but from the following confession of his it may be seen that he understands something a great deal better than either:

> Seems kind o' rediculous, don't it, when the Lord made a world as good as this one, not to enjoy it some? I ust to think about folks that was hungry till my stummick clean caved in. I ust to eat my dinner like it was sawdust, for fear I'd get a little comfort out of it, while somebody, somewhere, was starvin'—little childern, like enough. That was al'ays the hardest part of it—little childern. * * * Then it come over me, all of a sudden, what a big job I'd tackled, and I jest turned it over to the Lord, then and there. And all the next day I kep' kind o' thinking about it out here on the rocks—how't He'd took a thousand years—mebbe 'twas more; good long spell, they say—to get rocks ready for folks to live on—jest the rocks! And like enough He knew what He was plannin' to do and didn't expect me to finish it all up for Him in fo'—five years. Since then I've been leavin' it to Him more—takin' a hand when I could, but payin' more attention to livin'. I sort o' reckon that's what He made us for—to live.

That is all. The story which Jeannette Lee has written is a simple, pleasing one, and with Uncle William in it it will take care of itself. It is good to know Uncle William.

The American Nation, Vol. XIV.

"The Rise of the New West" is the title of Volume XIV. of the Harpers "American Nation: A History," edited by Albert Bushnell Hart. The author of this volume is Frederick Jackson Turner, Ph. D., Professor of American History in the University of Wisconsin. The period involved is that between the years 1815 and 1830—the time of adjustment, that is, between the end of the War of 1812 and the triumph of Jacksonian Democracy. Prof. Turner insists upon the importance of economic and social forces on the course of National development, and considers the bearing of conditions in New England, the Middle States, the South, and the West upon the flux of affairs. Among the topics treated are, of course, the panic of 1819, the Missouri Compromise and the Monroe Doctrine, the tariff disputes, the differences about internal improvements, and so on.

Collection of Royal Books.

Charles Scribner's Sons have recently acquired a collection of forty-two books from the libraries of French royalties, extending in unbroken succession from Henry II. to Napoleon III. The works, which include many valuable and interesting examples of bookmanship, are in a fine condition of preservation. There are a number of Prayer Books, including two from the library of Marie de Medici, one that belonged to Marguerite de Valois and another that was probably in the hands of Charles IX., the author of the [illegible] of St. Barth[illegible].

THE WINNING OF CANADA.

MR. WOOD'S history, "The Fight for Canada," (issued in the United States by Little Brown & Co.) is an interesting and praiseworthy book. It is largely a plea for the Navy League, of which its author is a Canadian Secretary, but, in spite of this fact, is a very fair statement of the campaign which ended in the capture of Quebec by the British. The author is a devout and on the whole intelligent follower of Capt. Mahan, and the book is an attempt to show the influence of sea power on the British campaigns in Canada during the Seven Years' war. So far as he merely emphasizes the aid given by the fleet in Wolfe's campaign Mr. Wood's book justifies itself. It is in its insistence on Capt. Mahan's theory of the greater value of the navy in history than of the army that the "Imperial Navy League" character of the volume becomes too clear.

The book details the history of what its author calls "Pitt's Imperial War" as it was waged in Canada, with chapters on the men of both France and England who ruled in that province—Vaudreuil, Bigot, Montcalm, on the French side; Anson, Saunders, and Wolfe, on the British, and tells of the siege and capture of Québec, the author working up fascinating climaxes in the last two chapters—the fall of Quebec, and the fall of New France. The notes collected at the end of the book are as interesting as the history, and throw strong side lights on that. A bibliography and an excellent index add to the value of the book for reference. Maps and portraits of the two contending Generals, who in death were not divided, are a further useful feature of the volume.

Early Caldwell Issues.

The H. M. Caldwell Company of Boston announces for early publication the following books: "My Lady's Point of View," a sort of diary for the débutante, designed by A. J. Iorio, who has also compiled "My Graduation," which is for the facts of a girl's life in high school or college; "Over the Nuts and Wine," a small volume of toasts and bon mots, compiled by James C. Harvey, author of "In Bohemia;" "The Jingle of a Jap," a book for children, illustrated and written by Clara B. Thurston, each page of which is to be printed in colors, the whole to be bound in Japanese cloth; "Louis's Salads and Chafing Dishes," by Louis Muckensturm, a new cook book, with designs on each page; "Recollections of a Gold Cure Graduate," by Newton Newkirk, a new book of fun after the manner of "The Log of a Water Wagon" and "Reflections of the Morning After"; "The Value of Love," in which the late Frederic Lawrence Knowles gathered all he thought worthy in the writings of others which dealt with the value of love. Mrs. Louise Chandler Moulton has written the introduction to the book. Two more Caldwell books are: "Cigarettes in Fact and Fancy," by John Bain, Jr., which is to be added to the series including "Tobacco Leaves," "Pipe and Pouch," &c., and "The Wishbone Boat," by Mrs. Alice C. D. Riley, which will appear in the Pleasant Street Series for children, with pictures and decorations by L. J. Bridgman.

The Temple Classics.

Two new books are being added to The Temple Classics series which the Macmillan Company publishes here. They are: Browning's "Dramatis Personae," edited by Miss Marian Edwardes, who also wrote the biographical note; and Palgrave's "Golden Treasury of the Best Songs and Lyrics," edited by Edward Hutton. The present edition of this standard collection contains many new poems which Palgrave would surely have added, the editor believes, had he lived, or even compiled his book later. Among the new selections are some poems by Tennyson, Matthew Arnold, Browning, Campion, and his anonymous contemporaries, and Spenser's "Epithalamion."

Camp Life.

Charles Scribner's Sons will issue by the first of next month the new book by Charles Stedman Hanks of Boston, author of "Hints to Golfers," entitled "Camp Kits and Camp Life." Fifty-three illustrations have been provided for the volume to emphasize certain points discussed by Mr. Hanks and showing scenes of life in the woods.

Chambers's New Novel.

In about a month the Appletons expect to issue Robert W. Chambers's new novel, "The Tracer of Lost Persons," upon which the author is putting the finishing touches.

BROKE of COVENDEN

By

JOHN COLLIS SNAITH

A remarkable novel that makes the fiction of the year pale in comparison. Mr. Snaith has produced a book that holds its own among those of Meredith, Dickens and Thackeray. It is the story of an English country family of the present day.

¶ VLADIMIR KOROLENKO, the great Russian novelist, is under indictment for inciting to the murder of Russian State Councillor Filonoff. His Open Letter to Filonoff, "A NATION KNEELING AT THE CANNON'S MOUTH," was followed in 10 days by Filonoff's assassination. The letter is printed for the first time in English, in the April number of LIBERTY (the pioneer organ of Anarchism). In power and significance it rivals Zola's famous "J'Accuse," and reveals as no cable dispatches can the tragic situation of the Russian people. TEN CENTS, at BENJ. R. ALL ESSAY MAGAZINE.

◆

Further Contributions to the Interesting Discussion Touching a Periodical of That Sort.

I.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

I HAVE been very much interested in the letters called forth by Mr. Moses's suggestion that an "all-essay magazine" be launched in this country. The scheme thus far seems to have met with no little favor, which is somewhat astonishing to me, since I had not known how many people who read the current periodicals are true lovers of the essay. As one of the editors of a magazine published in New York, what I have to say may prove of some interest to you.

The Smart Set, since its inception over six years ago, has always printed one, and often two, essays each month. The publication of fiction and poetry has constituted its chief bid for approval, but it was felt that there were a sufficient number of persons who would care to read a thoughtful or a clever essay to justify the appearance of one in every issue. The plan has seemed to meet with universal favor. The chief difficulty encountered was the fact that America thus far has produced so few good essayists that to procure even one meritorious article each month—only twelve a year, bear in mind—has proved a hard task! Miss Repplier, Prof. M. F. Egan, Alfred Henry Lewis, Mr. Saltus, Mr. Hawthorne, Mrs. Cruger, (Julien Gordon,) Mr. Huneker, and a few other American authors have contributed papers to the magazine, but these delightful essayists could not be asked to supply everything we cared to use; and it was therefore necessary to invite several English and Canadian essayists to submit their work. Mr. Le Gallienne, Mr. Carman, Sir Gilbert Parker, and Mr. Symons were represented. Even in England, where the essay enjoys a far greater vogue than in this country, contributions to this field of literature are by no means easy to secure—which brings me to my point.

I am inclined to believe that an "all-essay magazine" might have some measure of success—if the essays could be obtained! I do not include in this statement the purely critical essays, such as those written by Mr. W. C. Brownell and Mr. Christian Brinton. It may seem astonishing on first thought that our country is so barren of even semi-good essayists, but such is the solemn fact. Beyond Miss Guiney, Mr. Martin, Mr. Hubbard, Mr. Mabie, Prof. Peck, Prof. Matthews, and the few writers already mentioned, whom have we?

Mr. Moses's idea, if carried out, would be a step in the right direction if we wish to encourage the production of the essay in its best and highest form. No one would be happier to see it carried out than I; but at the present time it seems to me that it is wholly unpractical.

CHARLES HANSON TOWNE.
New York, April 12, 1906.

II.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

Ruskin tells us of the sentimental but hazy traveler who had journeyed all day along the shore of a world-famous water and the desired goal of his wanderings only to inquire at evening: "But where is Lake Leman?" It has often been given to the present writer to hunt afar for that which lay quite beseechingly near at hand, to treasure a single wild flower brought from a distance only to find a "happy family" of the same so-denominated "rare" plant blooming in a home field or by a home wood border.

I have remarked the "crying need" for an "all-essay magazine," as voiced by various of your correspondents. Are they aware that they are all the time traveling by the Lake Leman of their earnest quest? For, issued quarterly by The Gorham Press, Boston, comes, as it were, "with pilgrim steps in amice gray"—in gray save for its deservedly red-letter name legend—a prepossessing magazine called Poet Lore. This magazine is veritably an "ecumenical council" of literati, as a survey, for instance, of the Winter number will readily show. Here, entire and most skillfully translated, is Maxim Gorki's "Night's Lodging," and there are further translations, as skillfully touched, from Verlaine, from Gustave Kahn, from Valdes; while our Aryan kin from the sunrise may receive representation in a paraphrase or adaptation by Ameen Ribani. Here is a fine critical estimate of "A. E.," the Neo-Celtic Mystic"; here a sparkling monograph on Martial, prince of epigrammists; there a consideration of Henry James, the artist; elsewhere discussion of the critical variants of the "Melancholy Dane"; several clever and enlightening pages of "German Criticism," and so on. True, this already existing "all-essay magazine" includes also some flights in verse, but these have an indubitable touch of the recherche which, indeed, makes them essays in the sense of their being unique ventures of Pegasus—not readily to be met with elsewhere. Pray, why should not our "election light on Poet Lore"?

III.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

I am delighted to see that an all-essay magazine is being discussed in your columns. Such a magazine I have long wished to see. I do not, however, think it necessary to set quite so high a standard for the material which should appear in it as do some of your correspondents. I think each issue should contain some essays of high literary order. The rest of its contents could well be made up of short essays having a worthy content even if not dressed in a style of superlative excellence. I believe such a plan would tend to make the magazine a success. I am fully persuaded that such a magazine would pay at least fairly well.

IV.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

We have read with much interest the discussion during the past few weeks of the all-essay magazine, but it seems to us that there is no special need for a new venture in this financially perilous direction. For seventeen years Poet Lore has held out open hands for essays of genuine value, and the demand has always been greater than the supply. During the whole course of its existence Poet Lore has been conducted with no eye upon the financial returns, and as a result has achieved the distinction of having maintained a higher literary standard than any other American periodical. The task of living up to one's sub-title, "A Quarterly Magazine of Letters," has been no slight one. The writers and readers of essays will receive a most hearty welcome from Poet Lore.

AUTHORS IN PUBLIC EYE

ALONZO ROTHSCHILD, author of "Lincoln: Master of Men," received his early education in the College of the City of New York and was graduated from New York University. After selling The Jewelers' Weekly, which he owned and edited for many years, he moved to East Foxboro, Mass., and took a post-graduate course at Harvard. He has been studying American history, especially the period of the civil war, for the last decade.

Olive Ransom, author of "A Woman's Heart," is the pseudonym of a well-known New York woman, who has written other books under another name, and is now living the life of a recluse in this city.

The Rev. Charles W. Gordon has received the degree of Doctor of Divinity, a rare honor, from his Alma Mater, Knox College of Toronto, Canada. He is the author, as "Ralph Connor," of "The Sky Pilot" and other novels. It is an interesting fact that the hood used in conferring the degree is the one used in bestowing the first D. D. from this college fifty years ago upon the late Dr. J. M. King, father-in-law of Dr. Gordon.

Charles F. Holder, the well-known sportsman and author of "The Log of a Sea Angler" and "Life in the Open," founded the Tuna Club and was its first President. It was he, too, who discovered tuna fishing with a common rod.

Harrison Garfield Rhodes, author of "The Lady and the Ladder," is a native of Cleveland, Ohio, and was educated at Western Reserve and Harvard Universities. Most of his time is spent in traveling. His novel was begun in an old English manor in a Surrey village, continued in a New York hotel, and completed in a cottage at Ormond, Fla.

Joseph Lindon Smith of Boston has received the Beck Prize of $100 awarded by the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts to his picture, "Study of a Chair Found in the Tomb of Queen Tii's Parents, Egypt," which was reproduced as an illustration for Henry Copley Greene's article on "A Great Discovery in Egypt" in the November (1905) Century.

P. R., Massachusetts.—I should like very much to have you identify for me the characters in "A Modern Symposium" by the author of the "Chinese Official's Letters." Some of them are evident, but I should be much gratified to have the complete list, if possible.

The identification of Remenham and Mendoza as Gladstone and Disraeli is merely apparent. Mr. Dickinson invented his characters, and gave them touches of reality; but we doubt if he had real persons in mind as their originals. Of course every reader sees the Disraeli in Mendoza, yet Mendoza is not really Disraeli. One assumes Remenham to be Gladstone simply because he is described as Mendoza's rival. Possibly Lord Cantilupe—practically a real title, by the way—may be called the Earl of Derby, but the persons of the book have only suggestions of real people.

W. D. RYAN, Albany.—Where can I obtain the following: "Creed," a poem by Mary Ashley Townsend? It begins: "If I should die to-night, and you should kiss my eyelids as I lie." I think it was written just preceding the civil war. "The Phantom Army," a civil war poem; "When My Ship Comes Home to Me"; this, as I recall, deals with a little child, doll in arms, who sits in a cottage doorway waiting for "her ship" to "come home to me." I do not recall whether it was published in The Independent in the early sixties, or in The Waverley Magazine in the early eighties. Emmet's "Lullaby"; I do not know if I can find this in a song book or in some stray publication: Fawcett's "Lines to an Oriole;" and "My Rosary," a poem.

Mrs. Townsend's poems are published by the J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia; the poem is in Slason Thompson's "The Humble Poets." The next two and the last we do not place. Emmet's "Lullaby" is in "The Most Popular Home Songs," just published, and Fawcett's "To an Oriole" is in "Bryant's Library of Poetry and Song" and in "Songs of Nature."

C. H. JINNEY, Brooklyn.—Please add to former favors by stating whether Wilkie Collins ever wrote a novel with the title "The Lost River," or "The Guilty River," or anything approximating? Also whether "Where Macdonald sits, there is the head of the table," which I find in Emerson's "The American Scholar," is a case of Homer nodding, or am I wrong in thinking that McGregor is correct?

Collins wrote a novel, "The Guilty River," which is still published in England. Emerson was always "nodding" in matters involving fact. The usual proverb has "MacGregor"; we have heard "MacNab" declared entitled to the headship. The MacGregors were proscribed at one time, and the members of the clan took different names; it is quite possible that MacDonald and MacNab were MacGregors and that the different proverbs mean the same thing.

F. B. LAZIER, Seattle, Washington.—Can you find the author of this passage for me:

"A patriot was ascending the scaffold. The beautiful Clemanthe, whose requited love was all that made his doom unwelcome, knelt at his feet, and, raising her lovely eyes, murmured: 'Shall we meet again?'

"Looking into her face, he said: 'I have asked that dreadful question of the hills that look eternal; of the clear streams that flow onward; of the stars in whose azure fields my raised spirit hath walked in glory. All are dumb. But when I look on thy living face, I feel there is something in the love that mantles through it that can never fail or perish. We shall meet again, Clemanthe.'"

It was given to me years ago as from J. D. Richardson's "Romance of Clemanthe."

We find no trace of any "Romance of Clemanthe" or of any J. D. Richardson—Allibone mentions no such author. We incline to think that this is all there is of the "Romance," that this, like so many of Scott's extracts from "Old Plays," was composed for an especial occasion.

A. M. HUGER, Hendersonville, N. C.—The Indian name of Kennesaw, a small mountain in North Georgia, means, I believe, "bed" or "couch," in Cherokee at least, which is the only tongue I know anything of. The Cherokee, however, is not only agglutinative, but contains, I think, but one labial; many of its words therefore to our ears are not only cacophoneus, but almost inarticulate; most of our Indian names are, therefore, so much corrupted to adapt them to English ears that original meanings can often only be guessed at. Properly perverted, however, they are much better adapted to our topographical nomenclature than the usually very commonplace and unmeaning English ones now in general use.

Mrs. J. C. HALL, Wallingford, Conn.—On March 31 Anna Ellis inquired for a little song, "To the West." It is in "Tara's Harp," a school song book used in the early 60s. If she will send me her address I shall be pleased to copy it for her.

G. W. GODDARD, Essex, Conn.—The poem asked for by Whitehead Phitz, Salisbury, N. C., with the refrain "Sail on! Sail on! and on!" is "The Port of Ships," by Joaquin Miller. It may be found in his complete poems and also in "The Golden Treasury of American Songs and Lyrics."

E. N. ROOT, New York.—"W. J.," New York, misquotes Cowper's poem "On receipt of my mother's picture." The lines, properly quoted, are:

"But me, scarce hoping to attain that rest,
Always from port withheld, always distress'd;
Me howling blasts drive devious, tempest tossed,
Sails ripp'd, seams opening wide, and compass lost,
And day by day some current's thwarting force

R. C. HARRISON, San Francisco.—The message of Prof. Morse to which J. M. Parker refers in your issue of March 10 may have been suggested by the following incident, which is given at Page 375 of Barber's "Connecticut Historical Collections," published in 1836, viz.: During the Revolutionary war, while some British troops were descending a hill near Danbury, one of the inhabitants rode to the summit of an eminence, and, turning about as if addressing an army behind him, shouted in a loud voice, "Halt! the whole universe; break off by kingdoms!"

B. A. K.—Where may I find a poem beginning:

"A nervous old gentleman tired of trade,
By which though it seems he a fortune had made,
Took a house, 'twixt two sheds at the skirts of the town,
Which he meant at his leisure to buy and pull down"?

This is the anonymous poem called "The Removal." It is in "Choice Selections," Part 21, and in Spencer's Comic Speeches.

WILLIAM ABBATT, New York.—Some months ago inquiry was made to a cannon called the "Old Sow." This was a cannon placed on the summit of the Short Hills, N. J., during the Revolution, to call out the minute men for defense in case of need. Alarms were sent over the country by signal fires on top of various hills, and the cannon was also used for the same purpose. The site of the signal station has been marked with a bronze tablet by the New Jersey Society of the Sons of the American Revolution. It stands on Hobart Hill, Summit.

READER, New York.—Who was the author of the following lines:

"La vie est vaine;
Un peu d'amour,
Un peu de haine—
Et puis—bonjour!"

This is the French version of the lines which Du Maurier used as the ending of "Trilby." He is said to have written these in English and afterward to have put them into French.

W. W. G., New York.—Some time between 1736 and 1742 "The History of Francis Eugene, Prince of Savoy," was published in London, and in 1742 a second edition, 12mo, was issued. The book purports to give an account of "The Military Transactions of Above Thirty Campaigns, Made by His Serene Highness in Hungary, Italy, Germany, and the Low Countries," &c., and was written "by an English officer who served under his Highness in the last war with France." Can you inform me who the author was and as to the value historically of the work?

The first edition was 1741; the second 1742. The book is not named among the best lives of Prince Eugene. Its author has kept his anonymity; Halkett and Laing do not name the book or its author in their Dictionary of Anonymous Literature, and the British Museum catalogue gives no original for the "English Officer."

A. S., Philadelphia.—In one of the numbers of The Lark, if I am not greatly mistaken, there were printed some verses by Adam Lindsay Gordon which I do not find in his collected poems, and in fact cannot lay hands on anywhere. They tell the story of a man who sells his horse for the sake of a woman who proves faithless—something of that sort. Can you help me to find a copy of these verses?

The poem is not in The Lark; Gordon killed himself in 1870, and The Lark was published twenty-five years later. We do not identify the poem.

D. M., Philadelphia.—What novels are there in which finance as an academic question, or money as something to be sought for, is the central theme?

The "Wall Street Stories" and "The Golden Flood," by Edwin Lefevre; H. R. Chamberlain's "Six Thousand Tons of Gold"; there are others. Almost all the magazines have had stories of financial operations of late.

J. B. T., Ellicott City, Md.—Can you give me the origin of the Scotch form of Kingsley's "Sands of Dee"? It is the version with which I am most familiar, and yet am informed Kingsley did not so write it. By "Scotch poem" I mean "o'" for "of," "wi'" for "with," and "amang" for "among"—all of which, except the last, are in Alden's Universal Literature.

The "Sands of Dee," as published in Kingsley's poems in 1856, had the "Scotch" form; in the edition of 1882 it had the "English" or non-Scotch form. It would seem that both versions were the poet's own, and the non-Scotch that preferred finally.

H. E. W., Sagaponack, N. Y.—Would you kindly tell me where I can find the poems, "The Legend of the Organ Builder," by Julia C. R. Dorr; "Saved and Savior," by Rose Hartwick Thorpe, and a song, "Half-past Nine," by Nevins?

Mrs. Dorr's poems are published by Charles Scribner's Sons, this city; Mrs. Thorpe's by the Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Company of Boston. The song probably can be obtained from some music publisher; we do not identify it.

SUBSCRIBER.—Can you tell me where I can find a poem (if such it may be called) popular forty years ago, beginning thus:

"'Will you walk into my parlor,'
Said the spider to the fly."

This is Mary Howitt's poem, (for so it is called,) "The Spider and the Fly." It is in any collection of her poems, in the "Book of Verse for Children," in Volume I. of Bliss Carman's "World's Best Poetry," and in many other collections.

GEORGE C. EYRICH, Jackson, Miss.—To decide a controversy please tell us if Flotow incorporated "The Last Rose of Summer," music and words complete, in "Martha" or not.

The words of "The Last Rose of Summer" are by Thomas Moore; the music is by an unknown composer; Flotow incorporated both in "Martha."

K. S. H., Newark, N. J.—In E. V. Lucas's "Biography of Charles Lamb" I find the statement that "Charles Lamb's library is now in America." Can you locate same for me?

See the third appendix to the life; "Charles Lamb's Books."

Appeals to Readers.

H. WEBSTER, Williamstown, Mass.—Can you tell who is now the present publisher of The Museum of Antiquity, a subscription book issued in 1880 by the Standard Publishing House, New York, and written by L. W. Yaggy and T. L. Haines? If the present publisher cannot be found, what are the present addresses of the authors, supposing them alive?

C. E. DANIEL, Monterey, Mass.—Can you give me any idea where the following verse comes from, who the author is, or if it is followed by any others:

"Will the passion you're so rich in Light a fire in the kitchen,
Or the little god of love
Turn the spit, spit, spit?"

JOHN B. TABB.—I should be glad to know the words of two songs, familiar to me in childhood, of which I can now recall only the following: I. "Poor Bettie Martin, tiptoe, tiptoe! Poor Bettie Martin tiptoes fine!" II. "Old Joe Tatterdap, Old Joe Tatterdap, sold his hat from off his head to buy his wife a loaf of bread."

W. P., New York: "Will you kindly tell me the author of the verse beginning:

"Read the rede of the old root tree,
Here be trust fast, opinion free," &c.

A Music Novel.

Very shortly Moffat, Yard & Co. will publish "Where Speech Ends," a novel dealing with the Chicago Orchestra, by Robert Haven Schauffler. Henry Van Dyke has written a prelude introducing the narrative. The author is a recent graduate of Princeton. He has written for the magazines stories about music and musicians as well as essays on this subject. He writes from experience, having been for a short period a "professional."

◆

The Country Cottage.

The new volume in the series of Country Handbooks, bearing the imprint of the John Lane Company, is "The Country Cottage," by George L. Morris and Esther Wood. Such matters as the plans and situation and building of the cottage are discussed, as well as ventilation, rooms, drainage, roofs, wallpapers, fences, &c. The illustrations include seventy-five views and plans.

Pottery.

Charles Scribner's Sons are publishing in the Library of Applied Arts "French Pottery and Porcelain," by Henri Frantz. The history of the subject is treated of from the sixteenth century down to modern times. Some of the seventy illustrations in the book are in the colors of typical examples of ware. The volume will shortly be followed by "Sheffield Plate," by B. Wyllie.

◆

Steffens's Book.

McClure, Phillips & Co. announce that the title of Lincoln Steffens's new book, originally called "Enemies of the Republic," has been changed to "The Shame of the States," to make it uniform with his earlier "The Shame of the Cities."

◆

Mr. Dole's Poetry.

Moffat, Yard & Co. are to bring out this month "The Building of the Organ" and "Onward, a Vision of Peace," two "symphonic" poems, in one volume, by Nathan Haskell Dole. The book is brought out to meet the popular demand for these pieces of verse, which are the invention of Mr. Dole.

THE PUBLISHERS.

A New Jane Austen Book—Sir Walter Besant's "Survey of London"—A New Director of the John Lane Company.

CURRENT interest is reverting to "A Levantine Log Book," by Jerome Hart, for the reason that this volume contains in illustrations and text a large amount of material dealing with the devastated district around Vesuvius. It also has chapters on Malta, Greece, Constantinople, Smyrna, Jaffa, Jerusalem, Alexandria, Cairo, Thebes, Luxor, Assouan, and Upper Egypt. There are twoscore pictures in the book, reproduced from original photographs. "A Levantine Log Book" is published in this country by Longmans, Green & Co.

Rossiter Johnson's new book, "The Story of the Constitution of the United States," is published (at $1) by William Ritchie of 70 Fifth Avenue. Mr. Rossiter shows that our Constitution was a slow growth, and that after the ideas it represents were formed, its execution was the work of a hundred strenuous days. Its heredity and its birth form a most interesting story, not heretofore told completely in any one volume. Mr. Johnson has brought together the facts, sifted the debates, and suggested comparisons and analogies in such a way as to present the complete picture in small compass.

"The Mechanic," a "business novel," by Allan McIvor, is soon to be published by William Ritchie. Allan McIvor's previous novel, "Overlord," was popular. The new book deals with the relation of trusts to the community.

Another book dealing with the author of "Emma," &c., is being published. It is "A Memoir of Jane Austen," by her nephew, J. E. Austen Leigh, which the Macmillan Company is issuing in the Eversley Series. The volume includes "Lady Susan," the canceled chapter of "Persuasion," and the fragment of a story entitled "The Watsons." Besides the frontispiece portrait of Jane Austen there is a fac-simile reproduction of a letter by her. The memoir first appeared alone in 1869, and, in its present form, in 1871. It was then reprinted in 1872, 1879, 1882, and 1886. The present publishers took it over in 1898 and reprinted it in 1901 and 1904, and now add it to the Eversley Series.

Henry Holt & Co. will publish at the end of the month "The Election of Senators," by George H. Haynes, author of "Representation in State Legislatures." The book is one of the American Public Problem Series. Will the magazine "exposés" have destroyed the Senate before it appears? it is asked.
